Construction begins on Poly Canyon Village

Construction work is beginning on the 2,700-bed Poly Canyon Village with the clearing and grading of 30 acres of land just north of Brizzolara Creek and an access road to the new complex. The first phase of the project is expected to be completed by fall 2008. Clark Construction of Bethesda, Md., has moved construction trailers to campus as they prepare to begin work. A formal ground-breaking is planned for later this spring. The design of Poly Canyon Village provides for three residential village or neighborhood areas to house approximately 2,700 students. The complex includes two parking structures totaling 1,900 parking spaces, commercial "village" areas with retail and food-service space, and a recreation center with a swimming pool. "The project offers a unique opportunity to create a 21st-century living and learning community that will bring students back on campus," said Vice President of Administration and Finance Larry Kelley. Last May, CSU trustees voted to issue $299 million in bonds for construction of the project. The price includes the cost to relocate College of Agriculture facilities, upgrade the electrical substation in the area, and upgrade sewer, water, roads and bridges. Rent from future student-tenants will repay the bond financing, according to Kelley. With about 3,500 students currently living on campus, the project will almost double that number, bringing the total number of students living on campus to 6,200. Updates on the progress of the project will be posted on the Cal Poly Facilities Planning Web site at <http://www.facilities.calpoly.edu/homefp.htm>.

State Energy Commission commends Solar CalPoly

The California Energy Commission issued a resolution commending the Solar CalPoly team for representing California and "brilliantly" competing against 17 universities from the United States, Canada and Europe at last fall's Solar Decathlon in Washington, D.C. Cal Poly finished third in the contest to design, build and operate a livable and energy-efficient solar-powered home. The university has been awarded a $100,000 grant to participate in the 2007 event.

Dana Foundation awards $25,000 for art education

The Dana Foundation has awarded $25,000 to Cal Poly's Central Coast Center for Arts Education to develop and implement a new initiative to support theater-arts education in rural public schools. Performing artists and teachers are being sought to help create the year-long program, titled "Illuminating Shadows: Introducing Storytelling and Shadow Puppetry to a New Generation." The project's five primary goals include:

- Training five theater artists to work as resident-artists
- Using storytelling and shadow puppetry as the basis for lessons
- Offering workshops for the artists and rural school teachers
- Providing opportunities for the artists to demonstrate the lessons they prepare at school
- Placing the artists at the five schools by fall 2006

For more information, contact Susan Duffy in Liberal Studies at ext. 6-2326 or sduffy@calpoly.edu.

Professors help produce book for English teachers

Two faculty members teamed with a consultant for the San Luis Obispo County Office of Education to produce a book that addresses the varied instructional needs of high school English students. Jeannine Richison in the College of Liberal Arts and Anita Hernandez in the College of Education, along with consultant Marcia Carter from the county's AVID (Advancement Via Individual Determination) program, wrote "Theme-Sets for Secondary Students: How to Scaffold Core Literature," to be published in February by Heinemann Books.

Market on Mondays

The Cal Poly Student Produce Market is open every Monday from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. behind the Cerro Vista Community Center on Cerro Vista Circle, just up the hill from the entrance to Poly Canyon. Stop by for the best of Cal Poly meats, fruits and vegetables, plants and flowers. For more information go to www.sophomoresuccess.calpoly.edu.
