C. Provost’s Office: (Detweiler) Cal Poly has cleared its budget deficit and has small operating reserves on many divisions. The statewide budget has finally stabilized after 3 years of cuts but it’s not getting better in a hurry. For the next 5 years Cal Poly will receive a 2.5% budget increase with a large portion aimed at summer quarter enrollment which is expected to be 25% of total fall enrollment. The Centennial Campaign, which original 7-year goal was to raise $225 million concluded raising $264 million. The student housing north Project has now attained full approval and will begin construction in summer or early fall quarter. LEED certification will be pursued. The faculty/staff housing project will have 69 townhouse-style properties available in approximately 18 months and will be completed without state resources. In regards to the Master Plan: Engineering III is completed, the Science Center, a $100 million project, will have higher priority next year, and $15 million have been obtained for renovations of Mustang Stadium with the first phase beginning in the summer. Faculty recruitment is extremely important in sustaining the quality of the University but the most difficult part is the ability to provide adequate professional development for the faculty. There is no single solution to increase the graduation rates but the first move is to make academic administrators aware of the current rates and work on improving them to reach the goal of 70%. President Baker has provided leadership to encourage students to pursue careers in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics. A site has been identified, half of the necessary funding has been located, and a plan is being developed for the technology park which is a self-supporting project. CMS/PeopleSoft is on target and within budget. Students didn’t approve a referendum to increase the ASI and Rec Center fees, so this issue will have to be revisited in the years ahead.
