Environmental Review

J. Donald Hughes, Editor
Department of History
University of Denver
Denver, Colorado 80208

An international journal, published by the American Society for Environmental History, that seeks understanding of human ecology through the perspectives of history and the humanities. ER encourages dialogue between the disciplines on every aspect of the present and past relationship of humankind to the natural environment.

Recent issues have included articles on Mexico, the Netherlands, China, Iceland, Spain, Sweden, and the U.S.S.R., as well as the U.S.A. ER's breadth across fields of environmental study is as wide as its geographic spread, including literature, the arts, the environmental sciences, philosophy, and an inclusive range of historical interests. It is the intention of the editors that anyone interested in environmental studies will want to read ER.

Subscription fees for the U.S. & Canada: Individual, $16 per year; Institutional, $20; Student, $10; International, $20; Patron, $100; and Contributor, $50.

New Methods

P.O. Box 22605
San Francisco, California 94122

New Methods, The Journal of Animal Health Technology is the only independent journal for animal health technicians, AHT students, and veterinary assistants. It is the national media vehicle to reach those who make purchasing decisions for veterinary hospitals, universities, schools, and research facilities.
New Methods is published monthly by a Certified Animal Health Technician (Ronald S. Lippert) and distributed nationally. Editorial emphasis is directed toward key issues and accomplishments concerning animal health technicians. The nucleus of each issue includes letters from readers, wildlife, school programs, state and national issues, book reviews, and a free classified section for AHTs and veterinarians.

New Methods is active and committed. We participate in local, state, and national meetings of importance to Animal Health Technicians.

Annual subscription (12 issues) for just $18.00.

WILDLIFE is a monthly magazine, the only one of its type on sale to the general public.

Editorial Policy
Our articles range from the familiar to the exotic. Subjects covered include features on individual species of birds, mammals and plants, animal behaviour, interviews with leading wildlife personalities such as David Attenborough and Sir Peter Scott, wildlife travel, ecology and conservation; we try to cater for the needs of amateur naturalists as well as professional biologists and zoologists.

WILDLIFE is very different from any other Natural History publication, as we are non-specialist and independent. Our articles are original and written by leading amateur naturalists as well as a great variety of scientific experts who understand the requirements of enthusiasts and students.

WILDLIFE has close links with the majority of wildlife organisations and charities such as the World Wildlife Fund, Fauna & Flora Preservation Society, Royal Society for the Protection of Nature, etc., and so is able to keep our readers in touch with the latest developments in the wildlife world.

In Depth Studies
We always set aside space for a topical subject, usually on a theme of conservation, which we give the 'In Depth' treatment. A recent example of this is our report on the important International Tropical Rainforest Symposium.

Junior Readers - Education
We are often referred to as semi-scientific, but even so we already have a large number of junior readers, and judging from their letters, they read a lot more than the exclusive junior section we set aside for them!

We know that students are often involved with special education projects for general study and examination courses, and we cater for them too with special series of articles, and Natural History projects, such as the Fox Watch and Glow-worm Surveys, in which our readers can participate.

We run competitions for junior and adult readers, such as our WILDLIFE Photographer of the Year Competition which we run in conjunction with a large and very popular exhibition.

TV and Media Events
We believe that we are the only monthly publication which provides a guide to TV and Radio programmes devoted to wildlife and conservation. We work closely with both the BBC and ITV, and many of our articles are related to television documentaries and series such as 'Nature Watch' and 'The World About Us'. We can also boast that we are the first to publicise the new Channel 4
Wildlife Series - which we are all eagerly awaiting.

News Roundup
This popular section contains a distillation of wildlife news items from all over the world, keeping students up to date with the latest discoveries, controversies and events.

WILDLIFE gives students details of forthcoming field courses, and reports on their favourite topics. We review films, books and exhibitions, and enable readers to obtain access to wildlife records, cassettes, films, and video cassettes for sale or hire.

Annual subscription rates, including postage, are:
- UK and Eire: 1 year, £11.50, 2 years, £20.70.
- Overseas (surface): 1 year, £12.25, 2 years, £22.70.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR AUTHORS

All material submitted for publication in Ethics & Animals should be addressed to the Editor. Reviews and articles should be typed, on one side of the paper only. One copy is sufficient for all submissions except articles, of which three copies are requested. Reviews, reports, directory entries, and other such matter are screened only by the E&A staff, but article manuscripts are evaluated by 'blind' referees. To facilitate such 'blind' reviewing of articles the author's name should not appear on the manuscript, but should be on a separate sheet of paper which also bears the title of article. If possible, authors should also remove internal references which would identify them (such as "as I argued in my article on animal liberation in The Journal of Beasts"). Such references can be re-inserted before publication.
