Excitement On Campus

The above cut shows the characters who took part in the most enjoyable pantomime, "The Doctor of Lonesome Folk and Some of his Patients." The California Polytechnic Sunday afternoon theater this week produced the play, with the main feature being a humorous and satirical playlet, "The Doctor of Lonesome Folk." The players included a variety of characters, ranging from a cranky old man to a young, enthusiastic student. The audience was thoroughly entertained by the performers' skillful acting and the witty dialogue. The play was well-received and brought much laughter and joy to the audience.

The Polytechnic Band has formed a connection with the University Band, and the former is now making frequent visits to the campus. The Band boys feel that Mr. Burch is a great leader, and that his Band is making a splendid reputation for the University. The Band is planning a concert in the near future, and the students are eagerly awaiting the opportunity to hear them perform.

Campus To Have Another Dormitory

Appropriation For a New Structure Passes the Faculty

The California Polytechnic campus will soon have a new dormitory. The dormitory which it is intended to build will be a duplicate of the lower dormitory. The student body is enthusiastic at the probability that it will be located outside the present dormitory. The dormitory will be built at some time next year as an emergency measure to provide space for the expanding student body. The building will be of a new type, more modern than the present dormitories. The project will be a part of the institution's long-range plans for the future. The dormitory will be a modern building, designed to provide a comfortable and pleasant living environment for the students.

Girls Return to Poly!

Five of last year's girls graduates visited Poly during their recent holiday. Betsey Hunt, who came from the coast to see her old friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hunt, and her sister, Mrs. Edna Roberts, also from the coast, met her with her mother, Mrs. Edna Roberts. Their visit was a great pleasure to the Poly students, and they were given a warm welcome by the Poly girls. The girls returned home on the last day of their visit, leaving Poly with many pleasant memories of their stay.
Rejoining in promise with new enthusiasm we are making our good resolutions to do things in the future that are really worth while. It’s true that we can’t all be perfect, and sometimes we pause and wonder what the New Year holds for us. We hope its success for we couldn’t tolerate the thought of failure.

Even the most agreeable of people can be difficult to please and we must always bear this in mind. We strive for success and yet sometimes we fail. But the New Year offers us a fresh start and a chance to do better.

I RESOLVE THAT—

With a clean rain washed earth the New Year has begun its long march down the line of 365 days with a promise of a successful year ahead. We are bound to make the best of it.

Bob Irvine and Don Waller have moved into the dormitories. The dorms are a bit crowded, but we are managing to get along.

To you Poly friends the course of events which transpired the other night and bring me into contact with a young man in his country's service, we are very grateful for the series of excerpts from letters of Carol Cavanaugh's "In Chronological Order:

April 30, 1930.

Yesterday I was dining downstairs with my wife, Miss Mabel Philips, her mother and Miss Alice Hunsaker. We passed by the Schofield Barracks, and were about to retire for the night. Suddenly a burst of music came from the building. The Colonel's Brass Band was playing "Anthem of the United States," and the music filled the air. We could hear the words:

"There is no flag, but the Stars and Stripes."

We all stood up and sang along with the band. It was a splendid performance. We were very impressed by the music and the spirit of patriotism it evoked. We decided to visit the Barracks tomorrow afternoon to see the band perform again.

We have been on leave for a few days, and have been enjoying ourselves very much. We have gone to several concerts and plays, and have seen some good films. We have also visited some museums and art galleries, and have been very impressed by the cultural offerings of the metropolitan area.

We are looking forward to a few more days of relaxation before we return to our duties. We hope to return refreshed and rejuvenated.

We love you and miss you very much.

Yours truly,

Carol Cavanaugh

Nolux, you recall, was the old-fashioned town where every evening the town square was filled with people of all ages, who would gather to listen to the town crier reading out the events of the day. The town was full of life, and everyone was very proud of their town. Nolux was a place where people could go to relax and enjoy themselves.

But Nolux was also a place where people could go to learn about the latest developments in science and technology. The town had a thriving science and technology community, and people were always thinking about new ways to improve their lives.

To destroy, in one grand explosion, the entire supply of high explosives, would be a coup de grâce—eclair a la main—such a stroke of genius that would surely make every subsequent explosion seem trifling by comparison.
