This year’s dormitory, Jespersen Dorm, has assumed the role of poor sections again may demand the attention of the "polyites."

As seen by some "Polyites"

Four years ago, from out of a clear sky, it was announced that the State Legislature had passed a bill excluding girls from the student body of The California Polytechnic. The announcement was followed by an ovation worthy of the appearance of a popular movie idol.

That was four years ago. Afterwards it was feared that the college would suffer both socially and spiritually. For two years the Poly dorm must have been without coeds. The advantages and disadvantages of co-educational education have been discussed, and, judging from popular comment, the argument seems to favor the disadvantages.

Now it is rumored that Poly may become a county J. C. and that girls may again invade the sacred groves.

EDITOR DISCUSSIONS SCHOOL LOYALTY

"Loyalty to one’s college is as essential as the college itself, and meant nothing to the students whether a team representing the school won or lost. If fans were not to bear some sense of loyalty present.
