Professor in Antarctica for Penguin Research

Cal Poly's Marine Biology Professor Mark Moline and Senior Researcher Ian Robbins are in Antarctica through Mid-February. They are documenting how ocean warming off Antarctica is impacting the feeding grounds of Adélie Penguins. The project is part of a National Science Foundation grant. Robbins is blogging and posting photos from "tomorrow" in Antarctica — across the international dateline from Cal Poly and California.

Statistical Consulting Service Available to Campus Through March 11

The Statistics Department will provide statistical consulting services to the campus community through March 11. The intent is to provide support to faculty, staff and students on projects and research. Consulting is under way.

Karen McGaughey and John Walker serve as the main consultants. They are available to advise on data collection, experimental design, and analysis of research projects. They are also available to lead seminars or tutorials on requested topics and offer advice on various computer packages currently available at Cal Poly. Lectures may also be available to groups with special areas of statistical inference. For more information, scheduling or to make an appointment, visit the Consulting Services web site.

MSDS is Now Online

Departments are reminded that each area is responsible to maintain Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) for all hazardous materials used in their operations. The sheets provide information on dangerous properties, recommended personal protective equipment, storage requirements, emergency response procedures and many other important items. Cal OSHA requires MSDS to be readily available to employees who may use or be exposed to hazardous materials. To assist departments and support ongoing campus sustainability initiatives, the Environmental Health & Safety Office subscribes to an online MSDS database service, which can be accessed and used by everyone on campus. The system, called MSDSOnline, can replace virtually all paper copies of MSDS currently being used.

The link to MSDSOnline can be found on the EH&S website. EH&S can also provide a brief, on-site training session for individual departments. This MSDS "tailgate" training session typically takes 15 to 30 minutes in a meeting room or smart room and will satisfy one half hour of mandated, yearly safety training. Managers and supervisors should contact Tom Featherstone at ext. 6-6661 to arrange a session.

What's a Freegan? Find out Jan. 27

Documentarist Jeremy Seifert is an experienced dumpster diver. Come see Seifert explain his documentary DIVE! on Jan. 27 at VG Café at 7:30 a.m. and again at 10 a.m. at the UU Student Session and how he was able to salvage thousands of dollars worth of edible food from a local grocery store's dumpster. In his multi award-winning documentary full of entertainment, guerilla journalism and a call to action, Seifert asks the question, why is so much edible food wasted and thrown away behind hundreds of grocery stores across the country every night? DIVE! follows filmmaker Seifert and his friends as they dumpster dive in the back alleys and gated garbage receptacles of Los Angeles' supermarkets in an effort to show the amount of food thrown away.
