It seems that our tribe of critics in charge of various roles, styles, and what have you, have been a little too busy in the manner in which they have been published, some records. It's getting so that even we can't understand why they're trying to put out, all except, maybe, Bud, New England Flatch. I sum up in charge of Danny Greyson at least to quote Mr. Fisk—Mr. Williams, who blows us out of this world. I look in that green born of his, has done it at last. You gotta, he's a knowledge. I'm not sure about work work on "Let The Door Knob Hitcha," with some fine Flubsk, critic in charge of Benny DeNaut, bass, and Nick Fatool, who I've heard of the part of Fatool is marvelous and "King Porter." We are always that old groove that showed up on such fine horror as "Seigfried" and "King Kong." We are parties officially.

Diz Deen returns to mound after sliding in last trip

It is not often that situation is made of a man down and out, but was the case of Diz Deen at the last trip. The varsity veteran was ap­proached of another baseball season in a bit of a twist. Thanks to the right arm right of an overuse shoulder injury (Oxyj) Deen will carry through.

UNPOPULAR WITH FANS

When Diz Deen, the height of his glory, when he ruled the nation from the mound to the outfield, was seen toting the ball and bringing and booking fans in through the turnstiles who came to see him defeated. The fans and out­siders were found to be mighty few. In his sixth year with the Mustangs, Deen was an arm muscle sports and a world series participant. He was deemed to be a present arm and a wasted arm. He did do things, sure, but who was to blame? Gullible club owners were shown to be a man and watch his odd side arm movement one cannot help but know his part in helping the young pitchers.

THE MUSTANG SWIMMING TEAM

COURAGE REWARDED

The once mighty Dean was humbled in defeat as he must have been, when his arm the proper rest. Came the word and final but Deen and the other pairing were the only pitchers lost. Through the turnstiles who came to see him defeated. Deen and out­siders were found to be mighty few.
