22. The "anaesthetizing of feeling" to which I refer in this article is but another expression for what Susan Griffin has called the "silencing of eros."

25. Of course, women eat meat, as well as men. But, as Carol Adams points out, meat eating is a masculine endeavor. Who, after all, barbecues the steak and carves the meat? "Meat and potatoes" men are supposedly strong and hardy as a result of their carnivorous diet. (Ibid., p. 149.)
