State-Wide Attendance

Cal Poly plays host this week to the annual California Agricultural Teachers' Association Summer Conference. Some 800 vocational agriculture instructors are expected for the conference which ends tomorrow. More than 200 of these instructors are also enrolled for the summer session of short courses which will continue through next Monday.

Wives and families of the teachers were invited to attend the conference for the first time since before the war.

Special instruction for teachers is being given by California Polytechnic faculty members, who divide the state into districts for administrative purposes. For the conference a special session was held.

Among the guest speakers who are to attend are: Senator Chris Jespersen, state commissioner of agriculture; John R. Bell, state commissioner of agriculture; Douglas, D. J. Hovander, director of home and family relations; and Kenneth Watson, vocational agriculture teachers.

Expanded Catalog Available Soon

A completely new catalog for the coming year of the California Polytechnic College, will be available soon.

Egan, dean of student welfare.

The new catalog will be the first to include new agriculture instructors and of the role of the state department of education and the state department of agriculture personal.

Instruction for the conference follows the theme of "Know Your California Farmer." The keynote speaker for the conference was Robert C. Sheppard, dean of the College of Agriculture and the School of Education in the San Francisco State College.

"Three Musketeers"

By Al Auf der Held

The other night I was walking outside Mustanger's when a gust of wind blew into my Joe. I nodded and I started the air sampler last sampling years hoping and my nose to something, I straightened up a young man in white pants and a green and yellow sweater who mumbled something. The first question was "Don't bother me, I'm not interested in this story." Joe was opped by me at the time I tried to explain this has been a very public affair. "What will be the result?"

"What have you Joe?" I asked. "I examine the centerpiece of war would have a part by side by side, all lights up indi­vidually. It was obvious that a study for an electric student would stuff it out im­mediately by indirect lighting.

You're going to fail," Joe reached across the bar and grappled with me. "What have you?" Suddenly I was aware of a person who had thought the battle of the use of maps in the early stages of the war, the Joe extracted his fingers from my arm and disappeared in a cloud of cigar smoke.

I straightened the chemistry stu­dent's notes and found for the glass Joe had slid down the countertop. "It was true! Joe was wiping the other half of it con­tinuously. I was also aware that the glass, and the next drink on the bar.

"The chemistry student, having discussed at length the density of various liquids, had finally gone into solu­tion. He was about to spill the contents of the bottom of a hypothetical breakage. Suddenly the bottle was broken by two scarcely less solvent friends, and I was cast into the night.

The last shot didn't remain a long. A stranger lurched in front of me and held my arm. He ordered a drink, nodded to me, and I was aware that he implied we had much in com­mon, though to me he was stranger than fiction.

"My name is Abraham, Linus Jones. Who's yours?"

"Mine's Alexander Dumas. What about you?" He looked at me and laughed. I would have told him my real name, but I couldn't think of one.

"Well, Alexander Dumas—just what the woman was looking for, but we found out we were wrong. But it was obvious that Joe was rather glad when they hear the tale of the three musketeers."

It was that J. P. established eleven of the original thirteen colonies. J. P. set forth his story. He roared approval at my know­ledge. He knew the women, liked them often.

During the seven months the FBI spent investigating Antigone's story, Kawakita's story was the man who incited some of those scars are from the tallow works was the humble cot­tage of my great, great-uncle who sought gratification. He was sworn to secrecy. In fact, when he felled his arm in anger, the bars were washed awash, covered with the expressions of medi­eval brutality.

I looked around— the bar was empty, Joe was crumbling out of the Army, and the first time I laid eyes on my friend in America, but he always tried to make everyone think he had been in the serf-tilled fields. He soon saw that J. P. established eleven of the original thirteen colonies. J. P. set forth his story. He roared approval at my know­ledge. He knew the women, liked them often.

"When I saw that new ear Kawa­kito was the man who incited some of those scars are from the tallow works was the humble cot­tage of my great, great-uncle. He was interrogating new prisoners; when it came time for logical lighting.

"MINE'S Alexander Dumas. My name is Abraham, Linus Jones. Who's yours?"
