El Rodeo Due Monday; Awaits Final Cutting

Latest word from the printers of the 1960 El Rodeo report that the delivery date for the yearbook will be about July 10. However, the long Fourth of July holiday may have delayed the final completion of the book. According to the information received by Don Johnson, El Rodeo editor, the binding of the 2150 copies was completed only the final copies of the covers remain to be completed.

Numerous inquiries from students who have paid a $3.00 fee for every student who will add the book’s card in July are being answered by the student body office and Don Johnson. He states that he has received many letters from the students who want to see the book’s card in July.

When the books arrive, there will be a sale in El Corral. Students who have not paid for their book cards are advised to do so immediately.

"If we don’t do this," Johnson concluded, "the book will be destroyed. We will probably start on Tuesday for the assembly of the book."

First Conference Complete Success State Welding Men

Last week's welding conference held at Poly for the first time with the help of the "Welder" and the "Welding" magazines was a complete success. According to B. T. Jefferson, editor of the "Welder," popular trade journal of the West, the welding instructions of high schools and colleges, which were a part of his conference, were a great success. He added that the welding conference was a great success and that the welding conference was held for the first time in the history of the welding profession.

Jefferson said that the welding conference was held for the first time in the history of the welding profession.

Courses Held For Farm Equipment

Call Poly will again open its doors to a number of students in farm equipment this summer. The courses will be held from Wednesday, July 17, to Saturday, July 20. The courses will be limited to 150 students each, and the students will be selected on the basis of a request for them.

Traffic Troubles, Again

Numerous students have taken it upon themselves to challenge the school traffic regulations. The excuse, or reason, given by most of these non-conformers is, “well, I saw some of the visitors doing it.”

There is no doubt that a few of the visitors during the past few weeks have violated the regulations on several occasions. It is possible, though hardly probable, that the action of these few threw several Poly students into momentary confusion which resulted in their violating the code.

Ernest Steinier, chief security officer, had this to say concerning the visitors, “We must make allowances for visitors and give them time to familiarize themselves with our policies. The few that have acted independently should not be considered as a criterion for the rest.”

Poly students are given almost two weeks in which to become familiar with regulations before being held liable. This period of grace does not include speeding, reckless driving, or incidents of that nature, but pertains only to the school code.

The school traffic regulations are not so rigid as to work any real hardship on any of the students, especially during the summer. Steinier and the security department could be a lot tougher on offenders if they so desired, but have chosen to play ball with the student body. The cooperation of all of us is not only desired, it is necessary.

White Cellar

By Phil Keyser

Betty Hutter couldn’t get into the main office to see the editors without fail. “No students this week, Father,” she said. So Phil asked me if I wouldn’t like to be one of the visitors to help keep Phil Keyser from doing damage. “Okay,” I said, “but I see it to that George F. R. S. Secretary of the White Cellar.”

My, my, the stress has come to bear on his web of bell field. There are sheepdogs, Misses Kasson, a rabidness and all the tell sensation. Stress soon enough usually results happy childhood memories. My mother was a rabidness and I may a side show thin.

Upon the evening performance I have a free hand of total stress, induced all the ingredients with a heart.

My youngest brother also may recall a stress over the protection of the viaduct, I remember. He wanted a double share just be- cause he had two heads. “Just born, your little monkey,” my mother used to tell him.

Anyway, the stress is here if you want it. There are wholeORT rolls Peggy Grunth, Ruth Hill, Peggy Taylor, Virginia Wast,

Laurel Macbride, June Powell, Shirley Farris, Carol Brok, Emma

I have to follow Betty’s style and what would White Cellar look like if there was to be without an imposing hat or suit? Now let’s switch to boys. Once they are men, you should get ac-

The CCAA was pretty well represented in the National Invitational Track and Field Championships held at Maryland University last week. San Diego, in particular, was well represented, as the Mustangs finished second overall in the meet, with Nick Zinck leading the way, the truth will come out even if no one who follows this column in San Diego, now an independent college. It's a pretty stark college. Held next year one of the strongest fields in a row. Not even Earl K. Nelson track team ever been beaten by another team, not even the Cal Poly track team, the team that's widely considered to be the best in the nation.

The tournament was scored by adding to the total of 50 each for each victorious team. The Mustangs scored 50 points after a score of 101, with 12 points taken from the game's total, leaving 89 points to be scored. The Mustangs were awarded a second place finish in the game, which they scored 90 points, leaving 18 points to be scored. Sirs Bess is Proud!

Mama Just Blushed

Sir Bess and a few of the other bulls are passing out the advice pipes these days. The reason, of course, is that the breeding season has arrived. It is a busy season and the bulls are expected to do their utmost to sire as many calves as possible.

Over the Easter holiday, Sir Bess was seen strolling with a female of a superior breed. The female, known for her good looks and fertility, was a favorite of the cattle herd. Sir Bess was seen carrying a blue ribbon, indicating his desire to sire the most beautiful calves.

Cattle Breeders from the United States, according to David Hoyt, have been studying the breeding habits of Sir Bess, hoping to adopt his successful methods to improve their own herds. The Hoyts, natural animal lovers, have been working at reducing the size of their herd to focus on high-quality breeding programs.

Lyle Hoyt, a noted veterinarian, has been conducting tests on the fertility of the herd. He has found that Sir Bess has a unique ability to sire high-quality calves. The Hoyts have applied for a patent on a method used to check pregnancy, which is now being used by other breeders.

Cal Poly's 18-head dairy cattle show using returned to the campus last Monday from a 10-day show in San Luis Obispo. They are being brought with a handcart, as is the custom, and housed in the barns of the campus.

It is said that the show is a success, as the cows and calves are in good condition. Sir Bess is expected to sire some of the best calves of the season.

Cal Poly's Dairy Cattle Association is planning a show for the public in the near future to showcase the beauty and fertility of their herd.

Pilots! Here’s Job Opportunity

The position of Farmer-Pilot with the Division of Fish and Game is available. This position offers an unusual employment opportunity to the qualified candidate. The job requires a commercial pilot's certificate with single and multi-engine pilot's certificate, and a current aeronautical medical certificate.

Applicants must have logged 800 hours of solo flying and have had one year's experience. They pay $85 monthly. Anyone interested should contact Johnny Jones in the welfare office.

Follows Answers Call of the Wild

Albert M. Fellows, better known as Bert, the head of the school printing department, left for Big Bear Lake last Friday to try his luck at the sport of mountain fishing.

Accompanied by Mrs. Fellows, he expects to be gone about two weeks. Naturally, Fellows expects to return with story or fish, at least, a few fish stories.

Although many fishermen have had successful outings at fishing, there is no guarantee that Bert will be successful. However, he is looking forward to the challenge.
