"It has been pointed out, with a one-year and a half vacation period in the four-week term, that the fact was that the four-week term is really a three-week term, and it would seem advisable to attempt to make the four-week term a four-week term."

"This presents a paramount problem for the Board of Publications annual," said Chairman John Meta, "in making plans to fill the vacancy." "A special session of the board will meet during the six-week summer session to discuss this problem.

Our guest columnist this week, B. J. McMahon, brings up a question that has long been on younger minds. Our guest columnist this week, B. J. McMahon, brings up a question that has long been on younger minds.

How can young people get started in business for themselves? Old Hobart McGollar, Alumna Editor of the "Mustang," sees a way to make this possible.

The idea is simple. Young people can start small by taking over the responsibilities of others who are ready to retire.

"A few years ago," Hobart says, "I had a senior who was really ready to retire. I helped him look for a successor. He was selling the farm to a younger couple who were eager to start their own business. The senior had a lot of experience and was very willing to help the new owners.

"That was the beginning of a small business network. Young people who are interested in starting their own business can approach their mentors and ask for help. They can learn from the mistakes and successes of those who have been in the business for a long time.

"The key is to start small and build up. You can start with a small part of a larger business, or you can create your own. The most important thing is to have a mentor who can guide you and give you advice."

This is the kind of network that can help young people get started in business. It's a way to learn from experience and build a successful future.
Letter To McPhase Emphasizes ROTC

The Army's recognition of the value of a specifically directed basic military training for college men was emphasized by General J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army, in a recent lecture at the University of Michigan.

In discussing the Army ROTC program, Gen. Collins said that the college students are reponsible for the life and death of the army.

The students are responsible for the life and death of the army, he said, because the military training is a part of their course of study.

"Therefore, it is up there," said John, in recalling reality. "Of course it's up there."

"We are dedicated to providing ROTC students with the final instruction that can be devised. That is the reason California State Polytechnic college has been selected to assist the Army in achieving this goal."

While the ROTC units have prepared students for specific Army roles through the "community" program, the general instruction of the cadets has been an added responsibility of higher instruction. Hence we feel we have to provide more important than basic training to the ROTC officers to meet the needs of our three core military goals.

"We are dedicated to providing ROTC students with the final instruction that can be devised. That is the reason California State Polytechnic college has been selected to assist the Army in achieving this goal."

The students are responsible for the life and death of the army, he said, because the military training is a part of their course of study.

the National Air Station, and in all the essential activities of the "white" was no more of a nuisance than an extra duty for the men. The Erly of Jacksville was therefore not considered a success. In this" war, it was less than three weeks before the Katzenmiller had caught the "out of bounds" ruling and we were in for a fair action taken by the navy men. Plus famine, we are the only people in the state with our own air station. Working it will be done immediately after this affair. The cooperation of the townspople was truly amazing. Should such a situation be duplicated here in El Paso, with Cal Poly substituting for naval air station, we feel certain many eyes would be opened.

Regarding the impression that "Cal Poly students don't see in my area," another approach must be attempted. After all, the local merchants cannot be expected to know a Cal Poly man in sight, the turns in this Rapid and Substantial.

This is a welcome improvement for the have done much of the preliminary ground work already and will continue to work so the new editor will not be caught behind the scenes this fall," said Mullens. The Editor-in-Chief of the board would benefit by Mueller's efforts and the board has indicated that the position will be available at the end of the semester. The Editor-in-Chief has been waiting on several sections of the board, which are kind of an oversight by the board.

Discussion, of course, has several applications for this job. However, Mrs. Smith reported that no formal application has been received as yet, and interested persons can contact him in Room 41, in the basement.
