II. COMMITTEE COMMENTS

see page two
Curriculum Committee Comments (Applied Social Psychology Concentration 1992-94 catalog)

It was the opinion of the Committee that the justification for this proposed concentration is valid. It would join three existing concentrations - Applied Developmental Psychology, Early Childhood Education, and Family Studies - as well as a Psychology Minor offered by the department. The department prepared an extensive list of entry level employment skills offered in the concentration as well as an exhaustive list of a great variety of graduate programs which could accept students with a degree having this concentration.

The new course proposal, PSY 496, is a seminar class which will be offered in alternate years. Faculty resources will be drawn from two other courses which will not be offered with their current frequency. Those two courses are being switched from requirements to electives in the Applied Developmental concentration. The Curriculum Committee does not view this as a significant resource issue.

Students for this concentration will be drawn from a redistribution of existing student allocations to the department.
