Is Cal Poly ready for El Niño?

Administration and Finance has taken numerous steps to prepare for potential problems, and the provost wants to pass along important information about what to do if those problems materialize.

University employees have cleaned out brush blocking creeks to help drain roadways. In addition, the division has checked irrigation systems, acquired new generators and emergency pumps, and obtained inventories of key supplies and equipment.

The university is conducting drills with key emergency response personnel to test readiness.

Here are some answers to questions you might have:

How will I know if the road is open or if I can get to the campus to go to work?

✓ For state highway conditions, call 1-800-427-7623.
✓ For county highway conditions, call 781-5252.
✓ For road conditions in your city, call your local Police Department's business number, listed in the government pages of your telephone book.

What is the maximum water depth I can safely drive through?

Six inches. However, if the water is moving, don’t go through it.

We’ll have more questions and answers about preparing for El Niño in the next issue of Cal Poly Report.

Information about El Niño can also be accessed from the Cal Poly home page on the World Wide Web (address: www.calpoly.edu; click on “General Information”).

Yes, Virginia, there is still a free city bus ride
The Finance and Administration division wants the campus to be clear: Riding a city bus will still be free for Cal Poly students, employees and emeriti and will be free through June 30.
For this purpose, they've hopped on SLO transit buses, simply show your Cal Poly identification card. No additional fare or bus pass is required.
The Administration and Finance division offers this additional information:
For the SLO area, a parking citation ($125.00) and an additional donation from Cal Poly Foundation ($44,000) have made the "free" ride possible this year.
The total funding from Cal Poly to the city toward the bus city program for the 1997-98 fiscal year is $169,000. Since the 1985-86 fiscal year, Cal Poly has contributed in excess of $1.8 million to the city to help operate the bus program.
Nomination letters are on sale at Cal Poly riders or from student fees.
For the 1998-99 fiscal year, the negated cost to Cal Poly will $176,000, up 3.3 percent for inflation. The parking citation revenue fund will be able to fund only $125,000 of this $176,000 allocation; therefore, the $49,600 difference will need to come from contributions to the library's diversity revenue fund.
However, until the end of June 1998, you can ride the city bus free simply by showing your Cal Poly ID.
