Rutherford said that the Ag. caucus would draft a resolution opposing the foreign language requirement and bring it to the next Ex. Comm. meeting for consideration as an item for the next agenda.
V. Business Items

A. CAM 700 (first reading). Greenwald gave an overview of the makeup of the task force that reviewed CAM 700 and of what the committee had considered when rewriting CAM 700. The concern of the task force was that the limitations were too great and that there was no recourse for those who felt their free speech was violated. A number of questions were asked relative to existing policy versus that proposed. Also there were questions concerning how the document would be handled in the second reading.

B. Commencement (first reading). Scriven discussed the past problems with the annual commencement program. Last year approximately 2,000 people were not seated at commencement because of space limitations. Scriven also outlined the various options and why the committee selected the option present in their resolution. There were a number of questions including whether the city can handle the number of people attending commencement, and why the resolution was not proposing a change for the 1984 commencement. Those having recommendations are to give them to Scriven at the earliest possible date.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:35 p.m.
