Hoopsters Readying For '59 Campaign Start From Scratch

Facing a big rebuilding job with this year's Cal Poly basketball squad, Coach K. J. Jorgensen begins practice sessions Wednesday Oct.

Although Jorgensen indicated that from early sign-ups, he expects about 45 hopefuls to try out for the team which opens the season here against the San Diego State Wednesday, 11.

The Poly mentor will have to build the squad around four returning seniors and two of last year's players, Jim Thetford, Rich Max and Dick Tucker. New York Poly and City College of San Francisco contributed.

bathrooms to cement the two rugged center of the line. All along the front the "green wall" sparkled. Willie Hudson and Carlo Uonaalee were self-estyied ambassadors of the middle. Oonaalee and Hudson were the last men of their line against Spartan backs, giving them the advantage of a strong pass rush. Taking the opportunity, the two ruggers plunged the holes and kept a lookout for Spartan passers over the center and in the flat. More than a dozen times Thatch's ball carriers poked their heads across the line, only to have Max or Williams hurl them back.

Hacking un the line, Rich Max and Bob Williams added to the Poly's pass rush. With big tacklers on the outside and in the flats, more than a dozen times Thatch's ball carriers poked their heads across the line, only to have Max or Williams hurl them back.

Hackett is a near standard. After holding Poly's remaining offense to more than 10 points there should be little doubt that the Spartan forwards are ready for "tougher opponents".
