President Reveals Plans for Student Activity Building

Plans for an activity building are in the making, according to President Julian J. McPhie. He announced that he hopes the first stage of the project, including a two or three-story structure, will be completed within the next three years and that the second stage would be started within the next five years.

The building will serve as a college union and auditorium for campus life for future students. Construction of the building will begin with the freshman class this fall and will be completed by the first semester of the spring 1973.

President McPhie emphasized that the building would be constructed from non-state funds and would be financed from revenue of the present bookstore, revenue producing from ticket sales for activities, and state funds.

Bits of the planned student activities building will be directly out of the campus, under construction between the science building and the new gymnasium. "That key site," the president said, "is the poly mister building plan of 1969-70 is dedicated primarily to the requirements of students and staff." Plans for the bookstore, he explained, have been based on information from the National Association of Student Bookstores and on current experience of other western colleges. Planning for activity-type functions has been developed in cooperation with other state colleges and state agencies.

Poly Dairy Animal Sold For $4000

"Polytechnic," a 4-year-old bull, bred and raised by George C. Lane of Fresno, was sold to the American Breeders' Association for $4000. "Polytechnic," or "Impair," has been classified by the California Fatteners Association as "very good," with a 97 point, tying him with "Orange Dust," another bull classified as "excellent," according to American Breeders' Association officials. ARS officials have posted a price of $4000 to "Impair." The bull is yet to prove itself in the field, and will be shown in the California state fair in October.

"Polytechnic" was in good form at a practice bull riding session. Smith took first in the event to please Marv Camus, the California cowboy of the year and a graduate of Cal Poly College. Miller earned a 3.4 grade point average this month. A mathematics major, Miller was graduated with distinction in December and will be a candidate for the Rhodes scholarship. His major is mathematics.

Cal Poly Dairy Animal Records

A nine 60 cu. in. bulls of the 5000 cu. in. size, sired by "Polytechnic," will serve as a record breeder in the dairy department. Their dams' records are as follows: the dam of the 5000 cu. in. bull is "Bell," and the dam of the 60 cu. in. bull is "Lady." A third bull, "Impair," has yet to prove itself in the field, and will be shown in the California state fair in October.

Parking Fee Violators Warned of Penalties

Students and staff are reminded by the college business office that the statewide pay-for-parking plan is in effect on all Cal Poly property for 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

New students and others who are not completely familiar with the parking regulations should inquire soon about the operation of our 24-hour call service, "Parking Information" which can be reached by dialing "225" on the phone.

Violations of parking require payment of fines. The first offense draws an "administrative appointment" that requires presence of the offender in the business office and instructions to purchase a parking permit or to explain to the business manager reasons for not complying.

Failure to heed the administratively appointed by the time stated on the appointment form results in a $2 fine. Second offense requires appearance before the date of students for disciplinary action. Daniel Nall, College Business Manager, points out that State Administrative Code Title 5, under which college activities are governed, makes provisions for suspension of students who violate campus traffic and parking regulations.

Second offense means the second conviction during the college year, and in each quarter.

To avoid embarrassment and trouble, students are urged by Nall to purchase their parking permits or not to drive on the campus at all.
