Cal Poly Osher Lifelong Learning Institute is Throwing a Party

Those 50 and Older are Invited to Learn About the Winter/Spring 2006 Courses and Programs

SAN LUIS OBISPO -- Cal Poly Continuing Education's Osher Lifelong Learning Institute, an organization that offers courses and activities to people 50 and over, will be holding a free introduction reception from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 29, at the San Luis Obispo Veterans’ Hall. At the reception, current and prospective members will learn what’s on tap for the winter/spring term.

The Cal Poly Osher Institute is a membership organization that offers peer-led courses, learning programs and field trips to seniors. A $50 per-term fee allows members to enroll in up to five courses. Additional courses cost $10 each.

Hors d’oeuvres, wine and other beverages will be served at the reception. Anyone interested in attending can call Cal Poly Continuing Education at 756-2053, or register online at www.osher.calpoly.edu.

About the Osher Institute

The Osher Lifelong Institute at Cal Poly is dedicated to the joy of lifelong learning. There are no tests, no grades, no papers, and peers lead most of the programs. Osher Institute members gain new insights, make new friends, become more effective citizens, and join a community of learners. Cal Poly Continuing Education’s Osher Lifelong Learning Institute is part of a nationwide network of institutes made possible through the Bernard Osher Foundation.
