Cal Poly float wins Rose Parade trophy

Cal Poly's entry in the 108th Tournament of Roses Parade won the Founders' Trophy, awarded to the most beautiful float built and decorated by volunteers.

More than 1,000 volunteers from Cal Poly and Cal Poly Pomona helped create the 55-foot float named "Catch of the Day." The float was decorated with thousands of flowers including roses, carnations and irises, as well as walnut shells, oranges and onion seeds.

The animated float depicted a man with a big smile, reeling in his catch of the day, a big rainbow-striped bass. The fisherman is oblivious to another huge fish coming through a pier to swallow him. Seagulls, pelicans and dogs try to alert the man.

Cal Poly has participated in the parade for 49 years but hadn't won an award for five years. Trophies were awarded to 23 entries.

Adobe Systems donates software worth $165,000

Adobe Systems has donated computer software valued at almost $165,000 to the Graphic Communication Department, marking the largest software contribution ever received by the department.

The donation came in conjunction with the Tom Flores Celebrity Classic Golf Tournament that celebrated the department's 50th anniversary.

The gift from San Jose-based Adobe Systems consisted of four sets of 24 different packages that included such programs as PhotoShop, Illustrator, FrameMaker and Acrobat, as well as other programs that help form the basis of desktop and electronic publishing.

The donation also included 60 licenses for each software package and supporting documentation.

The software will be installed in the Graphic Communication Electronic Prepress Lab, Design Reproduction Technology Lab, Typography Lab, and University Graphic Systems (UGS), a student-managed, student-operated printing and publishing company. UGS gives students hands-on experience in developing "real" print media products such as the Mustang Daily and high-end graphics for various university departments.

The new software will also be installed in other areas of the university that teach desktop and electronic publishing.

Adobe will conduct a training seminar at Cal Poly for faculty members.

Former AT&T executive to head computing

A founding partner of a company that develops interactive educational software and former vice president with AT&T has been named vice provost for information technology.

Jeremiah (Jerry) Hanley assumed responsibility for the Information Technology Services department Jan. 6, reporting to Provost Paul Zingg. He succeeds David Walch, who has retired.

Hanley was a faculty member in the Center for Telecommunications Management in USC's Graduate School of Business. He is a founding member and strategy officer for EduLink, which develops computer programs for elementary and secondary school classes and also serves as a government affairs and policy development consultant to AT&T's Lucent Technologies.

"We are pleased to have the opportunity to bring Jerry Hanley's expertise and leadership in information technology to Cal Poly," Zingg said. "Our goal is to provide the best technology-assisted teaching and learning environment possible and to keep the university in the forefront of technological developments and leadership. We are confident that Mr. Hanley will advance these goals."

He will be responsible for all academic and administrative computing functions. Information Technology Services has more than 70 full-time staff members and a $9 million annual operating budget.

Hanley has been a member of the President's Cabinet, an advisory group to President Baker, since 1989. He also has been a lecturer in the university's engineering management program.

Whirling Dervishes to perform Jan. 23

A fascinating glimpse into the sacred rituals of Turkey's Whirling Dervishes will be offered as part of Cal Poly Arts' New Directions series at 8 pm Thursday, Jan. 23, in Harman Hall in the Performing Arts Center.

For 700 years members of the Mevlevi Order, or dervishes, have performed one of the world's most beautiful spiritual ceremonies, known as the Sema. It involves precise choreography, a meditation in motion in which the dervishes are accompanied by the refined, mystical music of flutes, strings, chorus, and percussion.

The Whirling Dervishes will be accompanied by members of the Mevlevi Ensemble of the Mevlana Culture and Art Foundation, known as some of Turkey's most outstanding classical musicians, playing traditional instruments such as the ney (flute), oud and tanbur (lutes), kemenche (violin), and percussion.

Vocalist and Koran reciter Kani Karaca, described as "the greatest voice of the century" will also be featured.

Cal Poly philosophy professor Judith Saltzman will give a pre-concert lecture at 7 pm in the Performing Arts Center's Philips recital hall.

The performance will be introduced by Dr. Kabir Helminski, translator of the poetry of Jalaluddin Rumi, founder of the Mevlevi Order.

Tickets to the Whirling Dervishes range from $10 to $18.

Spiller has performed across the United States as a soloist, recitalist, chamber musician, and accompanist.

Israel chamber orchestra to play Jan. 31

One of Israel's leading chamber orchestras, known for its outstanding renditions of baroque, classical and modern music, will perform at 8 pm Friday, Jan. 31, in the Performing Arts Center's Harman Hall.

Soloist and distinguished pianist Claude Frank will perform Mozart's Piano Concerto K. 453.

Frank, who debuted with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic in 1959, has performed with orchestras on five continents. He is known internationally as an acclaimed interpreter of the piano literature of Beethoven.

The 33-member Israel Camerata has been highly-praised by music critics and audiences around the world. The majority of its musicians are Russian emigres who left the Soviet Union when it collapsed.

Utilidor 'muddles' through foul weather

Rainy weather put a "damper" on the utilidor project over the holidays, but every effort is being made to restore vehicle and pedestrian access in the campus's inner perimeter.

Klamath Road behind Muir Hall and Tenaya Hall is currently closed to public vehicles but open to pedestrians. Vehicle access will be reestablished as soon as possible.

Mail is still being picked up at the kiosk at Via Carta and Poly Vue; however, anticipating limited access to come, the Postal Service suggests using the mailboxes on Perimeter Road across from the Administration Building and Grand Avenue in front of Vista Grande.

A reminder: Bus routes have changed. Maps have been installed at all stops - new and old - as well as other locations around campus, including the Grand Avenue Information Center, Public Safety Services, the UU Information Desk, and the library.

The map is also on the utilidor home page, accessible via Cal Poly's home page under What's New(s). A new bus stop has been established at the corner of Highland and Bishop Road. For more bus information, call Jacquie Paulsen at ext. 6680.

A look ahead: South Perimeter Road will probably be closed to public traffic mid-winter quarter. Information will be posted on the three campus entrance signs, on the hotline at ext. 6808, and on the utilidor home page.

For more information on the utilidor project, call Deby Ryan at ext. 6806.
