Agriculture Class Plans Beef Exhibits

Another "learn by doing" class- room project is underway in the development of four separate exhibits to promote the use of beef for the consumer.

Students working on the project, in cooperation with the California Beef Council, Inc., include Agricultural Business Management majors appointed, by a committee of Agriculture, Economics, and Remold, are doing the construction work.

In keeping with the "learn-by- doing" method, each of the 60 students taking the course, Agricultural Marketing Program in California, submitted a detailed plan for each of the four booths and over 40 of these ideas were screened by a committee of ABM (Agricultural Business Management) majors.

The Agricultural Engineering Class project will contain the displays in the plan and designs made in the Agricultural Business Management majors.

Three of the four themes chosen were "Beef in the Diet," "Importance of Beef in State and National Economy," and "Methods of Preparing Meats Featuring Beef." The fourth exhibit will be used by the California Beef Council at meetings, fairs and conventions throughout the year.

Graduating Seniors in "Who's Who"

Thirty-four graduating seniors have been chosen as the national publication, "Who's Who Among Student in American Colleges" for the 1960-61 edition.

For the first time, the publication features names for the seniors chosen for the award based on total school enrollment, academic achievement and on scholastic standing. Based on these factors, the students were ranked and the honor must have a minimum of 3.00 academic average for the all-campus average, and have been ranked in activities.

"Who's Who" is distributed to libraries of educational institutions throughout the nation, and is also used by industries as a guide for employing college graduates.
Veterans Cautioned On Public Law 550

Veterans! Don't be misinformed or advised into seeing training allowance benefits until a time when you may have a greater need for them. Many have been unwarmed where veterans who were living at home or during periods of summer school have elected not to go to school during Public Law 550 in order not to lose the optional entitlement material used for graduate study.

"This is the present practice and rarely is it as the law intended. Whatever may be the reason, local Veterans Administration officials have advised that veterans should keep in mind that after their training benefits have been exhausted, they are still entitled to a $1,000 state subsistence allowance at a rate of 50 per month.

Any student, whether he is on the Veterans Administration's roll or not, can be considered for enrollment at their training before their goals are reached. It is to the benefit of all that these benefits are exercised to the maximum.

The advantage to the Veterans Administration's roll is the full training of veterans in their training before their goals are reached. It is in the interest of the nation as well as the veterans.

Veterans! Protect your own interests. Do not be misled!"

Out Of The Din

Dear Editor:

Something has to be done about the dating situation on campus.

According to a study, which is based on (I'm sorry, I can't remember the exact number) per cent of the men on this campus (or the campus next to ours), 75 per cent of the men on this campus never date and only 25 per cent of the girls are asked out. Why is this so? When Cal Poly girls go out, the guys, according to these statistics, avoid them at all costs. This is not necessarily their fault. Now when the guys go out, they are only asked to go out with them if they are dating someone else. And even then, when a couple of you guys and girls go out, the girls are asked to stay away from the guys unless they are the ones who are dating that girl. What's more, the girls are also asked to stay away from the guy who is dating that girl.

The girls are just waiting to be swept off their feet. They should not be so choosy. They need to be more open to new experiences. The guys also need to be more open to new experiences. They should not be so picky. They need to be more open to new experiences.
