Where Credit is Due

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter so that you can give credit where credit is due.

Last Sunday, a little past midnight, I came upon two cars parked on the side of the road on the southern part of Santa Barbara Highway. It was leading for Cal Poly and I recognized one of the cars to be that of David Kula. I stopped to see if I could help any such situation. I had

Although he endangered his colleague by practicing them.

There was nothing I could do because of a fellow motorist who had already helped the fellow change his flat tire.

The reason I am writing this letter is not because of a fellow student stopping to help a motorist but that a sick person was courteous enough to stop and help a distressed motorist. I was very much impressed by the courtesy and unselfishness by practicing them.

Aggie Vs. Engineer

Dear Editor:

It is rather unusual to read in each issue of KL Mustang the letters from the engineering and agricultural students throwing mud in each other’s face. The friction between the two disciplines is becoming wider and wider due to the unclear fog that still shrouds the intentions of both departments. I feel that the situation could be improved if the students were to promote better relationships between the two departments by being courteous on the campus. I would like to take this opportunity to comment on you and your very able

Alumni Association

Dear Editor:

I am pleased to announce that the Alumni Association has given too much publicity because it has been my experience in working with alumni in the Alumni Association. It takes a great deal of effort to inform our members of the Alumni Association, and it is always more successful than attempting to solve some of these problems by being courteous on the road.

In conclusion, we will welcome an interest in our event.

Sincerely,

Electromagnetic materials, purity and stabilization problems incurred in the manufacturing of silicon and germanium crystals, and the instrumentation Digital Online
Transistor, also known as the "idiot," were topics of recent speeches to Engineering students here.

Dr. Van Winkle, head of the semiconductor laboratory of Hughes Aircraft, spoke at the regular branch of the Institute of Radio Engineers on purity control and stabilization of design characteristics as main problems encountered during the manufacture of silicon and germanium crystals, used as semiconductor devices in electronic applications. Engineers are going to meet on this problem and research for the replacement of vacuum tube equipment with other such devices, Winkle said.

A joint meeting of the Mechanical Engineering Society and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, featured "D. W. Gunther, manager of Weatlinghouse Electric," material engineering systems, outlining and describing the demand for the replacement of atmospheric with nuclear power to keep pace with the progress of semiconductors and the demands on applications, Winkle said.
