Poly Entry Wins Collegiate World Championship In Runaway

DETROIT, MICH.—With a tremendous burst of speed, Poly Pacor, of Polytechnic University, Brooklyn, New York, races ahead of the second place finisher, Metro, of the University of California, Berkeley. Poly, the 15-year-old male turtle, utilized his speed advantage to win the championship. The race to capture the fastest turtle in the nation was sponsored by the American Institute of Physics and the Physical Science Department of Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, California. The turtle race is part of the annual Science Week Celebration, and is held as a way to stimulate interest in science, especially among young people. Poly won in a time of 43.3 seconds, seven minutes ahead of the second place turtle from the University of Kentucky, who finished in 50 minutes and 13 seconds. Poly's victory was announced by Dick Creutz, the event organizer, who also congratulated the winner and thanked all the participants for their efforts. Poly is expected to be a star at turtle races in the future, and is already receiving offers from various universities and science organizations.
Peace Corps Volunteers, First Stop-Tanganyika

By MIKE CASITY

Over 20 students have expressed interest in applying for the Peace Corps since the program was first announced in El Mustang three weeks ago. Several misconceptions, however, have sprung up on this campus and others throughout the nation regarding the working conditions of the corps volunteers.

The college graduate who had applied won't try to impress the innumerable potential residents with his knowledge of Thoreau; he will expect wages that will enable him to expand his social circle. Meanwhile, volunteers won't flashy the luxuries of America to win their confidence and they certainly won't be selected from the ranks of high designers.

The truth of the matter is that the Peace Corps volunteer will go to Tanganyika only in the expectation of doing useful work needed in Africa. (Frankfurt, Germany, was the first post established in West Africa.) Tanganyika is a country of 880,000 squsrs miles on the east coast of Africa, exhausted traveling has been set up for conditioning the student at Thoreau's works. In addition, volunteers will teach in such areas as agriculture, medicine, dentistry, nursing and veterinary.

As a result of the trip, the volunteers will be exposed to a variety of interesting and challenging situations in Tanzania. For instance, they will have the opportunity to experience the daily life of the people in the area at first hand.

According to a recent Peace Corps bulletin, the first volunteers will return to Tanzania for training next year. Though plentiful supplies of Tanganyikan beef and bananas are available, the volunteers will be expected to help the government build schools and other facilities. They will also have the opportunity to meet the local people and experience their way of life.

In summary, the Peace Corps volunteer will gain valuable experience in foreign culture and will be able to contribute to the development of Tanganyika. He will also have the opportunity to meet interesting people and experience a new way of life.
