Vocational Ag Majors Tour Valley Schools

Twenty-six Cal Poly students preparing for careers as vocational agriculture, are touring the Valley for a week to familiarize themselves with the operation of the different schools and colleges in the area.

Their visit is a part of the college's national agriculture program, and is designed to give the students an opportunity to observe the operation of different schools and colleges in the area.

The students will be escorted by the school's staff members. They will also be shown around the different schools and colleges by the students and faculty members.

Fed Daily at Campus Dining Hall

BY MITCH HIDER, Staff Writer

Former GI may scowl at the old cliché, "an army marches on its stomach," but agree that a good meal settles well with soldier, farmer, laborer, and college student.

At the campus dining halls, a "company" of almost 400 employees forms an "army" of students, staff, and faculty. Of these employees, 366 are students working part-time.

In the refectories, work a number of June, including serving, washing, cleaning, and maintenance. With the exception of special jobs, wages are $110 an hour which is the same as student earnings in other state college dining halls.

In addition to student help, a force of 80 staff employees, mostly full-time, receive regular state regulated wages and benefits.

"We try to employ as many students as possible for as many hours as their schedules permit," said dining hall supervisor Lloyd Bertram. He pointed out that students are hired through the college placement office and further interviewed by the dining hall staff before being accepted.

To further student employment at the dining hall, a student manager program is scheduled to begin within the next two weeks. Bertram and other staff members, the IE student manager program will be designed to train managers in each of the dining halls.

Among their duties will be accepting any criticisms and complaints from students, serving food from a variety of special regulations, and maintaining cleanliness in the halls. Cooks said that student managers will have to prove effective in that they will be more closely related to the students eating in the dining halls. Bertram emphasized. He went on to say that they may be responsible for the distribution of the approximately 10,000 year-

New Admission Problems to Young People

New state College admission next year will have "very definite effects" on California young people planning agricultural education, according to a recent study by President Julian A. McPhee of Cal Poly Pomona. He urges that high schools, junior colleges and the four-year colleges begin to establish closer relations with the agricultural educational agencies of the state, in order to assure a greater number of agriculturally-trained people to the nation's industries. President McPhee states that "further refinement and systematic curricular coordination together with effective guidance and administration will make "needed adjustments."

The study was prepared by a new era of educational services faculty members of the College of Agriculture. The Poly Poly plot of campus is being organized as a "battleground" on this subject, with the aid of several advisers. The study was prepared by several members of the Agriculture faculty who will be writing several articles on the subject in the Little Theater at 7:30 p.m.

The film is a tale of a town in America that has "lost" a valuable, intangible asset, and something that is more valuable, a "life" that has been "lost."
