Parking Problems? Only For The Lazy

By LYNNE PRINCE

Lynn Poly Drive is the hot topic on the minds of many students at the University of Minnesota. It seems that more and more students are finding it difficult to park their cars on campus.

Lynn Poly Drive is a 22-minute drive around the campus, and it is not uncommon to see cars parked in the lot closest to their class building. However, there are instances when students find it difficult to get a parking spot.

The survey further showed that the number of cars parked in the lot exceeded the number of designated parking spaces. The survey was conducted by the Engineering and Physics Department.

The Engineering and Physics Department is planning to increase the number of designated parking spaces. In the meantime, they are urging students to carpool and use public transportation.

Tryouts Oct. 24 For "Antigone"

One of the most famous classical plays in the history of Western literature, "Antigone," will be performed on campus. The play will be directed by the Drama Committee chairman, and the auditions will be held on October 24.

The play is based on the Greek myth of Antigone, who defied the orders of her uncle, King Creon, and buried her brother, Polynices, who had been killed in battle.

The play will be presented in the campus auditorium. Tickets will be available at the box office.

Tryouts will be held on October 24. Interested students are encouraged to attend.
