10-year accreditation Ok'd by association

The Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) has reaffirmed Cal Poly's accreditation for 10 years.

The reaffirmation, which was approved by WASC's Accrediting Commission for Senior Colleges & Universities last month, was based on a year-long self study by Cal Poly in 1988-89 and on a four-day visit to the campus by a WASC team in January 1990.

The Commission's letter to President Baker reaffirming accreditation included this statement: "The Commission was very pleased at how effectively the accreditation cycle appears to have worked during this reaffirmation process. The self-study process undertaken by the university was exemplary. It resulted in a comprehensive analysis of the institution, isolated important issues for campus consideration, and began a process of dialogue. "It is a compliment to the university that the visiting team, which prepared an excellent evaluation of the institution, indicated that many of the recommendations it made had already been identified as concerns in the self study report."

Former employees get emeritus status

The recently retired senior vice president and a chemistry professor who died in 1982 were among seven former Cal Poly employees who have been awarded the honorary emeritus designation.

Dr. Malcolm W. Wilson was both senior vice president and vice president for academic affairs at the time of his retirement last December. He had been at the university since 1963.

Recognized posthumously was Dr. Bruce Kennelly, a member of the faculty since 1947, who died 1982.

Recognition as an emeritus member of the faculty or staff is conferred on employees who have at least 15 years of service at the time of their retirement.

Architect picked for Performing Arts Ctr.

The CSU board of trustees has voted to offer the design commission for the new Performing Arts Center on campus to Arthur Erickson Associates of Los Angeles.

The firm's recent projects include the $38 million Canadian Chancery in Washington, D.C.; the 1.7 million square foot San Diego Convention Center, and the 1.5-acre Watercourt entertainment complex in downtown Los Angeles.

The Performing Arts Center will be a 1200-seat structure located on Grand Avenue near the Cal Poly Theatre. It will serve the needs of both the community and the university for a large-capacity performance venue.

The $22 million center is a joint effort of the City of San Luis Obispo, the Foundation for the Performing Arts Center, and the university.

Recently state voters approved $270,000 in preliminary planning money for the center. Ground breaking is scheduled for fall 1992, and the center should be completed in spring 1995.

SAVE ENERGY

Cal Poly recognized for conservation

Cal Poly was one of only four campuses in the 20-campus CSU system to reduce energy consumption during the 1988-89 fiscal year compared to the year earlier.

"The achievement was significant," says Doug Gerard, executive dean of facilities administration, "because we are under a CSU mandate to reduce energy consumption by 15 percent by the target year of 1992-93 as compared to the base year of 1986-87."

Cal Poly energy consumption was down about 3.5 percent when comparing 1988-89 figures to 1987-88 totals. Preliminary figures for 1989-90 indicate a further reduction in energy consumption.

State water project topic of Aug. 9 talk

Clint Milne, deputy county engineer for the San Luis Obispo County Public Works Department, will speak to area public administrators about the State Water Project. His remarks are planned as part of a luncheon meeting scheduled for noon on Thursday, Aug. 9, at the Motel Inn on Monterey St. in San Luis Obispo.

Milne is currently planning water projects for the San Luis Obispo County Public Works Department.

Part of a series of public events, the Aug. 9 luncheon is sponsored by the San Luis Obispo chapter of the American Society for Public Administration and Cal Poly’s Center for Practical Politics.

The luncheon cost is $7. Reservations can be made by calling Dr. Dianne Long at ext. 2984.

The American Society for Public Administration is a national professional organization dedicated to better government and excellence in public service.

Cal Poly Circle K wins regional award

The “Katherine Project,” a community service effort involving a six-year-old San Luis Obispo girl stricken with encephalitis, played a key role in winning a regional achievement award for the Cal Poly Circle K Club.

A student group affiliated with Kiwanis International, Circle K won the total achievement award for the Cal Poly Circle K Club.

An early enrollment is encouraged.

For employees who are not currently enrolled or who would like to add non-enrolled eligible family members, the vision plan open enrollment period has been extended to Nov. 30. Vision plan enrollment may be verified by checking your paycheck stub for the vision plan deduction ($0.00).

Eligible employees who do not enroll by Nov. 30 will not be able to do so until the contract is renewed, which may be in three to five years.

Changes in vision plan carrier noted

Effective Aug. 1, the vision plan carrier for Cal Poly employees will be changed from Blue Shield/Medical Eye Services to Vision Service Plan (VSP). Currently enrolled employees will be transferred from Blue Shield/MESC to VSP. Completion of enrollment forms is not necessary.

Vision plan coverage will continue at no cost to employees; the state pays the entire premium.

Basic benefits will remain unchanged. After the annual calendar year deductible of $10/person, one examination is covered each year and prescription lenses and frames every two years. The new contract will contain two enhancements — the schedule of reimbursements for using non-participating providers has been improved, and a new benefit has been added for employees in certain classifications who extensively use a video display terminal.

It is important to note that a new procedural change requires employees to obtain authorization from VSP prior to receiving vision services. It is anticipated that authorization request forms, a list of VSP member providers, and more detailed information on enhanced benefits will be distributed to all covered employees by Aug. 1.

For employees who are not currently enrolled or who would like to add non-enrolled eligible family members, the vision plan open enrollment period has been extended to Nov. 30. Vision plan enrollment may be verified by checking your paycheck stub for the vision plan deduction ($0.00).

Coverage will be effective on the first day of the second month after vision plan enrollment is set. Vision plan benefits will be effective on the first day of the second month after vision enrollment forms are submitted to the Personnel Office, so early enrollment is encouraged.

Eligible employees who do not enroll by Nov. 30 will not be able to do so until the contract is renewed, which may be in three to five years.

Academics compared in CSU faculty survey

CSU faculty spend more time teaching, advising and counseling students and less time doing research and seeking funds than their counterparts across the country, according to a survey conducted by the CSU and the California Faculty Association (CFA) in cooperation with the CSU Academic Senate.

The survey found that CSU faculty also perform more institutional service, spend more time on instructional-related paperwork and are somewhat less satisfied with their workload and institutional support. The findings were presented at the CSU Board of Trustees meeting earlier this month.

The survey, conducted in spring 1989 by Dr. Richard Serpe, director of the Social Science Research Center at Cal State Fullerton, questioned faculty at 19 CSU campuses and 35 comparable universities across the country. Participating were 1,954 CSU faculty and 1,117 faculty from other institutions.

Faculty at CSU and across the country worked for their institutions 47.9 and 47.1 hours per week, respectively. CSU faculty said they would prefer to do more research and creative activities and community service rather than spend as much time on teaching and administrative activities.

Reviewing creative activities and research for the 1988-89 academic year, CSU faculty wrote fewer refereed articles in scholarly journals, participated in fewer non-juried exhibitions and performances, wrote more internal research and technical reports as well as more computer software programs. CSU and their peers were about the same in books, textbooks, monographs and patents/copyrights.

Significant differences were found in the number of courses, students, course meeting hours and units taught. On the whole, CSU faculty teach more courses, have more students and more course meetings, teach more units and have a greater number of course and new course preparations.

CSU faculty also provide more individualized instruction for upper division students and serve on fewer thesis or exam committees than do faculty around the country.

A request for proposals from search firms will be noticed shortly by Bruce Richardson, acting general counsel. The full committee will review all submissions from outside companies, and the subcommittee will conduct interviews with the top firms and then make a recommendation to the full committee. At a future meeting, the committee will set criteria for the new chancellor.

The committee also selected Diane Halpern, professor at Cal State San Bernardino, as the faculty member and Robert McDonald, president of the CSU Alumni Council, as the alumni representative to serve on the full committee.
