Summer runs smoothly

This is the final report in the inquiry into summer travel groups. The trip down is a close as you can possibly get with two short sessions. The summer sessions are also more costly in time and effort without accomplishing more than the full quarter. The summer quarter is a welcome sight supported and well used for some of the facilities.

The office personnel work 10 months a year handling the work and summer programs. The workers feel that the school has saved much more work. Mrs. Lucy Schmidt, supervisor of records office, stated that the summer quarter entails less work per time. Therefore it is much easier than the regular quarters. The office has more help, including student workers. With the two summer sessions and the full quarter, grades and transcripts have to be collected three times.

August 12-We started to Boston. On the way the fog disappeared, and we saw part of the beautiful Maine shoreline. Some of the homes were regular mansions with columns and vast expanses of lawn. We drove straight to a camp in Andover, Massachusetts, near Boston, where we were to spend two nights.

EDITOR'S NOTE

That evening, some of the more effluent of our group went into town to have lobster dinner. After that, we all met at a local coffee house and heard a speaker of the American Job Corps. He told us what the purpose of the group is, and its present progress.

August 16-We came into the city again and spent time around the Boston Public Gardens. In the afternoon, we took a guided tour of Harvard University. The library is large, and boasts of being the fourth largest in the world.

August 15/Our first stop in Hartford, Connecticut, was the home office of Aetna Life Insurance, which impressed us both with its size, and its present progress.

From here, we drove to the State Capital Building, a new office building which is a blend of Mosaic and Gothic architecture. Some students at the University of Hartford recommended the building as being a first-class building. It is a state building, but it was too foggy for any kind of view.

August 17-The last day of our tour was spent in New York City. America gave us a fantastic view at their famous places. We went to the English Cliffs in New Jersey and we also saw the famous Rockefeller Center. We went to the top of the Empire State Building and the Chrysler Building, but it was too foggy for any kind of view.

The second day of our tour was spent in New York City. We saw the Radio City Music Hall, which is one of the largest theaters in the world. At an evening show, there shows a fantastic display of dance and stage. Outside we saw the Rockefeller Plaza with its fountains and with all those flying around the perimeter of the plaza.

That night we took our hosts to see the St. Louis Art Museum, the Art Garden Gardens, and the Fall Pointe. We had a wonderful time and we hope to see you all again soon.

As I See It

I recently had the opportunity to talk with Vice President Dale Andrews at great length, concerning the seeming disregard of student opinion and consultation when it comes to making many administrative decisions. Many administrative policies and decisions are made, without the slightest attention paid or respect given to our student body.

Just recently in discussion were Cliff Tallette, managing editor of El Mustang, and Nick Young, El Mustang adviser for the summer, and Thegparty Young, assistant to the Vice President.

It has been my feeling that students should be represented in all operational divisions of our college, not just as representatives of the Student Affairs Council. Student opinion should also be considered in the making of the many administrative decisions, whether it be policy making or deliberations concerning appointments and dismissals of administrative personnel.

Vice President Andrews, considered a top contender to the position of president of the college, expressed to me that student opinion is indeed considered when administrative decisions are made, that our views are given an audience. Really, Vice-President Andrews? For myself, I do not feel that students here at Cal Poly are really given the opportunity to express their views as they should. Let us take a few points in this discussion.

Vice-President Andrews says that the students, though imperfect in their voting, are indeed heard as they express their views. I say that the student voice is not heard at all. The mere mention of student body on the board is curiously appealing for a decision that greatly affects us all. For instance, the Foreign Student Office, established many fine traditions at Cal Poly, and yet all of us, in and out of the mainstream, but isn't about time that a few progressive moves be made to insure the students of an democratic system of government at our college.

As my final act on El Mustang, I would like to make a few proposals that I feel would make for a better campus.

[Proposals discussed]

I sincerely hope that El Mustang and the student body will strive to bring the student voice up from a low whisper to a cry for democratic representation.

Summer success revealed by Foreign Students Office

By Lou Parker

The Foreign Student office finds a very busy and successful summer here this week. Marietta Wadhams, who scheduled the activities, reported that the combined efforts of the volunteer workers and the Foreign Students Office resulted in a well organized and well attended program.

The students toured various locations throughout the area. The trip that impressed the students most was a tour of the Jum-Miguel Mission which introduced them to the Mexican American Indian dance (group). The trip also included a visit to the Mexican students at the San Luis Obispo area. Mr. Wadhams suggested that

The hosting program, which introduces foreign students to the area is fielded of volunteers in order to accommodate the arid student office needs.

Students and families interested in visiting the hosting program should contact the foreign student office.

The hosting program provides a good opportunity for students interested in participating in People to People to become familiar with the club.

Mrs. Wadhams is currently screening applicants for the Mustang Award. The award will be presented, Friday evening at the dance. The award is presented to students who show themselves outstanding in curricular activities. The nomination for the award will be made by El Mustang citizens. Mixer uses color code, produces feed by ton

Did you know that Cal Poly has its own feed mill which produces enough feed to supply all livestock units year round? Many students are unaware of the mill, yet it plays an integral role in living on campus and many others on a wide range of campuses can be found in the American Dairy Town of the Cal Poly Library.

three years to reach the fourth quarter, or as many as you may at the same time as a compensating quarter off.

The new State College policy ensures that the longer quarter will be equal to the other quarters in quality and range of course offerings and will be "adequately financed" from general state sources.

The policy statement predicts a lower enrollment in the summer quarter and anticipates that more than the proportionate number of faculty members will be needed to teach the necessary number of courses.

Faculty

chairman of the Home Economics Department at Santa Maria High School, almond grower, and sugar beet student at Oregon State University and Mr. Russell Wyer, instructor in horticulture at Cal Poly, have been appointed auxiliary instructors.

Four new members have been appointed to the staff of the library. They are Charles II. Myers, who is head of technical services; Flora H. MacKenzie; Edith A. Will, and Evelyn L. Wood, who is assistant periodicals librarian.

V.A. Celebrates

Ninety years have faded into history since 1885 when Cal Poly was founded by General George Custer of the Seventh Cavalry. Custer took up his stand at Little Big Horn in southern Montana. On June 25, 1875, a shocked nation learned that the Indians under their Chief Dan and Crazy Horse had wiped out the entire regiment.

On this 90th anniversary of Custer's Last Stand, the Yosemite Administration notes that the battle was one of America's Indian Wars still living.

Campus flower production run as business enterprise

When the doer aren't eating the roses and dew-shine lilies brought to the monthly the Ornamental Horticulture Department has a flower business.

Although completely run by OH students, the nursery is a state licensed operation and must comply with county agriculture department inspections and rules.

The nursery, which is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays, competes with the local nurseries for both wholesale and retail business. The latter reflects the competition.

After expenses are paid students plan to retain the balance of the remaining profit while the College Foundation expects to benefit.

Each quarter a student monitor is hired, who in turn hires other students, mostly part-time, to handle the sales and other work associated with the flower business.

For some of the 40 or 50 men and women working at the nursery a good recommendation will be cool cash but usually they are getting nursery positions after production. Others find the work a helpful income provider that may or may not be related to their future plans, such as florist or contract work.

While the nursery is a business enterprise, professors are not growing all year long as they might in this climate and are open only to supply demands of certain holiday seasons. Popular sales at Christmas and Easter are the most popular.
