Queen’s crown to be settled by special ballot

The controversy in the Cal Poly football players' efforts to overturn a disciplinary action against the football players has been simmering for several weeks. The players have been appealing the decision, which was made by the university's Board of Trustees, to the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC). The CPUC has set a date for a hearing on the matter, and the players have filed an appeal with the CPUC. The hearing is scheduled for December 10, and the CPUC will issue a decision in January.

Dairy students enter National Show

Four dairy students will be representing Cal Poly in the upcoming National Dairy Show, which is scheduled to take place in October. The students are from the College of Agricultural and Applied Sciences, and they will be accompanied by faculty members and staff from the college.

Colleges approve sale of ‘the pill’

The Board of Regents of the University of California has approved the sale of ‘the pill’, a hormone replacement therapy, to the public. The drug is available for purchase at local pharmacies and health care providers.

Study shows fraternities tend to be stereotyped and anti-intellectual

A study conducted by researchers from Stanford University and Harvard University found that fraternity members tend to hold more stereotypical views than non-fraternity members. The study also found that fraternity members tend to be less interested in intellectual activities. The findings suggest that fraternities may be contributing to a culture of intolerance and anti-intellectualism on college campuses.

Life on Moscow campus described by lecturer

by Carol Sprinkle

It is quite evident that there are many differences between the University of Moscow and Cal State Poly. Some were observed by Dr. Bruce Kennedy, head of the Chemistry Department here, when he gave a series of lectures on Moscow campus last month.

Bruce Kennedy described by lecturer. Moscow University is largely concerned with science, mathematics, and engineering. Students in these fields are exempt from military service.

Most of the dormitories are located away from the main building and are in a well-ventilated cubit area. There is a basin near (where 20 rooms) at Moscow University.

Rent is 100 rubles per month for a furnished dorm room. That is approximately $4 per month. Each dormitory consists of two single rooms which share a common bathroom and a shared toilet. Facilities include a large table, a television, and a refrigerator.

No alcohol is sold on campus. There are hook-up stands in the lobbies which sell sandwiches and American-type rolls. Students may bring in any food they wish.

There are two dining halls which cater to vegetarian and non-vegetarian diets.

All students receive a stipend of 100 rubles ($4) per month, which is paid into a special account with a common bathroom and a shared toilet. Facilities include a large table, a television, and a refrigerator.
