Court of last resort available to students

by John Fleschba

The state Board of Parole, which reviews the release of inmates from state and county prisons throughout the state, has set up a Court of Last Resort in Northern California, effective immediately.

The court was established to hear appeals from all state and county paroling boards. It will hear appeals from all cases in which the parole board's decision is final and no state or federal court has reviewed the case.

Average of 25 appeals

The court will hear an average of 25 appeals per month. It is estimated that the court will handle 300 cases per year.

The court is composed of five judges, each of whom is assigned to hear a certain number of cases. The judges will hear the cases on an average of three days per quarter.

The court is located in the old state penitentiary in San Quentin, where it will be housed in a vacant cell block.

The court is open to the public, and the public is encouraged to attend the hearings.

The court will operate on a limited basis until the court is able to establish a regular schedule.

The court is staffed by a chief clerk, a deputy chief clerk, and two stenographers.

The court is authorized to issue writs of habeas corpus, writs of mandamus, and writs of prohibition.

Civil Service test set for coming months

Residents who are interested in gaining employment with federal, state and local governments should take note of the announcement of the Civil Service Commission's procedures for the examination which will be held in February.

The Army (USCSC) will have vacancies available in various programs, and it is expected that other agencies will also have positions available. Those who are interested in obtaining employment should apply as soon as possible.

The examination will be held on February 8th, and applicants are urged to prepare themselves adequately for the test. Further information and applications may be obtained from the Dean of Students' staff at San Luis Obispo State College.

Poultry banquet

An annual tradition in the fall of every year is the Poultry Banquet, which is sponsored by the San Luis Obispo State College Student Council.

The banquet is a wonderful opportunity for students to enjoy a variety of poultry dishes and to socialize with their peers.

Experiment: Stenner Glen housing

By Jack Grady

A student in a small town in southwestern Oklahoma recently graduated from high school and moved to San Luis Obispo. He discovered that there were few housing options available to him.

Stenner Glen is a new housing development that has recently been completed. It offers both single and double occupancy options.

Mustang Daily
Facility commission urges investigation

A consortium to investigate the financial situation of the college's student organization has been formed by faculty and student leaders. The consortium includes representatives of the Student Senate, the Associated Student Government, and the faculty commission. The consortium will meet with the student organization to discuss its financial situation and to develop a plan for improving the organization's financial management. The consortium will also work with the student organization to develop a budget for the coming academic year.

It is a good feeling when the first match of the season goes your favor. And with a wrestling like Terry Hall starting things off in pretty well all around, it's a good feeling.

Hall started his career at San Bernardino Junior College, where he placed third also at the Athen's Invitational held last weekend.

James Lowe failed to place in the 00-yard high hurdles, placing fifth in the event with a time of 11.5. With all competitors in the event, fire did a fine job, but it wasn't until the Mustangs met the Tulare at Poly when he was beat by the Poly Poly Junior College team. Hall had been offered scholarship from schools like Iowa State, Michigan State, UCLA, UC Berkeley and Arizona State University.

When asked how he felt now that he was in the event, Hall replied that he was prepared to win. "I'm ready," he said. "I mean I've got all the competitors beat me. I'm got a weight advantage and I'm got a height advantage."
