ROTC review set today in 'restricted' stadium

by Tim Loos

Today the largest corps of ROTC west of the Mississippi will march in review to honor the president of the college.

The occasion is the Fourteenth Annual President’s Review, a traditional event that marks the end of the academic year for ROTC cadets. Essentially a tribute to the president of the college, the review is also an awards ceremony.

This year Mustang Stadium will be designated as a classroom as it was last year when there was the threat of a demonstration.

The official reason for the closure of the stadium to non-ROTC students is that the ceremony is to be held during the time period in which the normal leadership courses are conducted. By classifying the review as a class, the administration was successful last year in maintaining a disruption-free atmosphere.

The past several years have seen ROTC become a controversial subject on college campuses across the United States. Demonstrations over ROTC have escalated into riots on some campuses.

This situation has caused many college presidents to think about the importance of ROTC on the college campus. In some schools, credit is no longer given for ROTC courses, and some schools have begun to eliminate the program altogether.

San Jose artist featured

Members of the art faculty of the Education Department hosted a conference of elementary, high school, and college art teachers Saturday, May 17, at the Golden Tee in Morro Bay.

Geared to the first time, the California Art Education Association conference drew teachers from Kern, Kings, Monterey, and San Luis Obispo Counties, according to Bernard Dueske, a member of the art faculty who coordinated arrangements.

A variety of seminars and commercial exhibits and an extensive tour of facilities of the School of Architecture were part of the program.

Morning activities at the resort hotel included panels of elementary, secondary, and college students which discussed art as they see it at their individual educational levels. Also a panel composed of students representing various minority groups gave its impressions of art.

Giving the keynote address for the day-long conference was David Gilhooly, a widely-exhibited artist and member of the San Jose State College faculty.

His remarks came during a luncheon session, also at the Golden Tee.

The 100 art teachers who attended the conference participated in tours of the School of Architecture from 2 to 4:40 p.m.

During that time there were demonstrations and detailed explanations of the school's three major study areas—design, structure and city planning.
The paper's stand

This year, at least since February, Mustang Daily has tried to foster the new. In some instances, it was a noble attempt, but an attempt nevertheless. The paper has gone beyond what Poly students are used to and used its right to comment on the news. In some instances, the students have not agreed with us.

But all that will cease with this Friday's edition. There will be no Tuesday edition next week. Why? Because there is no advertising left to carry this paper.
The same thing will happen next fall unless a substantial subsidy is approved for the newspaper. Up to this point, we have been self-supporting. The new subsidy, if approved, will be used to: 1) help pay production costs, 2) cut down our advertising and 3) help increase our press runs to give the students a newspaper.

And reportedly, they don't like some of the Mustang Daily's editorial comment.
Symphony review criticized

Editor:
The article in the Wednesday edition of the Daily concerning the concert given by the University of Michigan Symphony Band was the second time in less than a month that the reporting of such events was insufficient, inaccurate and lacked the last degree of insight and judgment of good journalism.

In which we refer was that dealing with the School of Architecture's Poly Royal display. But, in the purposes of referring only to events fresh in our minds, we shall concentrate upon the concert article.

Early in the article the writer opened a paragraph with "The evening got off to a slow start." Nothing was more contrary to the truth. The opening number, "M Fanfare," was more than appropriate to catch the attention of the audience and display the band's abilities as one of the world's finest musical organizations. It seems that the author himself was asleep and indeed the only one getting "off to a slow start".

This article most definitely reinforces our opinion that some of the reporters for the Daily are totally in the dark as to the subject of their writings—a situation that we hope this reply will help to rectify. All the authors seemed to remember from the concert was "South Pacific," "Stars and Stripes Forever," and Sousa's famous march, etc., but found such selections that didn't leave the "younger portion of the audience" with a restless air of discontent.

As part of that younger portion of the audience, in contrast to the "oldsters," we found such selections as the Pulitzer Prize winning "Music for Prague, 1948" (of which there was no mention in the article) by far one of the most moving musical renditions ever experienced. Not taking away from the excellent performance of "South Pacific" and Sousa's famous march, etc., we found the sax and piccolo solos by Mr. Lendel and Miss Anderson also, if not more, worthy of mention by the author. It is indeed unfortunate that more people did not attend the concert, and had to instead rely upon an article which included such trite phrases as "With the audience toe-tapping and humming" for a report of the event.

As with the Poly Royal feature earlier this month, we feel that we can no longer let such journalism pass before the student body.

Australian architect speaks

"You should first search into what people think. One thing you'll find is that people, for the most part, agree that truth is better than a lie."

Architect Alejandro Zohn continued by explaining the implications of this in terms of architectural design.

"If you respect reality, then you don't do false arches, or borrow things from other times, or adopt a form that is inconsistent with climate."

"Most people will also agree that being friendly is better than being unfriendly. So why do buildings that are hostile or indifferent, cold and monotonous? They are not respectful to people."

During this personal interview, Zohn noted the title of his Thursday night lecture: Architecture—Is it an Art, a Science, or a Philosophy? The Austrian-born architect who practices his profession in Mexico, flew from Guadalajara last week to lecture here and to speak to design and structural lab students. His work is on display in the Gallery.

He continued explaining his Austrian accent showing through his English, although he also speaks Spanish fluently—with a Mexican accent.

"Some architects put emphasis on one or the three. Some fail to develop them. All of them necessarily works in all aspects of the art. Because all human history is best reflected in architectural structures that show how the people expressed themselves," said Zohn.

Those that emphasize science feel architecture is only a reflection of technological results.

"Others feel architecture should reflect the way people think."

Zohn believes it is all things put together. He thinks an architect needs a philosophy.

"To reflect in what he builds. If he has no consistent thoughts, his work will not be harmonious. The architect must first form consistent thoughts."

But today, today, the pressures of time is on the architect. "It is more difficult to do good architecture—to fulfill the comfort and spiritual needs of people," noted Zohn.

The architect must invent new forms and materials to fulfill these needs. Thus enters the element of science.

Zohn is widely known for the design and engineering of one of Mexico's largest market places. The project was Zohn's engineering thesis which he did at age 24 towards a degree from the University of Guadalajara. He also double majored in architecture and civil engineering.

The 880,000 sq. ft. hyperbolic paraboloid structure was built in Guadalajara.

Anatol Helman, architectural design instructor, said that this work should serve as a good example to students here.
Letters to editor

Editor:

I wish to issue a challenge to all disgusted Poly students, such as Judy Livingston who are frustrated because America isn't perfect and who are disgusted because all aggiee seem to like America just the way it is.

There is a group on campus almost entirely subsidized by school funds, and completely in organization which is responsible for bringing speakers to campus.

These speakers—chosen entirely by Poly students from mile-long rosters of names promoted by various speakers bureaus—tell it like it is. These speakers on campus at costs ranging from $50.00 to $2,000 plus. They speak on virtually all topics—no holds barred.

The group which brings these speakers—the College Union Speakers Forum Committee—is in great need. It is in need of people who want to "help make America what she could be" and who are "sick of unrealistic dreamers" and who want to "learn something as a result of hearing criticism."

It is these people who won't mind the hours of searching for available speakers, of publicity work, of cleanup work, and yes, even of hospitality work involved in being a member of the CU Speakers Forum Committee.

Last year and this year both, some of the more active members of this small speaker's committee were aggies. So if you are an aggie reading this letter, forgive Miss Livingston who is obviously unaware that of all the people in the U.S. who are at present not getting in on the American dream, the U.S. farmer is very high on the list. Aggies better than most know that America "just ain't perfect."

If you are just another Cal Poly student who "hopes that someday America may live up to her potential!" and who believes that a good start in this direction has been made by America as is really is, I extend a hearty invitation to come take part in bringing speakers to the Cal Poly campus. Or at the very least please try to go listen to the speakers that we do bring.

CU Speakers Forum Committee meetings are held every Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Admin. 211-H.

See you there, Miss Livingston,

Key Clegg
P.S. Secretary CU Speakers Forum Committee.

ROTC review today to be restricted

In response to rumblings of dissent against the presence of the military on campus that have been gathering in intensity during the past several years across the country, President Kennedy made last year's speech a policy statement supporting the existence of ROTC on the college campus.

Kennedy's speech was introduced into the Congressional Record by Rep. Burt Talcott, R-Calif., as "an exceptional... and reasonable solution to the problems of dissent and the rights of students to pursue their own goals. Kennedy stated that "The Military Science Department, an integral part of the educational program at Cal Poly... is a vital part of the national defense effort."

Continuing, Kennedy gave his view of his duties concerning ROTC. "I have the same commitment to see that classes in ROTC are uninterrupted by those who disagree with the purposes of training officers for military service as I have a commitment to see that there is no interference with any other educational activity of this college," he said.

Kennedy said he believed dissent must be confined to the right time, place and manner.

If you are just another Cal Poly student who "hopes that someday America may live up to her potential!" and who believes that a good start in this direction has been made by America as is really is, I extend a hearty invitation to come take part in bringing speakers to the Cal Poly campus. Or at the very least please try to go listen to the speakers that we do bring.

CU Speakers Forum Committee meetings are held every Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Admin. 211-H.

Kresge hits paper's policy

by Kit Walechirter
Staff Writer

"I am not out to get Mustang Daily, but I do feel that its financial policies and procedures should be reviewed," said Paul Kresge, the new ASI president.

He said he believes Mustang Daily has been overcharging and therefore would like Mustang Daily to review them. If voids are found, he would like to see them cleared up.

Kresge recommended that for each ad an invoice should be signed and the money paid by the businessman contributing the ad.

"At the end of each school year many outstanding, unpaid bills are written off by SAC, and it is a loss to the student body. I would like to lower this amount of money by my previous suggestions," he said.

Kresge believes this situation could be corrected if there were better communications between the Mustang Daily business manager and the Mustang Daily ad manager.

On the matter of a Mustang Daily subsidy, Kresge said, "Contrary to popular belief. I am in favor of the $2,000 that Mustang Daily is asking for. As for the other $4,000, if we can get it without taking money away from another club which also needs the money, then I am in favor of that."

He said he realizes the new tabloid edition is going to cost money to run on the offset press, but on the other hand that money can be taken from other clubs that may need the funds.

"I would like to see more stories in the newspaper and cut out some of the ads," he added.

Kresge believes this could be done through the money collected from businessmen placing their ads.

Next year Kresge would like to help set up an experimental college which would be considered a learning experience outside of the classroom.

"This activity would give us the facility to expand into the realm of ethnic studies. The students would run the experiment, but the faculty and administration would be well represented. It would be the sounding block for new courses," he explained.

Indians select president

The Cultural Society of India has elected Ram P. Bantil to serve as president of the organization for the coming school year.

The purpose of the society is to develop and present Indian cultural ideas to the American community. The group plans to show documentary movies of India and to participate in college and community activities next year.

Other officers elected to serve with Bantil were Arun Patel, vice president; Shubhash Shah, social chairman; Kamal Bharucha, secretary, and Asis Mohiyuddin, treasurer. The group advisor is Dr. S. X. Datta.

Everyone is welcome to attend the meetings and become members of the society, officers said.

Twin spring concert set

Two college bands will perform on the same program for the first time in May, the twin Spring Concerts scheduled for Friday and Saturday, May 23 and 24.

The concerts will begin at 8 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center at Hancock College and the Cal Poly Performing Arts Center at Hancock College, respectively. Admission will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students.

Featured on the identical programs are the newly-formed 42-piece Cal Poly Band and the former band's Concert Band, along with a samba, swing, and band percussion Ensemble.

All four groups will be under the direction of William V. Johnson, who is now in his third year as a member of the Music Department faculty and conductor of bands at the college.

Having recently returned from its annual concert tour, the college's Symphonic Band is in fine performing shape, according to Johnson.

Among the pieces it will offer during the Spring Concerts are Williams' American March, a concert march; Gustav Holst's difficult First Suite in E-flat for Military Band, in three movements; and John Philip Sousa's Washington Post.

Also of special interest on the programs is Variations on a Four Note Theme by Sandy Feldstein, which Johnson describes as "the real, most profound, and hardest piece that the Cal Poly Band has ever done." Written in 1939 especially for William D. Revell's University of Michigan Symphony Band, Trittich is in three movements, each calling for the musical qualities unique to a band.

Also on the program is the American March from Carl von Weber's Concerto No. 3 for Clarinet and Orchestra, Soloist to be Mrs. Marshall Wright, a new member of the Cal Poly music faculty.

Making its debut during the May 23 and 24 concerts will be the Concert Band for its first public performance. The group will play Frank Ericson's Fantastic Fanfare.

The Concert Band is a strict concert ensemble, while the Symphonic Band doubles as the Mustang Marching Band during football season.

The Dickenson Band and the Percussion Ensemble will round out the program. Both groups draw their members from the Music Department faculty and conductor of bands at the college.

Blood drive slated at Health Center

It's that time of year again. Pull up your sleeves, gather your staff or patients, and show your support for the Health Center.

The Health Center is the annual school Blood Drive to replenish units used during the past year.

Any student or staff member can draw from this blood account free.

Donors for the drive must be 18 years old. You can sign-up for any time between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. on Thursday by calling either the Health Center or Rally at 302-2402.

Book drive started to help Filipinos

The United Mexican-American Students are collecting books for needy college students in the Philippines tomorrow and Thursday in front of the Black Bar and the Library.

The Charmers are collecting the books in response to a letter that appeared in Mustang Daily which asked for books of any kind for students in the Philippines. The letter was originally addressed to Dr. John A. Lahey, the late president of the college.

The letter, which has unmarked books is urged to give them to UAMR at its pick-up point and the books will be shipped off to the Philippines, officials said.

Symphony to perform

Works by Bach, Haydn, and John D. Russell of the faculty will be featured during back to back concerts by the college's Little Symphony Orchestra in Santa Maria and San Luis Obispo on May 29 and 30.

The identical programs are scheduled for 8:30 p.m. on the Performing Arts Center at Iian Hancock College and the Cal Poly Theater, respectively.

The public is invited to attend both concerts which will be presented without an admission charge, according to Clifford E. Swan, conductor of the orchestra and a member of the Music Department faculty.

Local businessman set noon review;

Variations on a Four Note Theme by Sandy Feldstein will be played by the Percussion Ensemble. Among the instruments used in the ensemble are tympani, snare drum, tom tom, bass drum, synthaphone, balsa marimba, and whip.

Tickets are being sold now at Brown's Record Center and Ogden's Stationer in San Luis Obispo at the ASB office and by band members.

Czech Black Book

The Czech Black Book, which appeared during the height of the Czechoslovakian crisis last summer, will be reviewed during the Books At High Noon Luncheon today.

Tom Gartland, a graduate of this school who now manages the Anderson Hotel in San Luis Obispo, will present the review.

The book is entitled "The New Czechoslovakia" and was published in the college Staff Dining Room.

The Czech Black Book was written by the late Kliment Gottwald, former President of the Czechoslovak Republic. It presents an account of the first few weeks of Soviet occupation and includes material from the Soviet-sponsored newspaper, White Press which published in Prague.

The luncheon is scheduled for noon in the college Staff Dining Room.

ACM highlights computer phone

Tonight the telephone system will process a unique call. It will be to a computer located in either Los Angeles or San Francisco.

The Association for Computing Machinery is presenting an Authority on Remote Time Sharing. Dr. J. William Bergquist of the faculty will be demonstrating remote time sharing using the new communication method A.P.L. "Ivarson Method" on an IBM 360 system located in either Los Angeles or San Francisco.

He will be communicating with the computer via an ordinary telephone connection.

Dr. Bergquist joined IBM as an Applied Science Representative in 1967 working with the application of first generation computers to problems of engineering computation and operations research.

He has worked on a number of assignments which include aerospace systems analysis, applied mathematics with the Federal Systems Division and resident mathematician at Cal Tech in applied math and biological systems.

At present, Bergquist is responsible for the market introduction and application of advanced computer application programs that facilitate mathematical computation and digital simulation.

The A.C.M. is inviting all interested students and faculty to attend this unique "dialog computer demonstration. It will be held in the Math Building room 301 from 7 to 9 p.m. tonight.

Associate dean arrives in June

Dr. Don M. Morris of Moorpark College will become associate dean of continuing education on this campus.

Dr. Dale Andrews, academic vice president, said Dr. Morris, who has been assistant dean of instruction and coordinator of community services at Moorpark College since 1967, will assume his new duties June 1.

Dr. Morris, 39, attended William Mitchell College (1948-1950), and transferred to this school, where he received a B.A. degree in education in 1955. He received an MA degree in education here in 1958 and the EdD degree from University of California at Los Angeles in 1961.

In San Luis Obispo, Dr. Morris was also employed as housing director, counselor, student loan advisor and personnel official. He directed the San Luis Obispo elementary and secondary summer school programs and was responsible for educational programs operated by the city schools at California Men's Colony. He also taught at Merced High School.

As associate dean of continuing education, Dr. Morris will assume responsibilities for Summer Sessions and Extension Programs, which were formerly included in the responsibilities of the associate dean, special programs.

Vice President Andrews said, "The appointment of Dr. Morris to this new position will enable Cal Poly to improve and increase services to teachers and others who benefit from educational programs which recognize their special needs."

Dr. Morris served for three years as director of the Bimini Valley Adult Schools and Summer Schools and was also involved in the extension program of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Early registration

New students will have an opportunity to attend a program of early registration this summer. This program will extend from July 1 to Aug. 10.

New freshmen and transfer students will be able to complete counseling tests, meet with their advisors, register for the Fall Quarter and complete their fees payments, all in a single day, according to Everett Chandler, dean of students.

The new students will attend early registration in groups of a hundred at a time. These groups will be divided according to different schools in the college.

Parents and new students are invited to stay in Yosemite Hall during their overnight visit to the campus.

"We expect to have from 1,800 to 2,200 students attend early registration," Dean Chandler stated.

Markowitz: SNAP kept me from being president

Dave Markowitz, defeated AII candidate for president, admitted to Mustang Daily he had made one campaign mistake in helping Paul Krezas.

"I didn't make any mistakes in the campaign itself," he said in an interview, "but I made it a year and a half ago when I joined Students for New Action Policies (SNAP).

"That's the only thing that kept me from being student body president."

Markowitz, who lost to Krezas by some 800 votes in a referendum 40 percent voter turnout, knew he would lose after the third day of campaigning.

"I knew Krezas had started with tremendous support and I could see that I wouldn't have enough time to remove his entire base," he conceded over a chair at his home and declared that he would no longer take part in student government. He commented, "The student body rejected my gift, my services and accepted Paul's instead."

However, he stated he would remain in student politics. He defined it as "the act of a student in a regular election."

Markowitz, showing slight bitterness, made some observations on the election.

He said the worst of the ballots cast were "anti-Markowitz."

He also noted, "I've done many things more important than SNAP, but I'm still stereotyped."

Administrative smoker, Markowitz spoke through a continual bellow of smoke. "I don't think the campaign split the campus."

"It isn't true that for a long time there's been a polarizing of ideas in this school," he pointed out (Krezas) is able to realize this.

During the campaign, Mustang Daily came under attack for alleged "one-sided" coverage of the election. Markowitz, who had been editorially supported by Mustang Daily, offered his thoughts.

"I believe Mustang Daily and any newspaper has the responsibility to be unbiased in its news coverage."

"But I also believe every newspaper, including Mustang Daily, has the right to reflect the opinion of the editors in the editorial columns."

As Krezas' defeated opponent, Markowitz doesn't think an investigation should take place concerning alleged spending violations.

"I feel I've been beaten and it's my duty to concede to him."

Markowitz, a Democrat, is planning another campaign, this time political. He is running for national committee for the Young Democrats in California.

As he ended, he parted his thoughts in a quiet sentence. He revealed, "I hope Paul will do a good job."

Cal State Los Angeles swept both games in last Saturday's twinbill against Coach Bill Hicks and his baseball nine, thus becoming the first team to sweep a three-game series from the Mustangs this season. The 8-6 and 8-5 victories for the Dablos, the latter in 11 innings, snuffed out Cal Poly's faint hopes for the CCAA title.

The twin losses meant that Coach Hicks ended his 18th and final season on a losing note. The Mustangs needed only one win to match his most winningest seasons. Poly finished the season with a 10-21-1 overall mark and an 8-10 record in conference action. L.A.'s season mark is 23-25-1 overall, with a 7-4 CCAA slate.

Catcher Lee Smith hit a solo homer to spark a four-run Mustang rally in the fourth to be the first game at 4-1. Mustang Gary Kimmel singled in one run and right fielder Steve Koski issued a two-run walk hit to cap the rally. Cal State's Ken Lohnes countered the San Luis attack with a two-run homer in the fifth to put L.A. ahead for keeps.

Kimmel and Kimmel each went two for four to lead the 10-hit Mustang attack. Alex Schumacher had a single and a homer for the winners. Lohse singled and scored the final run in the 11th inning of the nightcap when he jarred the ball loose from Mustang catcher Steve Brummer. He then scored on a sacrifice fly by Dave Cates to right field Koski.

A pair of singles and a sacrifice fly by Lee Smith knotted the score at 7-7 in the sixth to fire a spark of hope for the bewildered Poly ballists.

San Luis Obispo's Rick Galindo had five singles in six trips while Kimmel went three for six. Brummer, Mike Mancoritis, Koski and Mike Nielsen had two apiece in Poly's 10-hit attack.

In Friday's opener of the series, the Dablos jolted the Mustangs behind the 11-strikeout pitching of Lloyd Gladden.

Cal State tallied twice after two outs in the fifth. Tony Galindo was hit by a Mike Young pitch and scrambled to third on a double by Schumacher. Galindo scored on a single by teammate Lee Wayant while Schumacher gained the plate when shortstop Rick Passen overthrew first. L.A. scored an insurance run in the seventh when Galindo doubled and scored on a pair of infield outs.

Poly only threatened seriously once. Pence single, went to second on a wild pitch and moved to third due to an overthrow on a pickoff attempt as Kimmel drew a walk. It was the only time the Mustangs had more than one base runner in a single inning.

Weyant collected three singles in four trips while Schumacher and Galindo each had a pair for the Dablos. L.A.'s Gladden spaced five hits and issued only one walk to go with his 11 strikeouts.
