Coffee may be harmful

Coffee may be harmful, according to a research study by Dr. Paul Oglesby of Illinois. The study investigated the correlation between coffee consumption and the development of certain diseases. The research indicates that coffee consumption is associated with an increased risk of certain health conditions.

A Nobel Prize winner from Colombia, Martin*, visited Mustang Daily and conversed with the people. He was fluent in Spanish, and his visit captured a little girl's heart.

A young girl came up to me, knowing that I was from the United States, and asked me if I had a pencil. I gave her a pencil, and she happily accepted it.

The active ingredient injected into the mice will be in the form of coffee, No-do*, and other non-prescription drugs.

The Coordinating Council has recommended a reorganization plan for the college. The proposal involves merging seven schools into one institution, which would be beneficial for the students and faculty.

Kennedy revealed, "The Coordinating Council does not have all the information to make recommendations to the legislature."

So while it doesn't mean that we have to go to a site, it does have a bearing on possible influence on the legislature. If the proposal is approved, the college will have a larger impact on the legislative body.

The purpose of the briefing was to present the reorganization plan to the legislature. The proposal would be implemented by the Board of Trustees.

As early as March, 1989, I discussed with the chairman of the Academic Senate the procedure for such an academic reorganization. As a result, the Academic Senate ad hoc committee was established on April 8, 1989. I requested that committee to work toward a mid-December 1989 deadline for a plan. In addition, there was considerable discussion and planning on this matter taking place in and between certain departments whose original proposals for "school status" were a part of the motivation for the study." He had listed among these the departments of Business and Home Economics.

Kennedy continued, "I asked Dr. Dave Grant, chairman of the Senate and of the ad hoc committee, to hold the committee's recommendations in abeyance until the Academic Senate would have a bearing on possible influence on the legislature on the decision."

At the press conference Kennedy revealed, "The Coordinating Council does not have all the information to make recommendations to the legislature."

Martines said that Clay is anxious to fight again and would like to fight in California. According to Martines, Clay said, "Man, that's the way I make my living." Clay now is touring the Midwestern universities giving talks on his ideas.

Toward the end of his term, Martines flew to Alberta, Canada to help organize 250 students from 157 different countries. These young people came to spend their one month in Peru and a month in Paraguay. Volunteers will receive language training in Thailand before they are set to work on the Mekong River area of Thailand. "It is important that I tour the training area to determine if any changes must be made in the training program," Gibson said.

Under the leadership of Warren Smith, former dean of agriculture, a five-man team works at Bangpra School in Thailand to train Thai agriculture instructors to fill the needs of that country. The teacher training is done under contract to the Agency for International Development.

Gibson expects to meet and discuss Thailand's agriculture programs. His trip will take approximately three weeks, from Jan. 18 to Feb. 7, according to Gibson.

"I lived one week with people from 137 different countries, and we got along great. We played our guitars and sang songs. While I was there, I turned 21 and all the guys took me outside and tossed me up in the air 31 times. You can imagine all the bruises I got. Also, I made an honorary Kiwi which is what the New Zealanders call themselves," he said.

Now Martines has come back to finish up his fruit production major. He should graduate in two years.

Campus horse program proceeding at gallop

This school has one of the strongest Thailand's production programs in the country with its average of about 50 head. The college Foundation raises both thoroughbreds and Quarter Horses for use in the instructional programs.

The thoroughbreds are sold as yearlings at the various auctions. The college will have a chance to prove themselves on the track as two-year-olds.

Quarter Horse offspring are sold by private treaty on campus as well as at public auctions. Many Quarter Horses are raised to riding age and trained by students in the training classes before they are sold.

The college thoroughbreds sell for $1000 to $2000, while the Quarter Horses bring anywhere from $800 to $3000.

The thoroughbreds are bred free of charge to various stallions in the state as a courtesy of the California Thoroughbred Breeder's Association. The cooperation and donations have been present since the horse program began on this campus in 1966. At that time, the horse unit was started as a joint venture with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and the California Thoroughbred Breeder's Association supplying the original breeding stock as a gift.

The horse program is self-sustaining and requires no tax support. Income from the sales goes directly to the Foundation, where it is used to continue the program.

The Peace Corps program in Thailand is described, with emphasis on the role of the Peace Corps volunteers in agricultural training.

A new concept of crop production is discussed, along with a story about a Peace Corps volunteer teaching agriculture in Thailand.
Instructor viewing Near East poultry

Richard L. Leach, head of Poultry Oberations, is now on leave in India where he is conducting a survey of the Indian poultry industry. While in India he is also surveying the role of the Peace Corps in providing aid to the Indian poultry industry.

Leach will spend the Winter Quarter, on leave without pay from his academic post, in India on behalf of the Development and Resources Corporation of New York.

He will be headquartered in New Delhi, India, but he will travel through much of the country investigating poultry operations and educational programs that serve the poultry industry.

Leach's report on the technological assistance to be provided by the poultry industry will be used as a basis for determining how Peace Corps volunteers may assist in the program and what kind of training programs for volunteers would be necessary.

This is Leach's first trip to India, but he has viewed poultry operations in 26 other countries mostly in Europe. Leach presented a paper on college poultry education at the World Poultry Congress in Kiev, Russia.

Yearbook sales up 10% from 1969

"To date, we've sold more yearbooks than ever before, 10 per cent over last year's sales," said Hugo Vincent, El Rodeo yearbook sales manager.

Registration days for the Winter Quarter were the last chance for students to purchase the yearbook. Obviously many students did purchase at that time since 307 books were sold last year at this time.

Meanwhile, El Rodeo editor, Adrienne Donaldson, said she knows about one third of the book is now complete. "We have just received the color proof pages from the yearbook company and my staff and advisor are very pleased."

El Rodeo features more color photography than ever before in addition to a new and different layout. It is a staff of almost 20 students. Mrs. Donaldson said.

300 expected here for engineering talk

About 300 persons interested in engineering graphics are expected to attend a series of meetings on that subject Jan. 21-24. The annual one-year meeting of the American Society for Engineering Education's Graphics Division is the occasion.

Planned during the four-day gathering, which is expected to draw representatives of colleges, universities, businesses, and industries from throughout the U.S. and Canada, are a varied program of panel discussions, demonstrations, tours and committee meetings.

Among its highlights will be a banquet during which Jack Ryan, Los Angeles, chief engineer for Mattel Industries, will be the speaker. It will take place in the Staff Dining Room the evening of Jan. 23.

The ASEE graphics meeting will open Jan. 21 with registration and a tour of the California Military Science Department at nearby San Simeon and the atomic generating plant being constructed by Pacific Gas and Electric Company at Diablo Canyon.

A schedule of events before the gathering adjourns at noon, Jan. 24, are presentations of a number of professional papers.

General chairman for the meeting, which is being hosted by the School of Engineering and Technology, is R. Wallace Reynolds, a member of the Engineering Technology Department faculty.

Assisting him are Franklin G. Crane, Ted G. Graves, Earl R. Hesch, and Richard T. Kombrinck. All except Crane, who teaches as a member of the Mechanical Engineering Department staff, also are members of the engineering technology faculty.

Hope—just like apple pie

by GARY WILLIAMS

If you were near a television last Thursday night, you are expected to have watched the Bob Hope Christmas Show.

Hope has been making his Vietnam tour for six years. He is what some people have forgotten existed, a true American. Hope loves his country and his country definitely loves him.

On his tours through the fighting lands, Hope takes many movie stars with him. But the performers who must have brought tears to many eyes was Connie Stevens.

When she began singing Silent Night you just felt like crying you were so proud of what Hope is doing.

For six years, there has been unrest in this nation concerning the Vietnam crisis. Hope seems to be doing something about it and he shows the American the feeling which has become somewhat disrepute in this country. Whether you disagree with the war or not you must admire Hope's love and pride for his country.

Our country seems to be divided in feeling toward this war, but one thing is true among all—the whole country believes in Bob Hope. Hope is the American hero that we all want our children to know.

Hope said that he hopes this will be his last trip for the fighting cause. He'd like to entertain those men here in the United States. I couldn't agree more.

Military speaker

Dr. Harold Brod, guest lecturer for the Military Science Department, will speak on "Diplomacy and Military Instruments" in the A.C. Auditorium, Jan. 21, 11 a.m.

Auto embarks on unplanned joyride

Well, maybe there was no where else to park.

Some people might have thought that was the case last Thursday afternoon when they saw a Volkswagen on the lawn beside the Administration building.

Unfortunately that's not what happened. Paula Andersen, who lives in Yosemite Hall, had borrowed her roommate's car and parked in the lot next to the Administration building. She was gone for about five minutes and returned to find, rather not find her car where she left it.

"At first I thought someone had stolen it," said Paula, a math major. She finally found the car about fifteen feet from the building, noticeably sunk in the muddy grass. She remembers setting the parking brake before she left.

A security officer came to her rescue and called for a tow truck from the campus motor pool. In a few minutes Paula drove away.

The only injury was to Miss Andersen's feelings. She remarked, "I'm so embarrassed."

EDITORIAL

The editorial power of a newspaper is very great, and therefore carries with it an extraordinary obligation to the readers, who expect it to be factual and fair. Mustang Daily has not met this obligation to its readers in the editorial entitled "Funds Spent Unwisely." (Jan. 13, 1970). Any one with even a slight knowledge of the current ASSIST program would find that your editorial demonstrates your ignorance.

Why wasn't the publication available for registration Winter Quarter? The major reasons are:

1. The final decision concerning the procedures of this year's program was delayed for four months awaiting research from the Chancellor's office and administration officials on possible libel suits from instructors to the Editor. The research is not available on this campus. The publication this year or last year. The bookstore is able to have a check on the fact that all material is accurate, then it will help him to examine these evaluations closely, to see an endorsement by the particular President or faculty of that institution.

2) The final decisions concerning the procedures of this year's program were delayed for four months awaiting research from the Chancellor's office and administration officials on possible libel suits from instructors to the Editor. The research is not available on this campus. The publication this year or last year, we have eliminated all over-simplifications should be referred to in the following excerpt.

More on ASSIST

Editor: After reading your editorial, "Funds spent unwisely," I feel compelled to reply in defense of the ASSIST program. Though the editorial opinion, as stated, is a reasonable one (not without some base), many of the editorial's charges and certainly its gross over-simplifications should be referred to in the following way.

Your editorial stated that: San Diego State's publication is sold each semester. We contacted the Associated Student Graduate Manager at San Diego State who informed us that they have no publication this year or last year. The students are apathetic about the whole program. Many schools have a publication on campus; that compile faculty evaluation using few students as evaluators with little reliability or data. Out-forecasting publication's data was compiled from 30,000 questionnaires sent out. Our survey of campus instructors is not a fair evaluation of faculty. However, their efforts have been thwarted by some more faculty, not the students, whom they are helping to prepare to be responsible citizens. The editorial mentioned the success of the publication at San Diego State, and can also recite the names of many other colleges and universities where publications have experienced success (Purdue, Williamette, San Jose State, UC Davis etc.). However, if you examine these evaluations closely, you will see that most of them are off-campus publications.

Which is more worthwhile, a faculty newspaper that permits instructors to increase their quality of instruction for 1970 or an eight-page newspaper that is 45 to 50 cents per advertising, has been very few new instructors may be evaluated the following year. ASSIST is trying to provide a program that is totally ignorant of his topic, for 1970.

The ASSIST program has been an instant success, but to doom it to failure is unfounded. The ASSIST committee has worked long and hard to publish a meaningful faculty evaluation. This year's publication came out in Spring with limited evaluation opportunities and hardly any fanfare. The current publication promises to be more complete. Let's look this one over and then decide. Besides, Cindy Arey and crew were begging for help to get the publication off the ground in the best possible way. It's kind of funny to see problems being brought to light AFTER the evaluation was completed, even though early in September and October, ASSIST needed much student input as possible (by the way, this need was publicized in Mustang Daily).

Some instructors, however, do not have any banked leaves. According to CAM, the special leave is separate and distinct from the sabbatical leave program and has no effect on sabbatical leave eligibility. The instructor who takes a research or creativity leave is obligated to teach in the State College for at least two terms for each term of leave immediately following the conclusion of the leave. A banked leave means the instructor has worked during the Summer Quarter without pay so that he may take a quarter off during the year with pay. The opposite of a banked leave is the advance quarter off where the instructor takes Fall, Winter, or Spring Quarter off with pay and then agrees to work the following summer without pay. An instructor who has been employed by the college for at least one year may take a leave of absence without pay for 15 days to two years. Such a leave may be taken for reasons of health (including pregnancy), welfare, or benefit of the college," states CAM. In a refreshing change from the recent rock concerts on campus, the Music Department presented—as the Jan. 13 College Hour Concert—an hour of Chamber music in the Little Theater.

Framed by the soft blue backdrop, the Chamber Singers opened the program with "Matona, Mia Cara," a playful madrigal depicting a boastful fellow singing outside the window of his lover, trying to convince her that he is the best of all singers and that his love for her is as perfect as his song.

Conducted by John Russel, the 10-member group closed with four lilting English songs.

The aura of restfulness generated by the Chamber Orchestra affected one elderly woman, who swooned peacefully in her chair at the rear of the Little Theater, waking only when the satisfied audience began filing from the room.

Campus photo exhibition, 'Architecture in California'

"Architecture in California," a photo exhibit celebrating the centennial of the University of California, is now on exhibit in the Architectural Gallery.

The photographic material assembled for this exhibition reveals the diversity of West Coast architects, builders and owners. The styles and forms that evolved from the impact of the immigrant spirit in California are represented in all the photographs. The exhibit carries the viewer from San Francisco's elaborately ornamented structures to the simplicity in design by men like Bernard Maybeck.

The Architectural Gallery is located in the Engineering West Building. The exhibit is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily until Jan. 31.
