David Walch New Library Director

Appointment of David B. Walch of Williamsville, N.Y., as director of the University Library has been announced by Hazel J. Jones (Vice President for Academic Affairs). Dr. Walch, who currently is dean of academic services and director of the library at State University College at Buffalo, N.Y., will begin his new duties on August 1.

He succeeds Angelina Martinez, who has been acting director of the library since January, 1979. Miss Martinez is expected to return to her former duties as director of reader services for the library.

Selection of Dr. Walch for the Cal Poly post was recommended by a university-wide committee of faculty and library staff members that considered 47 candidates during a year-long search. Vice President Jones is pleased with having obtained a person of Dr. Walch's experience to head the university's library services.

"We are indeed fortunate to have Dr. Walch join us at Cal Poly," she said. "His experiences as a university administrator, librarian, faculty member, and consultant have given him an unusually broad range that will be of value as we further develop our learning resources."

Dr. Walch, a native of LeGrande, Ore., holds degrees from Eastern Oregon College, University of Illinois, and University of Utah, where he earned his Doctor of Philosophy Degree in educational administration. Prior to becoming dean of academic services at SUC Buffalo in 1974, he was on the University of Utah faculty for four years and director of the library and assistant librarian at Church College of Hawaii for five years.

In addition to directing the 450,000-volume library, Dr. Walch has administered the Instructional Resources Center and the Academic Computing Center while at SUC Buffalo. He has also been active as a consultant on libraries and educational services for Brigham Young University (Utah); Skidmore College (N.Y.); the State University Colleges at New Paltz and Fredonia (N.Y.); the Excelsior Education Centre, Kingston, Jamaica; and the Salt Lake City (Utah) Public School District.

In addition to being a member of the American Library Association, Dr. Walch has held positions of leadership in the Association for Education Communications and Technology, the New York Library Association, and the Western New York Library Resources Council.

VEP garners audiovisual awards

Vocational Education Productions, a multi-media educational service organization based at Cal Poly, received three Certificates of Creative Excellence during the 13th annual United States Industrial Film Festival recently in Elmhurst, Ill.

The certificates were won by three sound-filmstrips, "Agricultural Credit," "Agricultural Marketing," and "Resource Law Enforcement," according to Eduardo Apodaca (VEP Director). With Clay Little (Agricultural Management as its technical advisor, "Agricultural Credit" deals with the how, why, and where of applying for ranch and farm credit.

David J. Schaffner (Agricultural Management) was technical advisor for "Agricultural Marketing." It provides information on the marketing alternatives for producers of agricultural products. "Resource Law Enforcement," which provides career choice information for young people, was produced with technical advice from Jack E. Bedwell (Acting Head, Natural Resources Management).

The Industrial Film Festival is sponsored by the U.S. Festivals Association in affiliation with the Chicago Film Council and the Chicago Audio Visual Producers Association. Apodaca said the festival is the top of the line for audiovisual awards and that awards received there are regarded highly in the educational film business.

Now in its 28th year of operation, Vocational Education Productions operates under the auspices of the Cal Poly Foundation. VEP specializes in the production and distribution of instructional materials for agriculture programs in high schools and community colleges throughout the U.S.

Roser performances and workshop

"Magic and poetry rolled into one... It is a performance eminently worth going out of one's way to see" is one critic's appraisal of the puppetry of Albrecht Roser of Stuttgart, West Germany. For San Luis Obispo residents, his performances this summer won't be that far away. Roser will perform at the Cal Poly Theatre on Friday and Saturday (June 27-28) at 8 pm. He will also conduct a workshop during his six-day visit to San Luis Obispo.

Roser's marionette presentation, "Gustaff and His Ensemble," is brought to life with beguiling artistry in a series of solo vignettes. The clown, Gustaf and his horse, as well as the other characters, become wonderfully real through Roser's amazing touch. Roser aims his performances at adult audiences, 15 and older. Because of the intellectual and emotional sophistication of Roser's art, this puppet performance is an entertainment for adults.

"Puppetry in this country has traditionally been labeled a children's art," said Michael R. Malkin (Speech Communication). "Roser's performances break that stereotype. In fact, the adults who saw him perform here three years ago gave his a prolonged standing ovation."

Tickets for the performances, open to the public, are for reserved seating only at $4. They are available at the University Union Ticket Office and at the door before each performance. Doors open promptly at 7:30 pm.

During his stay in San Luis Obispo, Roser also will conduct a six-day workshop on "The Art of the Marionette." The workshop, from June 27 to July 2, includes six 3-hour sessions and several lunches with Roser, as well as the opportunity to see him perform. Roser will demonstrate a technique for making a combination rod puppet-string-marionette. Interested participants should call Ext. 2158. Space for the workshop is limited, so early registration is advised.

Indian irrigators study at Poly

Irrigation specialists from India are receiving a two-week introduction to California water management practices this summer under the tutelage of two agricultural engineering professors at Cal Poly. The project is the result of a $117,600 contract between the government of India, The World Bank of Washington, D.C., and the Cal Poly Foundation.

Heading up the project are L. Joe Glass, who is serving as project director, and Charles Burt. It marks the second straight year Cal Poly and The World Bank, an international organization specializing in low-cost loans to underdeveloped countries, have cooperated in a project to train Indian water management specialists.

Last year's project involved a six-week study of California and Arizona water-use practices for the participants from India. This year's project involves three groups of nine Indian irrigation engineers each who will study irrigation systems in South Korea, California and either Spain or Tunisia. The first group arrived in California June 16, other groups will arrive July 21 and August 25.

While in California the groups will attend seminars at Cal Poly and visit irrigation projects in the San Joaquin Valley and the Sacramento Valley. Under the guidance of Dr. Glass and Burt, the groups will concentrate on the organization and management of irrigation districts and water user associations; modern water delivery systems; design and operational requirements of farm irrigation methods, especially surface water methods; and conjunctive use of well and canal water.

Fossil fish fascinates Fierstine

For a paleontologist, that meticulous explorer of geology and prehistoric life through the study of fossils, it's a coveted opportunity. A rare fossil millions of years old has been found, probably the most complete specimen yet, in an area that is virtually unexplored and holds the potential for other "finds."

The paleontologist is Harry Fierstine (Biological Sciences). The fossil is a billfish, probably a marlin, the first found in the Asian or the Western Pacific area representing the Plio-Pleistocene era. The area is the Bolinao Peninsula 250 miles north of Manila in the Philippines.

Dr. Fierstine left June 1 for the month-long exploration and collection project, sponsored by the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History and funded with a $6,900 grant from the National Geographic Society's Committee for Research and Exploration. Dr. Bruce Welton, assistant curator in vertebrate paleontology at the museum, is accompanying Fierstine on the project.

The fossil billfish, estimated to be two million years old, was found in a hillside by a local farmer, according to Fierstine. An internationally recognized researcher in the field of fossil billfishes, he was invited to conduct further exploration by members of the Philippine scientific community.
