Your stars are mine

by JOHN FITZRANDOLPH

"The stars in your sky are the stars in mine and both of us are locked to each other in naivete."

Joan's enchanting and naive philosophy was born of her Search for Peace, and of her friendship with Cyprus, a befriended American Indian for whom she's named her flat on the campus. Joan, in her rockers, with Cyprus, flat on her lap, was listening to the rhythmic thud of drums coming from the Chevrolet. Joan was telling Cyprus that she was going to try to negotiate a better deal for Cyprus. Joan, an American Indian, was being driven by the drumbeat of the drums, and the rhythm of her life. Cyprus, a native American, was being driven by the drums, and the rhythm of his life. Cyprus and Joan were locked in a circle of love, and their music was their own. The sun was coming up about the time that Cyprus was going to leave his home in Palo Alto. Cyprus was going to leave his home in Palo Alto, and Joan was going to stay home in Palo Alto. Hi Everybody!!

The names of five new members of the faculty of the School of Engineering and Technology have been announced.

Dr. Fabridus, who will join the faculty of the Electronic Engineering Department, has received his doctorate from the University of Missouri at Rolla and has been a graduate of the University of Missouri at St. Louis. He has been a graduate assistant in the Department of Engineering at the University of Missouri at St. Louis.

Joining the Electrical Engineering Department teaching staff after having been on the faculty at University of Miami in Florida most recently is Dr. Goldberg. He received his doctor's degree from the University of Florida and is also a graduate of Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey.

"The two decisive powers of government with respect to war are the powers to conscript and the power to tax."—A. J. Muste—

I deny the government both these powers over my life; the first by conscientiously objecting to the war and the draft, and the second by refusing to pay all war related taxes.

When a person withholding the 10 percent tax the phone company usually informs him that notice of his non-payment will be given to the Internal Revenue Service. If a person pays his phone bills by check the phone company will also give IRS the name of his bank. This enables IRS to place a lien or a tax lien on the refuser's bank account. If they are unable to locate it, the IRS tries to determine his place of employment so that a portion of his salary can be attached.

If these measures are inadequate, the IRS can seize the refuser's personal property, such as a car, and seize it from him, and keep the amount of unpaid tax. It should be remembered, though, that even though the government collec

A childhood tale
by CAROL BOWARDS

All day the children run outside or inside. They are skinny and shabby with summer. They can't love them and only consider them to be their friends. George is the leader; he is fast and ruthless. His name is hated by all followers from the first year to the seventh. He is hated by all students and followers of wood. He tries to hate me and I kept cold on his head but he always goes the other way. It is the spokesman for his 15- year-olds friends when they want to "kick me and more than that." When I'm screwed out of something the coke machine pays for a good long time and try to get some sort of money.

I ask to come to my apartment but when they live they have only the nerve to stump another meeting: "Will he be home tonight?" All their friends, I said, "I am planning on it. (puffing my own cigarettes) crumbles the slightest friendliness. My dear old shabby put-on into childish gentleness. I shed my old friends with them at first but when I was in school, half-child, half-not old period.

We have only come to their full glory and daring byed in the second of August. When construction men must complete the window air-conditioning and the building, for which they have been bequeathed a lifetime was considering the request.

Then Claude Killy, in all his glory spoke of returning to his old school to become the President's Commlstan on Education. S. Dumke has expressed concern over the Los Angeles hearings of the President's Commission on Campus Universe.

Criticising the Commission's work in California, Dumke believes that their reports present a poorly balanced view of the problem.

"It appears that the Commission has largely overlooked, again with few exceptions, those institutions and systems like the California State Colleges which by firm, reasonable, consistent and successful policies, have done much to warrant restoration of the public's confidence."

Dumke points out that the people of this country deserve the whole story, since "the war against campus violence is not being fought everywhere."

He added that the public should be made aware of the positive side of the story to restore its faith and confidence in higher education.

The above event is typical of the racing which occurs from May to September at the Atascadero Speedway. According to Robert Elliott and William Jewell, operators of the speedway, the quarter mile clay track was built in 1963 by Elmer Lee, on a portion of his ranch. It has been in operation, with the exception of one year, since construction.

The cars racing at the speedway are divided into three classes: "J"-cars, limited and super-modified. The "J"-cars, often known as jalopies, are usually fifteen to twenty year-old stock cars, moderately modified for the oval track. Elliott commented, "In order to keep the extent of the modification of these cars minimal, a special rule is in effect. Any driver in a "J"-car race must be willing to sell his car (minus wheels, tires and safety equipment) for $100 to any of the other drivers. If he refuses to sell his car upon request, he is banned from the track for the rest of the season."

The cars racing in the limited and super-modified classes are similar in appearance. "The difference lies in the carburation and the use of an air foil," Jewell mentioned. "The super-modifieds are allowed to use an unlimited number of carburetors and are permitted to use air foils on the roofs of their cars to improve their acceleration and cornering. The limited cars may use only one two-barrel carburetor and are allowed to use air foils."

When asked about the safety precautions at the track, Elliott replied, "The cars are basically designed to meet N.A.S.C.A.R. specifications. The driver's compartment is surrounded with one and one-half inch steel pipe and he is protected by safety belts and his helmet. An ambulance is stationed in the pits, also."

In the past, according to Elliott, such drivers as George Schneider and Bill Vuchovitch Jr., who have recently competed in the Indianapolis 500, and Dick Brooks, a top Grand National Circuit driver, have raced at the Atascadero Speedway. The purse for the night is usually $800 to $700. This is divided up between racers who make their living as salesmen, mechanics, nurses, farmers and truck drivers during the week.

Jewell concluded, "The success of our speedway has been through the community, for they are the true operators of the track. Without the donation of the ambulance, tow trucks and welding trucks and the tremendous contributions of the area residents, Atascadero Speedway could not exist."

New members of the faculty and staff are experiencing trouble in finding housing in the San Luis Obispo area, according to the director of personnel relations, Larry R. Voss.

Voss said many members of the faculty who will begin their jobs next month are having difficulty in locating houses, apartments, and duplexes for rent.

Voss made a request of persons who have home rentals available in any area within commuting distance of the college to list them with the Personnel Office, either by telephoning 968-3228 or by visiting the office in the Administration building on campus.

Two and three bedroom houses, apartments, and duplexes are the most critically needed, but homes of other sizes are also in demand.

Voss stated that a total of nearly 100 persons are expected to begin their new duties as members of the college faculty and staff in September, and in the interest of good faculty morale, the college is desirous of having all of its faculty members adequately located before the start of the Fall Quarter.

Beer bumped?

by WOODY GOUILLART

It appears that in certain parts of the country, for young people, toting is replacing the jigger. A new article in the New York Times cites the fact that several liquor establishments across the nation are seeing a loss in liquor sales due to an increase in the use of marijuana.

A brewery in Detroit, Michigan is launching a campaign to "bring young people back to beer." In Colorado, beer consumption in taverns near the University of Colorado in Boulder has dropped sharply. A beer distributor in Denver says that in 1975 sales at one college town were down 27 percent from 1974. Sales were also down 3 percent at another tavern near campus. Still another tavern reported a 71 percent decrease in sales.

The Times story reports that while most tavern owners deny that the joint has replaced the jigger... "there are signs of a subtle trend around the country toward drugs at the expense of drink."

The Denver beer distributor adds: "Tavern owners say they can tell when a big shipment of marijuana hits town. The sales go up. But what do you do? Tell them to go drink beer?"

A representative from the Detroit brewery asks, "Will the pot movement of bigger and bigger joints lose more of the beer market as the size of the youth market increases?"

The upswing in the usage of marijuana has not affected all areas of liquor sales, however. Drink bartenders and liquor dealers who serve young people all agree that sales of wine, which is considered an effective substitute for prolonging a marijuana high, are on the increase. The manager of Tom's Tasteful, a liquor sales center located in the Michigan State University, reported that sales of cheap, blended wines were up, but he would not predict the trend on drugs. "The most I can say is that we're probably losing some hard liquor sales because of marijuana," he said. A student of MSU stated: "Beer drinking is not illegal, but wine is ideal if you're high while you smoke pot."

The Times article also pointed out that young people are substituting drugs for drinks, apparently adults are trying to take up the slack. A Michigan liquor store chain reports that case sales were running five percent ahead of last year in state stores, following the nationwide trend. The Denver distributor concedes that his sales in areas away from college campuses were up last year.

With both generations seeking their own different kind of high, the generation gap has reached a new plateau. Each member of both sides of the gap can gaze at the other through his own respective haze. The future of such a social trend is indefinite, but one can envision that the viewpoint, from either side, is bound to be opaque.

An article written by Dr. Lee C. Coombs of the Chemistry Department has been published in a recent issue of Inorganic Chemistry.

Dr. Coombs, a member of the faculty since January, was formerly a member of the Purdue University faculty and has worked as both a teaching assistant and spectroscopist at San Diego State.

The full title of Dr. Coombs' paper is "Kinetics of the Reaction Between Cyanide Ion and the Nickel (II) Complexes of Imidodlacetate and N-Methylimidodlacetate." A translation of the title is not available.

Class to present issues

An experimental course, described as being of “paramount importance,” has been recommended to the dean of engineering. The experimental class was proposed by a senior in Industrial Engineering, Kamal S. Greiss. Greiss describes the experimental class as being an “issue awareness” class.

The Issue Awareness class, Greiss notes, could be recommended by all departments for upper division students. The course would be worth two units, consisting of one two-hour lecture per week.

The objectives of the Issue Awareness course are to develop in the students a better understanding of social, political, economical and environmental problems; to teach the students methods of approach to such problems; and to teach the students to cooperate with others outside their field to solve the problem in question.

After one to three weeks of orientation, the class will select a project manager to take the place of the class instructor. This elected representative will secure guest speakers for the class who will present first-hand information from the fields they represent. After each speaker reports to the class, the students will either write a report, or give an oral discussion.

The Issue Awareness course, pending subsequent administrative approval and adaptation, is designed to start in the Winter Quarter. Further information concerning the experimental class and its objectives may be secured by writing Kamal S. Greiss at P.O. Box 1293, San Luis Obispo, or by phoning Greiss at 544-0488.

Poets to recite

Five local poets will present the fruits of their labor this coming Saturday evening at 8 p.m. in the San Luis Little Theater, 1530 Monterey.

The poetic happening will spotlight the contemporary poetry of Don Wallis, Glenna Luachel, Fred Risao, Alan Rose, and Jim Owen. Also featured will be Chuck Skelton, a 96 year old senior of this college, whose poetry journal, Mrs. Luachel has penned a booklet of bilingual poetry in South American, where she and her husband resided.

Chuck Skelton, a 96 year old senior of this college, has described music as the universal, from communication, one even better than poetry. He will be performing his own literature.

History will not forget

The college student of this generation will probably go down in history for many reasons. The number of surveys which have been conducted in his behalf will be sure to occupy a fair share of that history.

A new national survey, which is to be published in the September issue of Playboy magazine, seems to shatter a lot of common misconceptions.

The priorities which students gave to other problems was also brought out in the survey. Although the war in Indochina is the most pressing concern of students polled (39%), more than 80% of the students gave higher priority to such things as racial conflict and the environment (15%) down to the 11th item, women's rights (1%).

No survey of college students would be complete without a look at the radical revolutionary. The survey shows that these are a definite minority. 83% of the students were against violent demonstrations, 42% of this total favored peaceful protests to bring about change in the educational system.

Seventy-three percent of the students believe that by working within the system they will be able to bring about the necessary changes.

as a "professor," seemed dependable.

But in his report to Grunsky, a two year study report, Kaplan defied Grunsky's imprisoned pretext, finding marijuana laws extremely harsh and out of tilt with fact.

In a subsequent book (Marijuana: The New Prohibition, World, 387 pp., $8.50) Kaplan advocates the legalization of marijuana. Angered by Kaplan's "far out, liberal approach," Grunsky's committee fired the criminal law professor, along with others on the research team, all who advocated liberalization of the anti-marijuana law.

They were replaced by a prosecutor from the attorney general's office.

"Many college professors get the idea they are above the policy or the direction of those they are working for," Grunsky explained.
