Egypt picks Sadat

By United Press International

Egypt moved swiftly today to install Anwar Sadat as president so he could pick up where Gamal Abdel Nasser left off. Israeli officials expressed cautious yet hopeful wait and were reportedly had very little luck. Thla weeks cautious yet hopeful wait and see attitude on his selection and Israeli officials expressed a there were signs the Middle East ceasefire would be extended.

Israel Foreign Ministry sources said in Jerusalem it was possible that Egypt under Sadat would pursue a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict but that it was too soon to make any predictions.

"Considering that Sadat was closely identified with Nasser and that Nasser had a peace initiative in progress, Sadat could make a serious move toward peace if he wishes," an Israeli Foreign Ministry source said.

"The stage is set for him, the possibility exists, we hope it will work out that way. A lot will depend on the Russians. We have to wait and see." The Russians were moving swiftly. Diplomatic sources in Moscow said the Soviet Union had named one of its highest ranking diplomats, Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir M. Vinogradov, to become ambassador to Egypt.

The Moscow sources said the 45-year-old diplomat will take over his Cairo post "in the shortest possible time." He succeeds Sergi A. Vinogradov who held the job from 1967 until his death two months ago. The two men were not related.

Diplomatic observers in Moscow said the selection of a man of Vinogradov's rank and experience reflected the Kremlin's concern over the future of Egypt without Nasser.

Vinogradov is intimately familiar with Soviet-Egyptian relations. He accompanied Premier Alexei N. Kosygin to Nasser's funeral last week and set in on talks with Sadat and other Egyptian leaders.

UPI diplomatic correspondent K.C. Thaler reported in London that diplomatic sources there said extension of the Arab-Israeli cease-fire beyond its original Nov. 2 deadline is now virtually certain. He said the extension will be for another 90 days or possibly indefinitely to allow sufficient time for the formulation of a new Middle East peace plan.

UPI correspondent Thomas Chatham reported from Jerusalem that the United States already has launched a major diplomatic offensive aimed at getting the Egyptians back to the peace talks.

Israel has refused to return to the talks until the Egyptians remove all of the mislades they have moved into the cease-fire zone since the truce began Aug. 7. There is an almost daily Israeli charge of new violations. Diplomatic sources in Jerusalem said U.S. Embassy officials had held extensive meetings with cabinet ministers including Defense Minister Moshe Dayan to try to get Israel to ease its stand.

UPI correspondent Ray Wilkinson reported from Cairo that the National Assembly called two sessions Wednesday. The first at 11 a.m. will plan the mechanics of Sadat's formal nomination—how puts forward his name and who seconds it.
Insight missing

Editor:
I am taking this opportunity to express my disappointment in the talk given last night by U.S. Senator George Murphy. I have always expected a man of Mr. Murphy's political stature would inform us of some of our nation's problems, programs, and prospects as seen from his vantage point high in our government. I hoped for some insight into the social philosophies of this man who seeks to continue to represent our state in the national government. I am somewhat puzzled by Mr. Murphy's remarks concerning the right of farm worker's unions to strike. He apparently feels that a farm worker's union should not strike during harvest periods. In the Salinas Valley and the plains around Santa Maria where the UFPCDC strike is centered, the rich soil and temperate weather allow the production and harvest of crops nearly year round. When would a farm worker's union be able to strike? What is the point of any union's strike except to stop its employer's production?

The commission said that a nationwide survey of 2,500 colleges and universities, with a high 78 percent responding, showed a "quite striking" relationship between school's admission standards and campus unrest last spring.

The study added that colleges in the Northeast where the greatest old traditions existed showed the greatest reaction. The commission said that colleges and universities that admit freshmen from the top ten percent of school classes had more trouble than schools with open or more relaxed admission policies.

The report summarizes that in the schools that admit only from the top ten percent the following happened: 58 percent had student strikes of one day or longer; 80 percent had student demonstrations and 79 percent had violent demonstrations.

Two years after the destructive riot at San Francisco State, the commission seems to have missed the boat in its statistics. San Francisco State has the same admission requirements as this college, so the reasons for this campus being quiet do not lie in the admission requirements.

Besides the general accusations of apathy and lack of student interest in the world, the best explanation offered to date was given by S.I. Hayakawa in a speech here last year. The well known president of San Francisco State said he felt that the pursuit of a career at Poly gives the student an identity that the larger general education colleges fail to provide. A psychological feeling of insecurity in the immature general education major at a large, almost city sized college, causes him to seek acceptance in a group — possibly one that is doing something that people will listen to.

Statistics tell a story in most cases, but in trying to find out why this campus is still quiet after years of unrest on other campuses, something more than statistics are needed. Whatever the reason for the quiet, let's hope that we can continue to communicate with the campus in a nonviolent way. Communications stop when tempers begin.
Haircuts for all foreigners

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese government, flushed with the apparent success of forcing Vietnamese youth to get haircuts, has decided to enforce the restriction upon foreigners as well.

"We have decided not to invite visitors with long haircuts to visit our country," Nguyen Ngoc Huyen, head of the Vietnamese National Press Center, said today.

"Students with long haircuts won't be allowed into the country. In fact, some people right in this room will be advised to get haircuts," he said, observing several long-haired newsmen in the room.

He said long haircuts have a bad effect on our younger generation.

Saigon city officials have embarked upon a provincewide three-month crime-fighting campaign. They said 1,100 notorious Vietnamese youths have had their identity cards confiscated by police until they obey haircut orders. Identity cards are required of all Vietnamese known to the government and must be surrendered upon demand.

Huyen didn't say what the government considers an acceptable length for male haircuts.

"We are after the hippie types," Huyen said. Vietnam has cooperated with other Asian countries in barring hippies from the country by refusing entry at the airport, but this is the first time foreigners within the country have been warned to get a haircut.

A variety of firms have representatives on the campus seeking employment interviews with students, according to the Placement Office.

Seniors with at least nine units of course work in accounting are being sought by B.P. Kirkpatrick and J.A. Campbell, partners in Arthur Anderson and Company, an international public accounting firm. Today is the final day for campus interviews with this company.

Bell Telephone is interviewing on campus for all positions and all majors Thursday and Friday.

Shell Oil Company will be interviewing business students interested in accounting, finance, transportation, data processing, and industrial relations Nov. 9 and 10.

Students interested in interviewing with these employers may make appointments at the Placement Office in Room 313 of the Administration Building.
Deadly contamination

By ROBERT B. JAFFE
Seattle, Wash. (UPI) — Some "needle freaks" — drug addicts who use needles — will dose themselves with just about anything from stuffed animals to top-grade heroin, but two Seattle radiologists have found that addicts often inadvertently inject foreign particles into their veins with deadly results.

Some addicts try to filter narcotics through cotton to purify the dope, but they also can get along with the drug by bit of cotton which enter the bloodstream and form clots that plug the lung vessels.

Dr. Richard B. Jaques and Edgar B. Kochsman of the University of Washington Hospital's department of radiology went through the records of 202 patients with histories of intravenous drug abuse.

Twenty-eight had developed one or more related complications for a combined total of 38 complications. All had undergone X-ray studies which were available for analysis.

"Radiologists familiar with these complications may aid other clinicians in recognizing these diseases," Jaques said.

They categorized their findings in three areas — lung, heart and vascular problems. Lung problems, commonly recognized by X-ray studies which included collection of fluid following heroin overdose, in fact clots in the lungs, bacterial pneumonia and various infections.

High blood pressure in the lung vessels is one infrequent sign of habitual intravenous drug abuse that only recently has been recognized clinically, Kochsman said. This is due to small, obstructive clots forming in the tiny vessels of the lungs.

Talc, starch and other contaminants used to cut, or dilute, narcotics cause these clots to form.

The X-ray studies suggested that infection of the lining of the heart in the area of the heart valves was caused by such contamination. Ultimately, this infection could destroy the heart valves.

Vascular problems caused by drug abuse and misuse are diagnosable, according to the two radiologists, by injecting radiopaque material into the arteries—a process called angiography—and then studying the system with X-rays.

Heddie snake

DUDLEY, England (UPI) — Zoo keepers Nicholas Ordinans and Geraldine Bateman were married Thursday. Ordinans announced that their guest of honor at the ceremony was a 18-foot python, with this explanation: "Karl the python has always been a favorite of ours and we wanted him around on the big day."

They took the python to the wedding, where it was the ring bearer. When the wedding was over, the python was returned to its home, the zoo.

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — President Alfredo Ovando was overthrown today in a bloodless military coup that ended for the time being the threat of civil war.

He was succeeded by a provisional three-man junta.

Gen. Rogelio Miranda, 46, the rear-faced commander of the armed forces who led the opposition to Ovando, announced formation of the junta and said it was dissolved from eight to ten days until a new government is formed.

Ovando had announced earlier he was resigning to avoid civil war. Miranda said Ovando was ousted because his actions threatened to torpedo fulfillment of the mandate he undertook when he became president on Sept. 30, 1969, in another bloodless coup.

He announced the junta members were Vice Adm. Alberto Albarracin, head of the Navy; Gen. Efrain Guachsel, chief of the joint high command; and Gen. Fernando Sarmiento, chief of the joint armed forces.

Tenure topic

Houli, who is a chemistry teacher on this campus, commented on a pamphlet put out by the UPC and distributed to the faculty. He stated that, "in the State Colleges, Chancellor Glenn Dumke has recommended that the final authority in all grievances brought by the faculty should rest with him. During the past year he has personally intervened in matters of hiring, retention, tenure and promotion."

Houli feels that the grievance process has been relatively deteriorating so that the student doesn't have a chance and neither does the faculty.

The UPC, according to Houli, is pushing for contracts with the state for faculty members, a stronger man in Dumke's position who has the faculty and students need at heart and will not be swayed politically.

Houli feels that the UPC wants decisions concerning the colleges be made at the grass root level and not on a state level. This would encompass hiring, firing, retention, and conduct actions.

"Peer group evaluation is the essence to academic freedom," says Houli.

On the question of raising the salary of a faculty member and who should pay for it, Houli said, "the state and not the students should pay for the raise. Society at large is the first to benefit from an educational populous."

Houli feels that a tenured faculty member who says when you fire a man you must show just cause. Dumke is trying to get rid of the tenure system. The UPC is pushing for contracts between the state and faculty.

Houli feels that it could be the McCarthy era all over again if faculty conditions are not improved. The UPC wants to improve those conditions, and hope they can bring it about.

Athletics vs drugs

The chairman of the Assembly's subcommittee on drugs announced last week an Oct. 20 hearing in Los Angeles on drug abuse by professional and amateur athletes.

Assemblyman William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, said team physicians, athletes, trainers, and others on the topic have been invited to testify.

"I believe an athlete should compete only against another athlete, not against an armament of pills, potions and artificial muscle builders," the lawmaker told a news conference.

"If the hearing corroborates the pattern of drug use that has been indicated," he said, "we will attempt to work solutions to this growing problem from those who are involved and affected."

Campbell said persons who have accepted invitations to testify include Dr. H. Kay Delley, Wood Memorial Clinic, Pomona; Dave Maggard, University of California at Berkeley track coach; Dr. Robert Kerlan, team physician for the Los Angeles Rams, Gene Donnelly, trainer for Anaheim High School and Dr. Martin Blatina, UCLA team physician.

The legislator said if other experts and athletes decline to testify, the subcommittee would consider issuing subpoenas to force them to attend the hearing.

Mustangs run over Fresno

Capping the first three places, the Mustang cross country team swept past Fresno State last Saturday 25-3.

Veteran Gary Tibbetts paced all runners over the six-mile course, with a time of 33:14. Dale Horton followed seconds later and Wally McConnell finished third at 33:19.

Brian McPherson crossed the line in sixth position, 23 seconds behind Tibbetts. Rich and Russ Walline placed 12 and 14, respectively.

"McPherson, a freshman, led the race until less than two miles were left," said Coach Steve Simmons, "but made a wrong turn and fell to 12th. Before the race was over he had regained sixth position."

Simmons said the Mustangs defeated the Bulldogs for the first time since 1969. The course was used for the first time Saturday, and Tibbetts established the first course record.

McPherson, Horton and the Walline brothers will take part in the Sacramento Invitational this weekend. The other Mustangs will take a week off from action.

Mustang wins prove nought

40-7, 41-30 and 82-8 are the scores of the first three football games or should I say murders that the Mustang eleven has taken part in so far this season.

In these three affairs almost twenty-thousand fans have paid good money and braved the discomforts of Mustang Stadium to watch what they thought was going to be good football. Instead, their pains have been rewarded with exhibitions that would insult a real football fan.

It is not that the Mustang football team is playing bad ball, as a matter of fact they're playing very well. It is just that the opponents the Mustangs have thus far faced should not have even been on the same field with them.

The season opening victory for the Mustangs against Cal Lutheran came as no surprise to anyone. Cal Lutheran over the years has had a winning record. But, that record was achieved against teams that make the Mustangs look like giants. That is just what the Mustangs turned out to be against Cal Lutheran.

In the mean time the Mustang football fans have been all squashed together in a crackerbox viewing what they thought would be entertainment and in reality were no contest.

For the Kingsmen, the Mustang contest was their big game of the year. After the way the Mustangs treated them it will probably be the last big game they will schedule for a long time.

The second encounter the Mustangs had was with the Cal State Hayward Pioneers. In 1969 the Pioneer team was nationally rated. But after their loss to the Mustangs they had a perfect record of no wins and three losses.

That encounter was not as close as the score indicated to the Mustang fans. The Pioneer, however, was a team that made the Mustangs look like giants. That is just what the Mustangs turned out to be against Cal Lutheran.

Weak Gators humiliated by unmerciful Mustangs

If Harper thinks his Mustangs played sloppy in the first two games, can you imagine what the scores would have been if they had played good football?

This brings us to the San Francisco State slaughter which reminded me of the old bible story about the Christians being thrown to the lions. Harper explained the big score, "We played a good consistent football game." Everybody who has played the Gators has played good consistent football as their record indicates.

It is this reporters belief that this year's San Francisco State squad is a hopeless cause. They boasted 44 returning lettermen from last year's team and were supposedly much improved over last year's Gator squad. They were also supposedly still smarting from and eager to avenge from the 71-7 thrashing they received at the hands of last year's Mustang eleven.

Like the Pioneers, the Gator record does not stand at no wins and three losses.

Even with all this going for them, the Gators looked just a step above the Mustang's freshmen football team. The big point is that San Francisco State should not have even been on the Mustang schedule. The Mustangs wasted little time in proving this point as they completely humiliated the Gators.

Coach Harper stated, "you go into a game trying not to get beat." This is a very true and admirable objective. But, do you try to humiliate a team after you've got them down? The Mustang first string stayed in the ball game for a full three quarters. By the time the reserves entered the game, the score was 40-6 and the game, as far as everyone was concerned, was already put away.

The funny thing about the Mustang substitutions was that San Francisco State started substituting players before the Mustangs did.

It could be argued that the Mustangs simply are trying to attain a high national rating. But, Harper dispelled the thought, saying, "no the national ratings have no effect on us, we play what we want to play." Besides, beating teams like San Francisco State, no matter how badly, will not have a great amount of influence on the national ratings.

The Mustangs did show the Gators some mercy when they let the clock run out with only 15 seconds left in the game while on the San Francisco six yard line.

Tracksters meet at six

Track coach Steve Simmons has requested that all persons interested in trying out for the national champion Mustang track team attend a 6 p.m. meeting tonight in the gymnasium.

He said the track team will participate in a fall program featuring postal competition against other colleges and universities, in which the runners compete in time trials and compare the results with times posted in similar trials conducted the same day at other schools.

Nigos wins top honor

Most football players, especially linemen, dream of the day they can get their hands on the football and run with it. The Mustangs "Player of the Week" is fullback Joe Nigos and he's a different breed of cat.

"Last year I asked to be moved to guard and I still kind of wish that I was playing up front," the popular senior advised. "I just like contact. The more of it I get, the better I like it. That's why I like my new position better.

"I'm more of a blocker than a ball carrier and fullback just suits me fine. I enjoy the extra contact that I get there. Last year when I was playing tackle I always broke to the inside. I don't have the speed of a Darryl Thornes," Nigos said alluding to his sprightly teammate who is handling the tackle duties. "I'm more of a power runner but not anything like Leon Burns of Long Beach State."

Nigos was chosen as "Player of the Week" for his play against San Francisco State. He carried 18 times for 103 yards with his biggest romp being for 15 yards. He became the first Mustang runner to go over the 100-yard mark this season.

"He had his best night as a fullback last week," commented head Coach Joe Harper. "Joe did a good job of running the last part of the chart when he ran part of the time at tailback. He really came into his own as a running fullback last Saturday night and he did a good job of blocking on the ends." Harper continued.

"Our quarterbacks had 183 yards rushing between them mostly on the option and this was due in large part to the blocking by Nigos," coach Harper explained.

At 5-8 and 185 pounds, Nigos is the smallest of the Mustang's three fullbacks. "But he plays like a 300-pounder," Harper commented. "He's extremely quick and a strong guy with excellent feet as a runner. He has the ability to change direction quickly and has broken more tackles than any other back we have.

Nigos was third in rushing in 1969 when he carried 107 times for 573 yards and a 5.3-yard average. Currently, Nigos is third in rushing with 186 yards and a 5.5-yard average per tote.
