Livestock Judges Get Donor's Help

The student livestock judging team at Cal Poly has a herd of 20 steers as a result of a suggestion by Charles Hollister, owner-operator of the Santa Ynez Sale Yard at Buellton. The suggestion came last April during the annual alumni banquet of the university's livestock judging team in San Luis Obispo. After Hollister's suggestion, that ranchers assist the judging team, J.W. Jacobs (Animal Science), advisor to the team, proposed that each of those present donate a steer to support the activities of the team. As a result, 2 Angus, 7 Hereford, and 11 cross-bred steers with a total value of $5,360 were given by 31 livestock judging team alumni and 9 ranchers as gifts-in-kind to the Cal Poly Foundation.

The article by one of the magazine's staff writers is based on a tour of the Ornamental Horticulture Unit and an interview with Thomas E. Eltzroth of the OH Department faculty.

L A Firm is Low Bidder for New Library Construction

Robert E. McKee, Inc., of Los Angeles was the apparent low bidder when proposals for construction of the new library building were opened on Tuesday, Dec. 20, at Cal Poly.

The McKee bid of $9,040,000 for the project was the lowest of six that were opened and was 16 percent under the architect's estimate.

Other bids were from Montgomery-Ross-Fisher, Inc., Los Angeles, $9,059,000; Williams and Burrows, Inc., Belmont, $9,294,000; Steed Brothers Construction, Alamhara, $9,311,000; E.A. Hathaway, Inc., Santa Clara, $9,355,000, and Dickman Construction, Inc., Mountain View, $9,412,000.

E. Douglas Gerard (Executive Dean) said the new library building will be located on a site near the present Walter Dexter Library that had been occupied by six wood barracks buildings and a mess hall originally built during World War II when a U.S. Navy pre-flight school was located at the university.

The 36-year-old structures were used until this fall for faculty offices and laboratories for architecture and child development students.

Working drawings for the 205,000-square-foot library building were originally completed by Marquis Associates of San Francisco in 1971 and waited for allocation of construction funds until July of this year when they were finally budgeted by the state legislature and Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Updating of the plans was completed recently by Marquis Associates, which assigned an estimated construction cost of $10,630,000 to the project.

Gerard said the new library will include 3,000 reader stations, stack rooms with shelving for a book collection of 505,000 volumes, and space for administrative, book repair, and special collection functions that are normal for a large library operation.

The five-story building will replace the present library, which was built in 1947. An addition built in 1961 increased the building's capacity to accommodate a full-time student body of 6,000.

As enrollment grew to the present level of nearly 15,000 full-time-equivalent students, the library became so badly overloaded that students are crowded into reading rooms and thousands of books have been placed in remote storage.

Gerard said about 45 days will be needed to review the bids and contract documents and issue a contract. Work on the new building should begin in late-January or early-February and be completed in mid-1980.
