Non-campaign for mayor

by Randy Fry

The only opposition to incumbent Mayor Kenneth Schwartz's bid for re-election is coming from a unique source. The April election may prove to be the first in which a non-candidate runs a non-campaign from La Pez, Mexico, and expects to win.

In an 8 a.m. press conference on the sidewalk in front of the Mission Bar in San Luis Obispo, it was observed non-candidate Dustin Cook held his first and probably last public appearance. Unless, of course, you happen to be going to La Pez.

Opening with a request for thrusters to concede the election, Cook explained his dissatisfaction with the "petty politics" involved with the traditional means of attaining public office. By discussing the political approach to the election he is attempting to "make people more aware of themselves and the community." The strategy involves "the people getting it together," and getting themselves into the position of making their own decisions in determining the priorities of government.

Cook felt that too often people tend to select someone to a position of authority, and that relieve themselves of any responsibility for the actions of elected officials, contenting to either screen or approve of these officials from the safety of their anonymity. He indicated that instead of politicians choosing the issues, people should determine the direction of the community.

Outlining his dissatisfaction with the past policies of incumbent Schwartz, Cook cited three times he considered important. First, he regretted he had been the people's representative for in dealing with the poor conditions in the Hawthorne district, particularly the homeless problems. Second, Schwartz's attitude toward the expansion of Highway 1, whichCook feels has been an unmoving threat to local ecology. Last, that the Mission Pleas program is a failure, stating "I can remember when the area in front of the Mission was green and plants, where people used to go and lie around and have a good time...now, how can anybody move in there and concrete...the place is usually deserted."

An ex-Poly Architecture student who dropped out about a year ago, he now works as a construction worker, "I just couldn't deal with all the abstractions and still be happy." He entered the race for mayor "as more of a joke," but afterwards developed it into his "campaign by the people."

In his first and only press conference "non-candidate" for mayor of San Luis Obispo, Dustin Cook, announced his intention to wage a winning campaign from La Pez, Mexico.

SNAP wants Thursday vote for evaluations

Thursday, April 11 is the date for a special election that will test the student body will either support or reject a proposal by Students for New Action Politics for a new evaluation of instructors by students.

Charley Appleby, from the elections committee, explained the reason for the election was to separate the initiative from the other matters on the ballot for the general campus election in May. This vote will determine whether students approve or disapprove SNAP's proposal that directs the Student Affairs Council to 1) establish a uniform system for the student evaluation of all instructors, 2) publish the evaluations and present the results for departmental evaluations or rating, 3) announce and open all evaluation and grievance meetings to all members of the academic community, 4) acknowledge the student's right to present petitions, written or verbal testimony at instructor evaluations meetings.

This measure essentially parallels a proposal made by Paul Banks, A.S.I. President, last January. His plan gives definite directions on how the evaluations should be set up, but does not specify that meetings be opened to the student body. The complete text of Banks's proposal is available in his office, according to Banks.

According to A.S.I. by-laws, if the measure is not supported, it will no longer be considered until a new petition is circulated and presented. If the students support the SNAP plan, it will be resolved by the A.S.I. and, according to Banks and the student body, will probably be combined with the Banks proposal.

Locations for the polls on Thursday will be the College Union Plaza, Inner Perimeter Road and Campus Way near the self-service post office, the Math and Home Economics lawn, and the library entrance.
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:
To begin, I'm not an anti-establishment, long haired radical, and this type need not identify with my letter.

What kind of a country do we live in that would take a man, make an animal out of him and then try him for doing his job? As if trying him isn't enough, they had the gaul to convict him. Did Lt. William Calley ask to be sent to Viet Nam? I ask you to put your life on the line day after day in a war zone; risk it for people that could give a damn about you and see if you come out sane. Any normal man could easily go "over the hill", much less a man with Calley's background. Why should Calley be the military's scapegoat? If the ise any justice in the world, Lt. Calley's case will be appealed and he will be exonerated. I'm not saying what he did was right, but why did he do what he did?

After Lt. Calley's court martial, how can any military man fight a war in which he knows one of his own was tried and convicted of doing his job? How can any military man face war and possible death with knowledge that the country he is fighting for is a traitor not to him, but to every man in uniform? How many more men will die needlessly, wondering whether to shoot back when fired upon?

I ask every person reading this to place himself in the shoes of the combat soldier (trained to kill) on the battle field watching buddies getting their guts blown out of the what?). I ask you to feel and hear the exploding booby traps and parse from enemy shelling. I ask you to experience the frustration of not even knowing who is killing your enemy even if. I ask you to put yourself in Lt. Calley's position and watch the man whom you command get blown to hell by a booby trap in a so called friendly village. I ask you to crawl into that grave but and remove your companion's body with a spoon. Now let me ask you to do just one more thing. Take an M-16 in your hand and see what you can do. If you can truthfully tell yourself that under no circumstances you would do as Calley did, read no further. On the other hand, if you are not sure then do as I and write a letter to your congressman tonight in Lt. Calley's behalf, because I don't want this country to betray any man in uniform and people, you and I are this country.

Verdict of war

The army has been found guilty.

Guilty of the death of thousands of Asian peoples. Guilty of the extinction of all forms of life in parts of a country called Vietnam. Guilty in producing a situation where one fights for his life, wins, but in the end loses.

The army had trained Lt. William Calley well—in a matter of minutes he managed to destroy 23 people. In those few minutes he once again brought to light the insanity of the Vietnam war.

No, he was not in a wartime situation, for along with the idiotic euphemisms associated with Vietnam comes the this: we are not, nor ever have been at war. There has never been a formal declaration by Congress that a war exists. In the jargon of the administration we are in "a conflict," We are supposed to be, by law, bowing out of this conflict. Of course, we are via Cambodia and Laos. We have no ground troops, as the law stipulates, but it does not deter us from having "protective reinforcements." (What else could a "benevolent in-capacitor" be but tear gas?)

Somehow, the Defense Department feels that obfuscate slogans and titles can hide the realities of war. My Lt., the hamlet where the 22 people were killed, was brought to light by a journalist who eventually won a Pulitzer Prize. It goes without saying that when the story broke, the administration denied it, though it was found later that the army was investigating the incident.

Vietnam, first billed as an area for the United States to protect a country from enemy encroachment, is now a blanket of disgrace for the United States. Our so-called efforts for peace have permeated into a military necromania where we always seem to kill the most but never win.

And now, we the people, are asked to forget the death in Vietnam, the crime and the corruption. We are given one individual who is the guilt of the war. One individual who was schooled in murder, succeeded well, and could spend the rest of his life in jail for doing so.

In another example of how ludicrous the war is, we are asked to be moral. To be moral in a situation where morals don't exist, where men destroy each other for the banner of peace.

Some day, the time will come when men will understand that you cannot delineate "right from wrong" in the barbarism of war.

GREETINGS

This is the first issue of Mustang Daily for Spring Quarter, 1971.

According to Frank Alderete, acting editor-in-chief, the student newspaper will appear daily—Monday through Friday—until the classes end Friday, June 4. There will be one brief interruption: no Mustang will appear during the week of April 26th to allow production of a gigantic 16-page Poly Royal edition.

During the quarter break, the newspaper staff underwent a major reorganization. The resignation of Robert Albertone, who served as editor-in-chief during Fall and Winter Quarters, was accepted by the Publisher's Board. The board asked Alderete, the managing editor, to fill the post in an acting capacity until it could take formal action on succession.

Exercise away old age

THREE PART FEATURE:

TEMPLE—Can physical performance reverse some of man's aging conditions?

Loss of free, decrease in simple reaction time, and vital capacity, decline in heart rate, and higher blood pressure are conditions associated with the aging process.

Cardiac output declines with age, but also occurs in bed rest.

These phenomena are opposite results produced by physical training. That's why scientists are now wondering if they are caused by aging or inactivity.

Actually, a 60-year-old person may have a lower capacity for exercise than an octogenarian. This may explain why some of us are hard-pressed to keep pace with grands.

Vic Buccola, physical education instructor at the college's training program. Buccola is trying to get some answers on the problem of physically "getting old."

Future teachers finding job prospects brighter

Job prospects for future teachers receiving credentials are "better than expected" according to the college's Placement Office.

Although the San Luis Coastal Unified School District has very few openings and a great many vacancy announcements, the Placement Office has received applications from teacher candidates for the many openings in the Unified School District has vary restricted to the few openings and a great many vacancy announcements.

Mrs. Mary Shaw, placement supervisor, said, "Is the flexibility of the Job an important thing," she asked, "is the flexibility of the job applicant."

"The important thing," she said, "is the flexibility of the job applicant."

Vic Buccola, physical education instructor at the college, hopes to find some answers through his "Assessment of the Physiological and Psychological Change In the Aged Following a 14-week Training Program." Buocola is collecting data from a physical fitness research project involving nearly 100 senior citizens.

Calley's conviction 'is disgraceful'

At 3:39 p.m. the six combat officers sitting in judgement of First Lt. William L. Calley, Jr., sentenced him to life imprisonment for the mass murder of civilians at the Vietnamese hamlet of My Lai.

Running 100 to 1, thousands of telegrams have poured in to President Nixon, asking him to intervene for Calley. The small, 21-year-old lieutenant will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Retired Colonel William M.
Boyce, business administration professor and behind his desk, a cup of coffee held firmly in his hand.

"This conviction is the greatest travesty of justice I have ever run into," the colonel stated. It is disgraceful!"

The Colonel, speaking with 27 years of military service behind him, feels that the Calley case will have an adverse reaction in, both the military and America in general.

"This case will have a general lowering of morale and a lack of aggressiveness on the part of small-unit combat leaders which is essential in any combat situation," said the tall, ramrod straight veteran. "Also, I believe now that the idea of an all volunteer army is a myth."

"Who is to blame for the deaths at My Lai?"

Colonel Boyce narrowed his brow, thought for a moment and said:

"The guilt belongs to every citizen of the United States."

The Colonel, who has seen much of the military establishment, both in combat in World War II and in Korea, as well as serving with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that, although he disagrees with the verdict, Calley did get a fair trial.

"Yes, Calley's trial was fair" he said, nodding his steel-gray hair covered head. "I'm familiar with military courts martial and many civilian courts would be better off if they would mold themselves on the system of military justice. In a military court martial the case is automatically reviewed and appealed -- at least twice."

The 55-year-old Boyce addressed himself to the subject of public opinion.

"This whole case points out what has been so well summarized by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, W.W.II military leader:"

to fight the war to win it I"
SAC weighs Banke plan

Student representatives have attempted to apply some customary brakes to ASI Pres. Paul Banke's plan to oppose a proposed $70 increase in the materials and services fee.

The decision to have representatives poll members of their respective councils and to propose a 970 per academic year Service Fee. He said that he saw the increase as an attempt to introduce tuition to the state college system.

Both Banks and President Kennedy have opposed all forms of tuition in the past, Banke said he intended to represent the students of this college in opposition to a proposal that will, if passed, expand the Assembly's State College Budget to meet the requirements of the Trustees' budget.

Some members of the SAC countered his position, arguing that if students were paying fees, the school will be able to once again provide the needed academic and facilities and staff. They asked the committee to direct Banks to support any fee increase as possible in order to assure expansion of educational services.

Banke also relayed from the Trustees that there would be no increase in parking fees for the college. That information was coupled with the fact that there would not be any new parking facilities on the campus.

He said, too, that the Trustees were inviting "student input" on the subject of teacher tenure.

Music groups polishing acts

One hundred and seventy-five student musicians are busy polishing their performances for the annual Home Concert, which will take place on Friday, April 18, in the Men's Gymnasium on campus.

They are all members of three ensembles—the Men's Glee Club, the Women's Glee Club, and the Collegian stage and dance band. Starting time for the Home Concert, which is being presented under joint sponsorship of the Associated Students, Inc., and the college Music Department, will be 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Also programmed during the concert, an annual highlight of the music season at the college, are numbers by three smaller vocal ensembles composed of members of the two glee clubs. They are the Collegiate Quartet, the Women's Sextet, and the Male Singers and Minors.

Although the program for the April 18 concert had not been finalized at this writing, it is expected to cover a wide variety of musical interest ranging from Palestrina to Henry Manchess with plenty of variety in between.

Tickets for the April 18 concert are priced at 75 cents for both students and children and $1.25 for all others.

Tampax tampons are the best—cool and convenient. You can depend on. Internally worn Tampax tampons can keep you cool and calm even when you're the center of attention. They can't show or leak or cause odor like sanitary napkins. They're confidently compressed and highly absorbent for protection you can depend on.

And one more important fact. Tampax tampons were developed by a doctor so you know you can trust them. Even if you've just begun to menstruate.

Confidence has made Tampax tampons the best-selling tampons in the world. And that confidence makes them easier for you.

A recent questionnaire survey of 16 social science classes illustrates that people generally have uncorrected notions about class structure.

The survey was conducted by Dr. Malcolm Carr, of the social science department, to demonstrate this to his students. It asked them to arrange six surnames into a vertically stratified column, using the assumption that each name belongs to a separate social class. They were asked to guess the probable order by using just their feelings.

The names Goldberg and Hawthorne is usually the first choice, in this type of survey, because it's one of the oldest English names in the country. In most cases, Goldberg runs a close second because of the strong Jewish influence in urban areas.

The other names, says Carr, come from different regions of Europe, but are also found throughout the U.S. O'Brien and Brennan placed third and fourth because they are Northern European and their immigration into the country came before the last two names-Walosewski and Santisopito, from Eastern or Southern Europe.

Because the English names have been in the country longer than the European names, they've been associated with power for a longer length of time. The same holds true in the relationships between the Northern and Eastern or Southern European names. The name Goldberg is highly regarded since the Jewish are commonly associated with an image of strong businessmen and unified communities.

Another part of the questionnaire asked the student if he thought it was possible to determine a family's social class by knowledge of the family name alone. According to Carr, 70 percent of the 374 participants answered no—indicating they felt no definitive pattern would show in the survey.

The consistency of the responses, however, shows that people do categorize other groups according to these preconceptions. Whether or not they play a role in the person's life depends upon the individual and his awareness of these factors. The value of the survey, says Carr, is to convince the non-believer that this psychological phenomenon can be generally applied to everyone.

Food school approved

The Food Industries Department has been recognized by the Institute of Food Technologists, according to information forwarded by the institute to Dr. F. Ray Stecke, head of the department.

Recognition means the campus is now included in the institute's "Approved list of Colleges and Departments." According to the IFT, this college is the only school on the list which does not have university status.

Inclusion on the approved list means that the food industry, worldwide, is aware that the graduates of the food industries program here have completed a course which meets the criteria of the Institute. It also makes available to food industries students scholarships offered by the Institute.

The department, part of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, has 96 students and the largest undergraduate program in food industries in the nation.

The students supplement their classroom activities with actual experiences in a small food processing plant on the campus.

Native dancers will perform in '71 Poly Royal

Eight dance routines typical of native customs and traditions of Mexico will be presented by Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano De Aztlan (MECHA) during the 1971 Poly Royal at College, on Friday and Saturday, April 8 and 9.

The 90-minute performance will be undertaken by MECHA Teatro, a nine-couple dance group which performed in the International Show held on campus in January.

Free "off road" racing cinema will be shown

Automobile enthusiasts, engineers and everyone is invited to a free film entitled "Off Road Round-Up" to be shown next Thursday evening at 7 p.m. in SCI E-36. Sponsored by the Cal Poly Society of Plant Engineers, the entertainment film has been obtained from the Ford Motor Company.

It is a review of the major events in the fast growing sport of "off road" racing, says Ken Alexander, vice president of the sponsoring club. Events featured in the film include a Pennsylvania hillclimb, the Stardust 7-11, the Mint 400 and the Mexican 1000.

In addition to the film showing, officers for the club will be nominated at this meeting. The film and meeting are free and the public is invited to attend.

Drug use topic for Linkletter

The man who spent 19 years proving to the television audience of America that "people are funny," will speak on April 29 on one of society's most seriously pressing issues, the use and abuse of drugs.

Art Linkletter will continue his coast-to-coast crusade against drug abuse as he speaks to students, faculty, and the general public in the new College Union Auditorium at 11 a.m. There will be no admission charge.

Linkletter, who claims "people are my business," has been in the "business" for more than 36 years, on network television and radio. His Emmy-winning daytime television show, House Party, ran for 26 years. Most recently he has been seen with his son, Jack, on NBC's Life With Linkletter.

Following the tragic death of his daughter from the effects of LSD, Linkletter has spent much of his time in recent years touring the country speaking to students and parents about drug abuse.

During his visit he will also meet with Project 9 students who are vitally concerned about the issues of drugs in our society and are conducting a series of lectures dealing with drug abuse.

Linkletter's visit is being hosted by the college and the College Program Board Speakers Forum Committee of its Associated Students, Inc., which sponsors Project 9.
Wrestlers finish ninth

After winning their third straight college division title, the Mustang wrestlers slumped to a six-place finish in the University division finals at Auburn, Ala. The competition was held a week after the college wrestling championship.

"I was disappointed we didn't do better overall, but I realize that the fundamentals that we can really benefit from the experience gained this year are just the start and not the end," commented coach Vaughn Hitchcock.

"The team received great exposure to the best collegiate wrestling in the nation," Hitchcock said. We had five sophomores and one junior who were in Auburn to see and experience university-level tournament competition. I feel that next year we'll be prepared and with aspirations of being in the winner's circle, at this, the ultimate college wrestling competition."

"The ninth place was a respectable showing but I had my sights set higher. We had five freshmen we know will meet more points in the tournament."

Foundation finds boss

Alfred W. Amaral will assume new duties as executive director of the Foundation which operates residence hall, agricultural production, food service, and other auxiliary programs on campus, effective July 1.

Appointment of Amaral to head the California State Polytechnic College Foundation was announced last week by Dr. Robert E. Kenned y, president of the college and chairman of the board of the non-profit foundation corporation.

President Kennedy expressed pleasure with the selection of the 32-year-old Amaral, a member of the faculty of Cal Poly's Agricultural Management Department for the past four years.

"It is especially fortunate to find a man with his qualifications within the college organization. His background in finance, sales, and labor seems to suit him well for the position," Dr. Kennedy added.

Amaral, who earned his bachelor's degree in agricultural business at Cal Poly in 1964, will succeed Gene E. Brendlin, who last fall announced his plans to retire from his duties as manager of the Cal Poly Foundation at the end of the college year on June 30.

Before becoming a member of the college faculty in 1967, Amaral was employed in management and sales positions with Martin Pixel Valley Farm Bank, San Francisco; and a labor contracting firm in Sacramento.

A native of the Salinas Valley, Amaral attended and graduated from Gonzales High School. He also holds the Master of Business Administration degree from Golden Gate College, San Francisco.

Brendlin joined the Cal Poly administrative staff in 1966 after having been director of vocational agriculture programs at high schools in Fallbrook, Linden, Tracy, and Arroyo Grande. He is a graduate of University of California at Berkeley, where earned his bachelor's degree in agriculture.

The Cal Poly Foundation is responsible for operation of food services, El Corral Campus Store, and other activities as requested by the college.

Under the corporation's Board of Directors, Amaral will manage its operations and be responsible for coordination of its activities with other operations of the college.

Classes feature nature

Registrations are still being accepted in three courses being offered by Cal Poly Extension. The classes are "Geology of San Luis Obispo County," "Botany, Culture," and "Landscape Plants.

"Geology of San Luis Obispo County" (Geol 23/2) meets on Tuesdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in room E41 and E52 of the Science Building on campus. The instructor is Ralph Vranas.

"Botany Culture" (OR 161) is taught by Winton Frey in the Ornamental Horticulture Unit on campus on Wednesdays from 7 to 9:15 p.m.

"Landscape Plants" (OR 240) is taught by Tom Ettroth.

The second class meeting will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. and from then on the class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9:15 p.m. in room E41 of the Events Agriculture Building, also on campus.

All Cal Poly Extension courses are open to any adult who meets the course requirements. Late registration is being taken at the same class meeting next week. All fees must be paid before the third class meeting.

The national award, administered by the American Institute of Architects, will be presented during the AIA convention in Detroit on June 30-34.

Yonedo to Angel camp

Steve Yoneda, the ex-trainer for the athletic department is now a trainer for the California Angels and is "enjoying the work immensely."

Yonedo is in spring training at "Angeltown," Palm Springs until next week when he is to report to the California team's farm club at Surfcoast Jr.

Yonedo joins three other Japanese professional horsemen as part of their crew in San Luis Obispo, Mid-Quesar, a pitcher for the Balboa City farm club and two other trainers, Pete Lutner and Dale Carey.

Fees are open to any adult who meets the course requirements. Late registration is being taken at the same class meeting next week. All fees must be paid before the third class meeting.
