A drug oriented society

"In the last decade young people of the world have been in a 'seedbed of restlessness,' and have experienced emotional hang- ups. As a result many have been 'hooked up into reality scene.'" This is what the television personality Art Linkletter said about drug abuse and misuse yesterday at a standing-room-only crowd in the College Union Auditorium.

Young people are not the only ones who are involved with drugs, as our society has become drug oriented. He added that adults are using mind-altering drugs, like calming their nerves with sleeping pills, or using weight control pills to the extent that they cannot live without them.

Claiming that he is not an expert, but rather an "expert on experts," Linkletter says he knows what the drug abuse problem is and was motivated to find out more about it when his 20-year-old daughter committed suicide because she experienced a flashback from LSD. He explained that he has studied about the problems all over the world and has talked to all types of people involved with drugs.

Today's young people are motivated toward drugs by advertising, rock music, and unhappiness with the rest of the world, he said. To get away from the real world, he added, they turn to a fantasy world of drugs and soon cannot live without them. Every year over 1,000 teen-age suicides are the result of drug abuse and misuse. The way to stop this widespread tragedy is to educate the people about the harm and consequences of these drugs and find out how to get rid of their abuses and abuses, according to Linkletter.

He explained that the drug increase in the youth of the country has come about from Timothy Leary and his advocacy of LSD and youth idols like rock stars, living and existing with the virtues of a drug lifestyle.

Chinese object to island claim

While the State Department has been readily courting the friendship of Communist China, it has also been ignoring the aspirations of thousands of overseas Chinese students here in American colleges and universities.

After twenty years of political silence, Chinese students in the United States have been holding demonstrations to protest Japan's recent claim to Chinese territories of the oil rich Tiao-yu Tai Islands in the East China Sea.

According to Thomas Chen, a leader of the "Poor Peoples' Campaign" demonstrated solidarity with antiwar activist Rennie Wilson, the mule team with a mule-drawn wagon to the U.S. Capitol.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Living in dream world

Editor:
The theme of this year's Cal Poly Rose Parade float was 'Once Upon a Dream.' Nothing could have been closer to the truth. During the past week Cal Poly has exemplified that theme with its 'Poly Royal' celebrations.

This campus has been living in a dream world. Some of the dreamers thought that bedaheeta truth. During the past week Cal Poly and its students to re-evaluate their priorities. So, here are some challenges to you dreamers.

To Rev. Tjaden, who thinks that the way to achieve an end is "work through the system;" did you remember when the youth tried that in 1966 working for the McCarthy campaign? To Kathleen Beasley, who can see no connection between a coronation ball and the Vietnam war, I suggest that you open your eyes.

To Rob Sexton, who thinks that instructors should work for peace-devoted organizations like the Christian Church. How many 'christians' throughout the centuries have instilled the feeling that "other" people are infidels, heathens, or gods?

To the rest of the dreamers on this campus; wake up. Or, you might find that the rest of the world has passed you by.

I very much enjoyed the comedy in Rob Sexton's letter. It amuses me how much wit can come out of irrationality.

(Speak softly)

Something is smelling fishy in Denmark.

Tom Hayden, one of the infamous 'Chicago Seven,' will be speaking on campus next Tuesday—but with "proper restrictions."

The conditions on his appearance on campus, as well as to the method of how it was to be presented, was all determined by Section 772 of the Campus Administrative Manual. This section deals with the treatment of "prominent and controversial speakers."

No, he will not speak in the College Union multipurpose room.

A special committee was set up to handle the subject of Hayden coming to campus, they decided if he was to appear on campus at all. They decided how he was to be presented. Their decision was final.

No, he cannot speak in the Men's Gym.

Hayden is a "prominent" controversial speaker. There will be no admission charge. Timothy Leary, who spoke here last year, was not "prominent," though he was controversial—it cost money to hear his talk.

Hayden is restricted to speaking for a maximum of two hours. He will speak in the rarely-used amphitheater (behind the campus theater) at 3:30.

The community is not invited to the talk. There is to be no advertising of the event in the community. The only people that are to attend are students from this campus.

Now, could it be that Tom Hayden has a different political thought than some people on this campus? That is quite possible, in fact, it would be hard to say that he didn't.

But because he differs in ideology than others is no reason that he should be treated as some sort of rhetorical leader—barred from the eyes of the community and subject to make his presentation under conditions that smack of suppression.

Letters are getting to be too long, so once again we remind people to hold it down to 250 words.

Chambers Bros.—last concert?

(Editors Note: The Chambers Brothers concert, a week ago last Wednesday, proved to be a riot. Moping shoes and foot-stomping and hand-clapping people littered the area universal. After the concert, there were grumblings by some members of the audience that the concert wasn’t handled right, that an attempt was made to keep the audience from having a good time by turning on the lights. Certainly conclusions were reached about concerts of the future as staffer John Hansberry filled this report.

The slamming of the coffin lid on rock concerts is being heard across the campus, with the Chambers Brothers gig maybe the final nail.

A joke you say? Not according to Pat Modica, who supervened that concert, and who is next year’s chairman of the Assembly Committee. “It is practically impossible to control a crowd in the gym when they are built up to such a frenzy, as they were in the Chambers Bros. concert,” said Modica.

“The ushers couldn’t keep the stage area cleared, and the sheriffs thought it was their job to do it. When this failed, they got uptight about it.”

Therefore, because of crowd unmanageability, the Assembly Committee is mulling over the following solutions: limiting the size of the audience; no big name groups; holding concerts in the stadium instead of the gym; charging more for admission (to keep people from affording tickets and thereby limiting the size); and the big one—no rock concerts at all.

The reason given for keeping, or trying to keep the crowd away from the stage area was to protect the equipment, the wires, and to keep a pathway open for equipment repair, according to Modica.

There had been some comments about the ushers and the way they handled themselves—both good and bad.

One of the ushers, Joe Martin, vice-chairman of SAC, gave his side of the usher controversy. “To the best of my knowledge the ushers were not drunk and I was in contact with most of them,” he said. “In fact, most of the people whom I told to put out their cigarettes, did so without any problems. I went up to one guy who was smoking pot and told him that there was a bunch of narcs around and he quickly put it out.”

The ushers included people from the Blue Key service fraternity, Alpha Zeta, Alpha Gamma Rho and the Ag Council.

“We had four uniformed, off-duty officers at the Chambers Bros. concert,” he stated. “These men are paid by the ASI. But I’ll tell you one thing, you’ll have a hard time getting any more volunteers to work concerts. It’s just not worth it.”

The Chambers Bros. concert was a typical concert, according to this officer. “We give kids leeway at concerts,” he said. “The basic policing is done by the ushers. The police are there in case someone gets out of hand. You don’t need a bunch of cops around. We hand over backwords to give the student the benefit of the doubt,” he said.

“No one gives us orders at a concert,” he added.—“We just use good judgement in our actions. Obviously it would be foolhardy for a cop to walk into a crowd to arrest someone for, say drinking.”

“It’s really tough for students to enforce the rules on other students,” Modica explained, “students just won’t listen to anyone in uniform. So there’s no other way out.” Modica stated that “If rock concerts die here, they will have died because the students who attend them won’t give the Assembly Committee, the ushers and the police the ‘way out.”
The music will be the sound of the people, and it will endure. Tomorrow the people, ancient bluesmen, down home fiddle players, some old time and new time string bands and the banjo strummers will be arriving on campus. It will mark the beginning of the first Mustang Almanac of American Music.

The music will be traditional sounds of country, blues and folk, it will remain long after the commercialism of modern music has died away. They will be coming from all parts of the country—some from the recent three day Traditional Music and Blues Festival held in San Diego, some from the North, some from the East.

Tickets for the 12 hour festival will cost students a dollar. The general public will be charged two-dollars and fifty cents.

Finger almost breaks play

Opening night for Charley's Aunt almost closed before it was ever started. Edwin A. Cohen, the Playwright, was shot by a sniper in the audience and the production was cancelled due to the shock. This is the first time in the history of the theater that a production has been cancelled due to a shooting incident.

The play is set in a small rural town and features a group of people who are trying to put on a play. However, due to the shooting, the production is cancelled and the audience is left in shock.

The play was written by Edward Albee and directed by John Houseman. It features a cast of well-known actors including Angela Lansbury,audrey Hepburn and Al Pacino.

The cancellation of the play has caused a great deal of controversy and has raised questions about the safety of the theater. The management of the theater is currently investigating the incident and has vowed to take steps to ensure the safety of all future productions.

In other news, the San Francisco Symphony has announced that they will be performing a special concert in honor of the victims of the shooting. The concert will feature music from the play and will be held at the War Memorial Opera House.

The concert is scheduled for next Saturday at 7:30 pm and tickets will be available for purchase online. The proceeds from the concert will be donated to a fund set up to help the families of the shooting victims.

The management of the theater has also announced that they will be offering a special discount to anyone who wishes to attend the concert. The discount will be available to anyone who purchases tickets online before the end of this week.

Do or die for baseballers

The Mustangs cannot wait for other teams to defeat Valley State since the Mustangs have been the only team to beat the Matadors this year.

"Since we can't control what Valley State is doing, we intend to continue our winning streak. Winning a championship is still possible for us," Garrido said. "We won't win it by sitting around, but we'll win it by concentrating on the things we have control over."

The biggest change that way will be the addition of Matt Maybe, who received an Olympic scholarship from Stanford. Matt will be at leadoff hitter and lead off from them by concentrating on the things you have control over.

Veteran left-hander Mike Kn烤e started the team's scheduled "no hitter tonight." Heuwill pitched another no-hitter in the series against the Mustangs last month. The Mustangs rank third nationally.

Despite being in second place in the conference, the Mustangs baseball team became its third-ranked status of the nation's college division, team. The rankings are prepared by the Collegiate baseball newspaper.

While the majority of the Cal Poly students have been enjoying themselves at the local beaches, the '71 Mustangs basketball team has beenalsa.

Defense is key to football fortunes; scrub Saturday veteran from Alameda, will be at left corner; Mike Church, of Hanford, another two year veteran, will be at free safety; Wally Westgate at strong safety and Rick Wogls, a寒假 veteran from Butteville. The senior from Butteville has been the only team to beat the Matadors In league play.

The most valuable of the Mustangs are not to be or less than Riverside and that won't be easy because they have the best hitting team in the conference. They hit some shots off us last weekend and nobody has treated our pitching like that previously," Dono Angeles Garrido remarked. "The key thing is for us to get our pitching to work on their hitting.

Spikers looking for good marks on Spartan track

The storm in brewing and it appears that lightning may strike for a fourth time in the same spot. The Mustang track team is slowly developing as has been the case for the past three years, and is expected to peak about the middle of May and June. If the Cinderella peak at this time, then they should be in good position to repeat as national college champions.

The most noticeable growth has been triple jumper Bob Jennings. Jennings has upped his mark in that event by two feet since his first competition. Jennings along with world-class triple jumper Mohinder Gill will be among the Mustangs entered in Saturday's San Jose intramural track meet hosted by San Jose State. The meet will start at 4 p.m. The meet will give the Mustangs a chance to improve their times.

"Our hurdlers and spinters as well as our jumpers should get some good marks on San Jose's Tartan track," Coach Steve Simmons smiled.

This point is apparent when Gill hit his best jump of last year at San Jose—34 feet, 1 inch—but lost only his competition to Dave Smith of the Pacific Coast Club who got a wind-aided lifetime best of 34 feet 1 inches.

Dave Hamer has also shown marked improvement for the Mustangs. After competing against mononucleosis, Hamer has improved his mark in the pole vault to 16 feet, a foot over his previous best mark. But the pole vault is not the only event he has improved in. Lowering his time to 14.4 from 14.5, Hamer has given the Mustangs more depth in the 110-yard-high hurdles.

Swanson Bennett is another Mustang that continues to improve in strength for the national meet. Bennett turned in the fastest 440 yards for the Mustangs with a 48.8 in the mile relay as the mile relay team finished with its fastest time at 3:18.4. Bennett will be joined by John Haley, Ed Kofler and Lowell Henry in attempt to better 3:17.3, the qualifying standard for the nationals in that event.

Of course there are the big names that help to carry the Cinderella. Olympic high jumper Ray Reynolds has already broken the school record by posting 7 feet 1 inch and expects to go higher before the year is over.

Sessions not closed

There is still plenty of space left for summer session according to Dr. Don Morris, associate dean and head of the Office for Continuing Education. An article run in Mustang Daily last Monday implied that the quota for Summer Sessions had been filled. Morris said, and his office wants to assure the many people on campus who are interested in attending the sessions that there is still room.

Registration for Summer Session is different than for regular quarters though, and that is the reason Morris' office is encouraging local students to apply early. Instead of registering in alphabetical order, priority numbers for registration are assigned. These numbers are given out to students when they send in their applications, and by waiting to apply students decrease their chances of securing the classes they want in registration.

There will be two four-week Summer Sessions this year, Morris said, and one week of workshops with a total of 144 classes offered for the summer.
