Kent united for peace

KENT, OHIO UP1

Kent State University President Robert L. White said Tuesday the four students killed by National Guard bullets during a campus demonstration last spring died a "sensationally, early, cruel death."

White, in an address to about 10,000 students during campus memorial services on the first anniversary of the killings, said "if one thing unites us, that desire for memorial does just that—that and a craving for peace."

"Sadly we grant to them their green peace and rest, and offer a legacy of commemoration by those left behind," White said.

"There be those of us who have lost brothers or sisters, parents, husbands or wives, and their absence becomes partially—only partially—filled with growing memories. These memories often come to a focus and we grope for that focus."

Dean Kahler, 19, Canton, Ohio, wounded by the gunfire that crippled him for life, also addressed the students.

"The four people who died there were part of you," Kahler said in a highly emotional speech. "I want you to remember the four students who died here, I want you to remember them forever."

"The war caused the four deaths here. This proves that non-violence is the only way to work against this war. I think that Kent State University has an important role to play in ending the war in Vietnam."

Minutes before White and Kahler, who spoke from a wheelchair, started their addresses, a large bell rang once for each Kent student killed, again for each of the two students killed at Jackson State College in Mississippi and once for the American servicemen killed in Indochina.

Students holding small gas lanterns Tuesday continued a 98-hour vigil on each of the spots where the four students were felled. They stood for a half hour each at the four sites on a grassy campus hillside and in a paved parking lot area.

Disneyland on campus

Editor:
Now that Poly Royal has passed for another year, I believe that it is time to realize and possibly eliminate this time-honored carnival event. Poly Royal is the big publicity stunt of the year for this college. We represent ourselves to the outside world through "A Country Fair on a College Campus." Are we representing the real Cal Poly or, instead, selling a slick package of misrepresentation? We are doing neither; we are selling a Disneyland package of non-involvement, watered down with outrageously commercial booths. Poly Royal, as it now stands, has little relevance to reality in our modern world. It is escapism into another era, an escape to safety. Meanwhile, the academic program grinds to a halt for a week or possibly more.

Poly Royal is not for the students, but only publicity work that is done for the administration that continues to misrepresent this campus as a conservative stronghold. Poly Royal must be made relevant to students or it should fade into insignificance. - Stephen P. Brown

Solutions for concerts

Editor:
We think the solutions proposed by the Assembly Committee, in regards to the Chambers Brothers concert, are excellent and are pointed in the right direction. However, to keep the committee from being criticized for too little too late we would like to extrapolate and propose further solutions to keep this obviously derelict problem from occurring again.

1.) To help limit the size of the audience we think the concerts should be limited to seniors with cumulative GPAs of over 3.0.

2.) In regards to the idea of "no big name groups", we suggest no groups whatsoever. Everybody could bring transistor radios and tune in to KCPR.

3.) In addition to charging higher prices (an outstanding idea to keep the riff-raff out), we suggest limiting the audience to White-Anglo-Saxon-Protestants.

4.) We have reservations about the "big one", no rock-concerts whatsoever. If this solution were implemented, the Assembly Committee would have no means of acquiring their just reputation.

In addition to the above proposals we would suggest inviting the L.A. Tac Squad to control the volume and the frenzied waving of transistor radios and other such obviously subversive manifestations of joy.

And now for our own "big one"—Anyone under twenty-one must be accompanied by their parents or guardians.

We the concerned,
Red Nile

Boycott today

Editor:
A commitment by individuals and groups all over the country has been made. People of all levels of society, including students, workers, housewives, and businessmen will donate their time and effort today to demonstrate their opposition to the war in Southeast Asia.

As a Cal Poly student, I will boycott my classes today and go out into the community in an attempt to make people more aware of the atrocity and immorality of the war. By boycotting class, I do not intend to disregard my education, but to show my determination to oppose the war.

I encourage all my brothers and sisters to involve themselves in whatever form you feel necessary to oppose the war today.

The first Almanac of American Music is now but a memory, but the concept was the most unique system of programming that this campus has ever seen. It was outdoors. One could relax without fear of upsetting anybody. In short, it was an event to remember not only for the music involved, but for the method which it was presented.

Could it happen again? Members of the Fine Arts Committee, who put together the Almanac, hope that they could have their Almanac grow to parallel a similar festival in San Diego—a three day meeting of blues, folk and country musicians, with workshops in particular musical bents.
Students as informers

by Wayne Carter

( Editor's Note: Security and the local police are not the only people responsible for making crime a non-issue—students. The phenomenal success of students as informers is an example of how to control campus crime. What happens to the information they deliver?

According to Vaughn, when drugs are purchased from the suspect in his room, officers are allowed by law to search the immediate area without a search warrant. In addition to drugs, Vaughn noted that the intelligence division is interested in the Black Student Union. He said that the group was too careful to allow anyone to infiltrate their ranks.

Army Intelligence is also interested in this campus. This was especially true last Spring Quarter when a unit arrived to monitor student activities during the Iranian student controversy. According to Timone and informed sources who wish to remain anonymous, the Intelligence Unit, from Santa Barbara, was interested in the SDS and SNAP and those individuals who reputedly were advising the students on which issues to take up. We do not place informants in every dorm, because most of the information we receive comes willfully," said Timone.

Some students say that if you have nothing to hide, why worry about undercover people? Others contend that democracy cannot survive in a "police state." "Many people feel secure when they are doing something about the issues at hand. We get calls from people we do not even know on subjects they would like us to act upon. We do not place informants in every dorm, because most of the information we receive comes willfully," said Timone.
Philip Gates' puppy Zeke follows him to school with—er—dogged persistenee.

Gates, a second year mechanical engineering student here, caters to the pooch's whim. He's found there are a lot of different ways to accommodate a hitchhiking hound.

A backpack's okay, but Zeke tends to be a backseat driver. Moving him up front to the handlebar basket solves that.

On cold mornings, there's a fur-lined jacket to snuggle down into.

And, if all else fails, Zeke can just dog his master's footsteps all the way to campus.

Court styles disappear for cager awards banquet

by Paul Simon

Costs and ties replaced jerseys and shorts Monday night when members and coaches of the two 1970-71 Mustang basketball teams gathered for postseason awards and plaudits.

A banquet room also replaced a basketball court but you wouldn't have known it as Lew Jackson, flashiest dresser in the room, hustled "left to right and across your radio dial" in revolt of three awards. "He's one of the finest defensive guards I've ever seen," lauded Coach Neale Bonner, in presenting "Sweet Lew" with the Most Valuable Player trophy. "The determination he played with let us throughout the season."

Jackson, who was the varsity's second leading scorer and the California Collegiate Athletic Association's third best free throw shooter, shared the co-captain award with Dennis d'Autremont and was awarded the Doug Ostrom Memorial Inspirational plaque.

Jackson was voted the Most Improved Player award by his teammate. The 5-foot sophomore, who averaged over 19 points and 10 rebounds a game in conference action, was selected along with Lew Jackson for first team CCAA honors last month.

Star center Robert Jennings was awarded the Outstanding Rebounder trophy in view of his 12.9 CCAA average and 10.4 gra b average on the season.

Final varsity award presented was a special coaches award given to Sal Cardina. Freshman coach Ernie Wheeler...based on attitude in both practice and at games...broken into the categories of desire, courage, aggressiveness and effort.

Stoner also said the frosh team "gave indication to the state of outstanding play in every aspect of the game. We've accomplished what we sat out to do in building a solid freshman program," he said.
Led by sprinter Bobby Turner, the Mustang track team made a fair showing last weekend in the San Jose Invitational. Turner's win may have finally earned him some well-deserved recognition as he beat three of the finalists of the 1968 Olympics. Turner turned in a wind-aided time of 9.3 seconds for the 100-yard dash to nip Don Quarrie, who also had the same time. Lance Miller now representing the Southern California Striders after doing the same for Jamaica in the Olympics, and Mel Pender of the U.S. Army also fell to the fleet Mustang in the century. The three "superstars" was just one of a series of accomplishments for Turner. In March Turner equalled the world indoor record for the century by running 9.4.

Reynaldo Brown, another Olympic performer, continued in his consistent performances for the Mustangs as he cleared seven feet in the high jump. This mark only tied the meet standard this week while last week at Mt. San Antonio College Relays he cleared 7-1 to set a meet mark.

The 440-yard relay team held on to the baton this week and finished second with a 41.6. Lowell Henry, Swanson Bennett, John Haley and Turner won their section of the race but were given second place since the U.S. Army team finished in 41.1 in the other heat to claim the win.

The meet gave most Mustangs a chance to improve on the season marks. Though he finished ninth in the mile, Wally McConnell ended the four miles with a lifetime best of 4:13.8. The winning time for the mile was 3:58.1.

Mike Brown ran well enough to capture fifth in the three mile with a 14:33.3 clocking, but his time was far behind the winning time of 13:38. Brian MacPherson finished sixth in the six-mile run as he ran 21:41.5. Jerry Johoal of the Pacific Coast Club finished in 20:31.8 to claim victory. Ward Kinaman ran 14.6 for the 130 high hurdles in placing seventh as San Jose's George Carty won the event with a 13.8 effort.
