Highway 1 campaign

One man’s

Highway 1

The proposed rerouting of Highway 1 is not the dead issue that people think it is. The spark of life still left in building a highway to relieve traffic on Santa Rosa St. is being fostered by Homer Odem, owner of KSLY radio station, in a one-man attempt to solve a problem of aesthetics and practicality. Nine years ago the city of San Luis Obispo and the Division of Highways worked together to find an alternate route for Highway 1. Eventually a route was proposed that would stretch for 7.1 miles from the Madonna Plaza 101 to just past Cuesta College. Hearings held during a city council meeting debated whether the city should sign an agreement to the rerouting of the road. In a close vote of 3-2, the council refused to give the go-ahead.

For those who sought the action of the city council was final and irrevocable—not so. According to Odem, “the mayor said that the threat of the action taken was merely to table” the signing of an agreement with the Division of Highways. The rerouting is still included in the master plan of the city and therefore still listed as a desirable goal of the city’s progress.

Odem is passing around a petition to reopen the hearings and debate the controversial road in hopes of providing a solution to the problem of not destroying the ecological beauty of the Los Osos Valley yet providing a bypass around the city to deter growth and traffic problems.

The petition reads: Whereas at the October 11 freeway agreement hearing there was at least one person present desiring to speak in favor who was not heard, and at least two major factors of considerations were neither mentioned in testimony nor weighed in deliberation by the council. Therefore, the undersigned, all registered voters of San Luis Obispo, respectfully request that the council reopen that bearing in order that the additional and new testimony might be given, and further by their signatures on this petition, the petitioners pray for reversal of the city council action of October 11 and thereby sign the freeway agreement as presented by the highway department with the built-in controls of specific engineering and environmental considerations.

Name change offers possible prestige value

The possible redesignation of the college to a state university will have several positive effects, President Robert Kennedy said recently.

“Be still changing the status of one or all of the 19 California state colleges to universities was signed into law by Gov. Ronald Reagan Monday. As a result of the action, these school soon may be known as California Polytechnic State University.”

In its first place,” said Kennedy of the name change, “it will aid in recruiting outstanding faculty members from this college in an area of increasing competition among public institutions.”

The college President described the state colleges in its states in the U.S. as being quite small with limited enrollments and small faculty. “We must continually describe our college’s total program in detail to measure potential new faculty,” he said. “We must keep a list of educational improvement programs or applied research projects are often overlooked by federal agencies,’ he added.”

Grants of funds for educational improvement programs or applied research projects are often overlooked by federal agencies, he added.”

The California State College and Community College Districts are again trying for salary increases for their faculty members despite indications from Gov. Ronald Reagan he will veto the measure if brought before him.

The salary system last week approved a resolution calling for a 13 percent increase in average faculty pay and a six percent increase of the salary budget for fringe benefits funds.

However, Reagan, who recently vetoed a 7.5 percent salary increase, said he would veto the governor again vetoed their request for a cost of living raise.

The resolution endorsed by the trustees, opposed only by Trustee Dudley Swain, is virtually a copy of last year’s request, which was vetoed by Gov. Reagan. Two years ago, 7.4 percent cost-of-living increase was only $11.

Councilman Keith Gurnee and Ken Bruce (1-1) received SAC approval Monday on their proposal opposing tentative City Council action to tighten up on local TG’s.

SAC raps on

New ID cards are examined

The functional value of the ID cards was defended by top level college administrators Monday night’s Student Affairs Council meeting.

Librarian Carles Beteman said the library gets the most utility and makes the effective use of ID cards. With the new book cards and the ID cards, the library can automatically record check out information by machine, saving staff and student time.

Representing the health center, Dr. Lloyd Hall said that the center’s health services will help in accurate identification and prevent mistakes on records. The embarrassed name and social security number will help the staff pull up and record on the right form.

James Landreth, director of business affairs, mentioned the use of the cards for security measures.

Alfred Amoral, Foundation executive director, said that the Foundation viewed the cards as an aid in checking checks and as a meal ticket identification.

In summing up his opinion of the ID cards, Board member Ken Bruce said that the Library, health center, academic affairs, will use the identity cards as a guard in the cards, that the other services are using the ID cards just because they are there.

SAC burned the midnight oil Monday night and continued discussions even after the C.U. papers, a statement expressing opposition to the ordinance concerning TG’s being considered by the San Luis Obispo City Council. Two years ago for the hiring of a corporate lawyer, was read again, and a committee was set up to investigate the full scope of the program.

The corrected resolution was then put to a vote. It passed 18-1 in favor, 3, opposed, and 3 abstained.

Grades mailed

Rutgers would like their fall quarter grades mailed to their Christmas address or have them self-addressed, stamp and return to the Records Office, Administration Building 222.
Higher quality education today, it is imperative that students maintain a position to oppose the firing of wanted professors. I've been recently informed that an excellent math professor who 1) has his Ph.D., 2) is a very competent instructor, S) la very done to being relieved of his teaching duties.

The tenure system at this school is far outdated and outdated. This instructor's denial of tenure can be attributed to his hair length, dress style, and opposition to the administration's garbage. We, the students, cannot tolerate such random discrimination on the inequalities involved at this time. We are surrounded by such atrocities in all of our governing and social bodies today. Why must it permeate the foundation of Cal Poly when we, the students, will suffer? Are we to sit back and listen to such "Bureaucratic Bromides," as in the past?

I cannot understand what constitutes such dislikes and disdain for a person such as Dr. Jay Featherston.

(Continued from page 1) agencies that we should be considered for such grants on the same basis as 'state universities,'” said Kennedy.

"Having the 'state university' title, along with the applied emphasis which goes with the word, 'polytechnic,' should enhance the institution's already fine reputation with the world of business, industry, agriculture, and education," Kennedy said. This could improve a graduate's chances of getting a job.

The bill renaming this college will not change the functions of the school. Programs such as those offering graduate degrees at the master's level and applied research projects will not be affected, Kennedy said.

Kennedy describes the bill as "long overdue recognition that the state college in California are by else and scope of programs, as well as by quality of instruction to both undergraduate and graduate levels, equal or superior to most institutions of higher education in other states and foreign countries."

Other portions of the resolution approved last week called for differential increases for department chairmen, division chairman, associate dean, vice presidents and related academic salary group positions.

Dr. David Provost, chairman of the CRCAS, said the state college system is lagging behind in salary structure in comparison with comparative institutions and community colleges.

Singers plan free concert

The College Chamber Singers will informally put the concert band rolling with a noon concert today, Wednesday, in San Luis Obispo County Courthouse.

According to John Russell, the choir's director, this type of performance is a first for the Chamber Singers. He said everyone is invited to bring his lunch and sit in the chairs or on the floor while the group sings.

The 28-Voice ensemble repertoire includes several madrigals and hymns, as well as two avant-garde pieces.

Blakely won a first marksman award in rapid fire, Eastman scored an expert in slow-fire, NMC, and .22 aggregate. All shooters fired above their averages, despite a cold windy morning.

The team has set their sights on the State and Regional Collegiate Championships this spring. All qualified shooters are welcome and needed to join the varsity Rifle and Pistol team.
