Reagan fills last vacant board of trustees seat

Gov. Ronald Reagan filled the last vacant position on the Board of Trustees of the California State College and University Tuesday when he appointed Frank P. Adams to replace the late E. Guy Warren.

Adams, a Republican from Piedmont, is an attorney with a law office in San Francisco. He is a graduate of Stanford University with a law degree from law school. His term will expire March 1, 1973.

Adams’ appointment will have to be confirmed by the State Senate, as will three other appointments to the board the governor made last week.

Robert F. Beaver was appointed to fill the late Dudley Swin’s term until 1976. Beaver is a businessman active in Orange County civic and service organizations.

Jeannette Ritchie, who lives in Menlo Park and serves on the State Board of Education from which she is expected to resign, was appointed to replace Phoebe Conley. Mrs. Conley’s term expired March 1.

Roy T. Brophy, a former student here who visited campus for the Founders Day activities Tuesday, was appointed to replace William A. Norris, whose term also expired March 1.

Adams’ term at the university was expected to deliver the verdict on the bylaws of three student groups tonight, at the last meeting of the Winter Quarter.

The Gay Student Union, Poly Student Council, and Human Relations Committee (formerly Leadership Conference Committee) have all submitted bylaws to BAC for approval. If approved, the bylaws will be sent to the college administration for final action.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to have all candidates for student government under the program used efficiently. When asked if more money would be available in other programs to make up for the lack of EOP, Dumke said that he would not reply for the governor.

"It is my understanding that many funds for many purposes will be brought together for more effective use," Dumke said.

Chancellor Glenn G. Dumke faced a barrage of questions covering such topics as the governor’s proposed budget, effects of the system-wide name change and problems in the overseas study program—during two press conferences Tuesday morning and afternoon.

Dumke, chancellor of the California State University and Colleges, faced over 1,500 students, faculty and townsmen in Men’s Gym Tuesday in honor of the 51st birthday of this college.

Founders Day activities also included a dedication of Polyhouse, presentation of a plaque in Poly Grove and appearance by Dumke at two press conferences, a special luncheon and remarks by Pres. Robert E. Kennedy. Student activities included a special luncheon for the Founders Day activities Tuesday, was appointed to replace William A. Norris, whose term also expired March 1. Brophy lives in Sacramento, and is expected to resign his position on the Board of Trustees of the California Community College.

Studies program studied

by JANIS GLOKNER

With the recent adverse publicity about the California State Colleges International Program, many are left wondering about the worth of the overseas study program.

The program, which involves sending students abroad for a year of study, has lately been the subject of much debate and investigations in Sacramento.

The controversy lies in the alleged misallocation of funds to a report of poor management.

The university’s report released in December showed that students had been overcharged $400 to $450 in the last five years.

The State University and Colleges Chancellor Glenn G. Dumke and Thomas Holmes, former director of the program, recently testified before a ways and means committee in Sacramento on the use of state funds for personal use.

Lantos said that the money was not an "overcharge" but a needed reserve fund established to guarantee that all bills would be paid in the face of fluctuating costs. He said such a surplus is no longer needed because of lost lower air fares between the U.S. and Europe.

It had been suggested that extra money had been used to ship a personal car from Italy to Vienna, to buy gifts for foreign professors and to throw expensive dinners for foreign visitors.

Lantos answered these charges saying that shipping the car had saved the state money since they didn’t have to rent it. Alleged gifts were actually payments for services the professors rendered to the program and parties were actually group dinners for the students at the beginning and end of their visit.

According to Dr. Paul Tellow, in charge of the program on this campus, the general feeling at the hearing was that the matters given by Lantos and Dumke were satisfactory and that their actions did not involve criminal intent. It was also generally accepted that the errors in the past will be corrected, according to Tellow.

Tellow went on to say that there were indications that in the future, very careful budget language will be used for controls.

"They told us that they felt that the publicity of late does not hold a lot of weight throughout the university," Tellow said. "It was the general consensus that the program was a good thing and should be continued."
Evans blasts questionnaire charges as being unwarranted allegations

Editor's Note: I would like to respond to Ron Martinelli's letter of March 4, wherein he labeled the questionnaire charges as being unwarranted.

The unwarranted allegations stem from similar statements made by Rushmore, a page 2 or 3. At that time, Rushmore charged Martinelli with making frivolous charges against members of the California State University and Colleges Board of Trustees. Rushmore had to go to court to get those charges dismissed. Rushmore has since forcibly resigned and a new member has been appointed by the state legislature.

Rushmore was a former member of the state legislature and he has been reappointed to the board by the state legislature. Rushmore has been reappointed to the board by the state legislature. Unity through sports

Editor:

We are writing this article mainly to the 40 percent of the student body who have little interest in sports. There is a sense of unity among the students of the athletic program here that is rare among the general body. The involvement of the students in sports, whether as participants, coaches, or supporters, provides a vehicle for the development of personal and professional skills. We feel that the athletic program here should have a better support to back the quality teams that the college is producing. We also feel that the student body should become more involved in the different sports going on during the year.

Today is a day for innovation and experimentation," Dumke said. We in the California State Colleges, are moving along the path and Cal Poly is an important part of the innovative team.

Dumke was a member of the team that drew up the original Master Plan for Higher Education. He said the team concluded the plan involved a concept of "efficiency through specialization." Further, it was decided that the state colleges would concentrate on providing education, with some emphasis in research.

"The University (University of California system) is interested in students who are very bit as able, but who have different career objectives," said in my opinion, the Master Plan has worked and it has worked well. Certainly, without it we could not have educated the thousands of students whom we have managed to serve over the last decade."

"The Master Plan did something else as far as our type of institution is concerned. It developed an academic government and a board of trustees dedicated to the teaching-type institution. This is unique in the United States."

Dumke said the uniqueness of this college are worth preserving. He shares McPhee and Kennedy's concern that there be in the state at least one institutions with similar emphasis be said.

Amendment

Zoning change allows for conferences

An amendment to the San Luis Obispo city zoning ordinance could benefit students here in the future by stabilizing prices for off-campus dormitory housing.

The city council approved the amendment on Monday night which will allow Banner Glen to proceed with efforts to promote educational conferences for its facilities.

"If this can be made into a profitable operation maybe it can generate a reduction in rates for students," said Councilman Emmons Blake during discussion of the matter.

The educational conferences would help offset revenue lost through vacancies, especially during summer months. The facilities would be available to high school, community college, athletic and religious groups, for example.

One of the conferences already planned is a statewide meeting of Educational Opportunity Program Directors.

Jeff Bynee, general manager of Banner Glen, said he could not see any reduced rates coming about, but he did say "I think it would stabilize prices".

The council also heard several complaints from citizens about unattended dogs roaming about the city.

One citizen urged the council to allocate more money to Wooda Animal Shelter with the stipulation the funds be used for services within San Luis Obispo.

The man said one of the problems Woods has is in rounding up stray dogs in the use of a tranquilizer gun. Once the animal is shot with the gun it is three minutes before the drug takes effect, and the dog is usually long gone.

Mayor Kenneth Schwarts said Woods was doing a good job and the council would consider the situation during budget session.

The mayor suggested that in the mean time the dogs continue to be reported to Woods, and also reported to the city administrator. Schwarts said when enough complaints came in from a neighborhood a "raid" would be arranged to pick them up.

Math Club postpones drawing

A Math Club-sponsored drawing for a Mini Electronic Calculator has been postponed from Thursday to 11:00 a.m. May 11, according to Tom Calking, coordinator of the drawing.

Calking said the postponement will also allow tickets to be available during Poly Royal. Excess funds over the purchase price of the calculator will support the club's future expenses.

The calculator, manufactured by Dietzgen, is battery-operated and set up for addition, subtraction, multiplication and division. Prices for tickets for the drawing are 80 cents for one or $3 for five, according to Calking.

Veteran Club members got the latest information on veterans benefits from John Eno, county veterans service officer last week.

Enos told the group the Veterans Administration would be sending out IBM cards in May to verify the number of units completed during the year. He said the computer "locks" it and would not send out anymore money until the card comes in.

"The VA does lose 5 percent of these cards," Enos said.

He said veterans who indicated they would attend school through the summer quarter would receive IBM cards in July.

Enos said there were 80 or 30 bills in Congress that would raise veterans benefits, and one, HR5797, would result in a 10.1 percent increase.

"I don't think it has a chance of passing," he said. "It sounds like the basic rate will go from $170 to $200, and the other rates will be adjusted accordingly."

He said a six to eight percent increase plus an advance payment would probably be set by next September. He also expects VA service-connected disability payments to increase six percent.

Mobile home loans were added to the GI bill last year at 15.4 percent simple interest, and if aid eligibility for home loans can be restored.

U.S. charged with bombings

Saigon (UPI) — North Vietnam charged that the United States has launched a major, wide-scale bombing campaign in the north. The U.S. command declined comment on the charges and said it had established a new policy not to disclose information on future air raids for security reasons.

As estimated 1.1 million young people who were granted “instant adulthood” last Saturday will feel the effects of adult privilege and responsibility under the new law.

The law which lowered the age of majority from 21 to 18 still freezes the age at 21 for drinking alcoholic beverages.

Young adults will now be allowed to serve on juries, become policemen, sign contracts, obtain credit, conduct driver education classes and record cattle brands, among other things.

One of the primary changes already noted by City Clerk Ruth Warnken was the number of inquiries made by males under 21 as to when the law was effective so they could marry without parental consent.

Warnken said, “the bill is 80 pages long and runs from the agricultural code to Welfare.”

A new step will be added to the spring registration process, according to Jerold Halley, director of Admissions and Records. Students will have to complete a state college-wide survey of 87 questions before finishing class registration. The survey will be handed out with registration forms Thursday and will be collected during registration.

Prescheduling for Spring Quarter will be held during College Hour this Thursday, according to Registrar Gerald Punches. Students should meet with their advisors at 11 a.m. in the place designated by their major department.

The purpose of the Student Resource Survey, Halley said, is to provide the financial standing of each state college’s enrollment of students.

State and federal funds for new services and facilities for the student body will be applied for by the chancellor’s office on the basis of the survey.
