Camejo claims capitalism not problem solver

Independent organization of the masses is the strategy for radicalization and revolution expressed by socialist Peter Camejo during his speech Monday night in Chumash Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Students for New Action Politics (SNAP), Camejo condemned capitalism and cited the working class as the weakness in the system which would lead to its ultimate downfall.

In his condemnation of capitalism, Camejo said, "Capitalism cannot solve the problems of the world. We have been watching for 200 years and the same ill still exist."

After picturing the religious, family, and economic structures, Camejo concluded, "We need a new way of life."

BUDGET SURVEY

Poll attacked as invalid

The ASI Finance Committee attacked the validity of the recent budget survey in a heated and confusing meeting Monday night.

Robert Timone, chairman of the budget survey committee, presented the findings of the survey to Finance Committee for their consideration. The survey came under immediate attack by the committee from a number of different angles.

Robert Timone, Finance Committee advisor, spoke out against the survey by saying that the results were only a function of the number of members within a given organization. The survey also supported by James Landreth, another member of the committee.

Timone also pointed out that one of the considerations that must be addressed when making a budget was the "educational value" of the program. He questioned Righetti as to where the time was taken into consideration in the survey.

Righetti defended the survey as not being the final answer to the problem, but another form of input into the budget making process. He pointed out that based on this survey there were some items that a conclusive decision could not be made about such as a day care center and athletics.

The debate continued among the Finance Committee members for some time before it was finally decided to send a recommendation to the Student Affairs Council (SAC) to give the College Programs Board more money. This money was expected to come from the increased revenue gained from reprinting the seats in Mustang Stadium.

The Finance Committee also recommended that the survey be used as another form of input into SAC's budget consideration but that it is not to be taken in lieu of other recommendations made by Finance Committee.

In other action, the committee decided to move their regular meeting from Monday night to Tuesday night due to the Memorial Day holiday this Monday.

At this meeting they are expected to interview candidates for the Financial Services positions.

Wall paper will be the only use of the $7.7 million foreign aid bill. This money was expected to come from the increased revenue gained from reprinting the seats in Mustang Stadium.

The committee also considered two line Item transfers from the SAC's budget to support the idea of summer interuniversity though there is not enough money left in the contingency fund to support the program financially.

Former candidate urges vote in today's election

Editor:

By now this whole election thing sticks so much you probably don't want to go anywhere near the polling booths today or tomorrow. Hold your nose — do anything — but go vote.

Why? Because last week, Elections Committee ruled that the four men contending for the offices of All president and vice-president had overspent the agreed-upon amount for paid media advertising, therefore, they ruled that the All had not legitimately judged the candidates.

There were numerous charges and counter-charges filed by the parties themselves. The whole thing entails worse than a four-day-old dead fish. So you've decided to protect the whole thing by not voting?

It doesn't do a bit of good. If you don't judge the candidates fairly at the booths today and tomorrow, you may have to suffer through a year of the president you didn't vote for.

And before you vote, it might be a good idea to take a look at how the men have been behaving since the last run-off. It could sway your vote, the election, and the reputation for justice at this college.

Act for clean tomorrow

Editor:

The Clean Environment Act is a people's initiative which more than one-half million responsible Californians helped to qualify for the ballot. For a great many years, our elected and appointed officials have defaulted on their obligation to safeguard our environment. They have consistently thwarted good, workable bills to clean up and protect our environment.

Perhaps because so many of them are fed politically and financially to some of the biggest polluters in the state.

Proposition 8 was formed to take realistic action towards improving and protecting our environment. Through legal enforcement, the act seeks to push the polluters into compliance with healthy standards of pollution abatement. Granted, the cost for industry to take the necessary measures will be partially reflected in slightly increased costs of some products, but isn't it better to pay a little today for a clean tomorrow than to wait until the situation is unbearable and have to pay a whole lot more?

The American Medical Association has pointed out that "...disease induced by the environment now costs $9 billion a year." That is an incredible amount of money and misery, and California, as a result of its tremendous size, is paying more than 10 percent of it.

The Clean Environment Act will create a better health, a stronger economy, and will save our state more than $4 billion a year in environmentally caused medical problems, consumer costs, and material damage.

Use the ballot box to fight pollution. Vote YES on the Clean Environment Act.

Error in Chabot column

Editor:

We would like to call your attention to an error in Warren Chabot's column last week announcing the candidates for county supervisor. Keith Gurnes is not running for county supervisor. Keith is running for the fifth district supervisor's post in the June 8 election.

More information on these men and others seeking local and state posts will be presented at a candidate night this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the San Luis City Hall-Council Chambers.

We people on this campus advocate massive support of Dr. Kreaja. His qualifications, especially his expertise in ecological matters and his integrity, will be known to many people on this campus. We should make Dr. Kreaja our gift to the welfare of this county.

Archie tosses hat in ring for county supervisor

by KATHY BEASLEY
Managing Editor

The chairman of Grass Roots and the Head Start Policy Council has "an attitude of working with people"—and he thinks it is an important qualification for a candidate running for public office.

Kurt Kupper, architecture student, is vying with eight others for the county supervisor seat in the third district. In an interview with Mustang Daily he talked about his campaign.

Kupper said students spend approximately $88 million in the county, yet they have no representative in county government.

But he does not base his campaign on student needs. "A supervisor deals with the entire community and must be responsible to the whole community, not just the students," he said. "Growth of the county is one of the areas Kupper is concerned with. He said that the board must establish definite criteria for growth. "Growing without limitations is insane," he said. "Now we're basing our decisions on growth patterns established some years ago instead of on what the land can handle."

Though Kupper favors public transportation, he said it would take careful study to produce a workable system. New funds from the gas tax could be used to subsidize a system, according to Kupper, instead of building new roads which "we don't really need."

The candidate said he is very strongly opposed to a proposed desalinization plant. "I'm not opposed to it on the grounds that this research shouldn't be done, but to put a facility of that size and nature in an underdeveloped area is devastating to the local community."

"Power and water invites developers to exploit the resources."

The establishment of criteria for growth, making the board sensitive to people and a practice of full-time supervisors getting out to the communities to meet with people topped Kupper's list of goals.
