Paternal influence more than just good ol' advice

For new student Cheryl Cline it's a new brand campus, but for her father, Jack, who is returning after 18 years, who wouldn't believe this is the same Poly of 1958-59?

California Polytechnic State University, circa 1958: still the state college, old Army buildings have an accent been replaced by three-story architecture buildings; mobile homes for couples replaced by parking lots adjacent to the baseball field; books, wrestling, intramurals and other sports took place in the Ondrandi Gym—the Men's Gym was not completed yet; and plans for the Science North Computer Science College Buildings were just plans at the time.

Thirty-nine year old Jack Cline is back to pick up his master's degree in physical education. The one county and track coach at Arroyo Grande High School in the L-Rita Mar District graduated in 1960 with a degree in elementary education. His 17-year old daughter is a first year student in math.

For Cheryl and most other new entering students, her view-point on how four to five years is fairly one dimensional—she gets what the college is today, but in his department, the men outnumbered the women.

"Most girls wore skirts and 'rote. "In order for the educational process to be eager to acquaint the student with county elections was exactly what I based my decision to join the program had already been implemented, the life was just 'over-all good-googling. It was quite unusual to see someone here that took the time to engage in a series of open campaigns...

One member was removed from the Summer Interim Committee for excessive absence and ASI Pres. Robin Baggett announced a request for 1200 by Baggett to subsidize other groups competing with ASI picking up tabs for the closest thing to a 12-man, I imagine if some students the computer science building and explain to her the building was just in the blue print stages when he attended this university in 1938.

Cold Blood
concert Friday

Cold Blood, a non-man San Francisco rock group, will perform here tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Chumash Hall.

"Why not meet, just the two of us in this limited manner," Blake said. "After all, we are the only candidates running for this position...the only candidates that the electorate of the fifth district will have an opportunity to choose between; and that we should add other candidates and other issues escapes me.

"Where humanly possible, citizen participation should be welcomed rather than looked on as an obstacle in the performance of public business," Blake offered. "This is the very point I put out that I lifted that quote from a recent piece of my opponent's promotion. In fact, it was exactly what I based my educational process are pretty much the same. The main changes lie in the division of buildings and the jump in student enrollment to over 12,000 plus the additional faculty and administrators needed to facilitate the challenge in education as a major improvement in the old and the present college. "I really like it here because particular programs seem more challenging than before. This is due to students who just won't sit there and accept the old ways but are speaking out seeking for more.

"Which Cal Poly appeals to him more? One of the late 50's or the early 70's?" Today the college is better prepared to send people into the field. It's a blend of a university-type campus in a small rural setting. It's really a beautiful school. I like this one.

Since this issue marks the end of my tenure as editor-in-chief, and I'm such a magnanimous individual, it only fitting that I pay homage to my supporting cast.

To my managing editor, Tony Santos, thanks for all the afterhours and yelling you did. I'm glad you did— you needed that!

To my photographers and reporters, thanks for not quitting the staff for Avila U. Although the performances weren't always above and beyond the cal of duty, they usually came through on time.

As for the production team, well, it is a well known fact that journalists and printers love one another. This summer has simply re-enforced that feeling of love and mutual admiration—even though we never made a deadline and the beloved printers were not always perfect.

The next Mustang you read will be the Daily in the capable hands of Kathleen Beasley, who needs no other introduction other than editor-in-chief. Kathy is hard at work on her first issue which should be great.

QUEST COLUMN
Dinner story lacks objectivity

Last week's Mustang daily carried a staff column by Tony Santos about a dinner "on the hill." Unfortunately, someone neglected to run an objective news story along with the writer's opinion, giving the readers a chance to form their own opinions.

The news story possibly would have read as follows:

Cal Poly President Robert Kennedy indicated Monday night he is still willing to talk about annexation of the campus to the city as long as there is a "dollar and cent" gain for the university.

The topic was brought up, along with finances and instructionally-related programs, by ASI President Robin Baggett during a dinner hosted by Kennedy and his wife at Poly House for campus administrators and student leaders.

The latest development in the annexation discussion battle is an exchange of letters last week between Mayor Kenneth Schwartz and Kennedy.

Kennedy said the mayor expressed regret that the Kennedy administration was moving from the city to the campus, adding that it might be time to approach the annexation problem again.

I wrote back that I am ready and willing to talk about annexation whenever he is, but I wonder if the city's voters are ready to have 3,000 students added to the city's voting lists.

Baggett said he is interested in a merger between city and campus in hopes that new revenue could be used on projects such as a new and larger stadium. (Annexation would add over $800,000 a year to the city's share of state funds, half of which would go to Cal Poly Kennedy's main condition for the merger.)

The move is up to the city, according to Kennedy, since they have never responded to his proposal of dividing the gained revenue between the campus and city.

Discussing faculty evaluation by students, Baggett and the student body's main goal is to improve the quality of education.

"We can see the bad and good points the administration can't see, because we're the ones being taught," said Baggett. "If we evaluate the faculty it will be used in some system by the administration.

Kennedy answered that a committee is reviewing the joint programs each of the seven schools of the university design, hoping to establish guidelines for information that should be included in the evaluations. Programs are slated to begin Fall Quarter.

"But we need to know how students feel about the classroom," said Kennedy.

He also said two goals of the program are self-improvement of the teachers and use of administrators for evaluating the faculty and hiring, promotion, and tenure decisions.

"That's why the students have to go and do it very carefully, honestly and sincerely," Kennedy said.

Student control, however, is the factor that trustees are trying to eliminate from the instructionally-related programs, Kennedy pointed out.

A solution to the problem that would be agreeable to both students and administrators, Kennedy and Baggett said, would be to support the programs from the state's general fund.

"Legislators might work this solution unless students and administrators lobby together," Kennedy said.

"We're fighting against the same enemy," he said. "Lack of money.

End of news story.

I must mention last week's writer that the topics and discussion was not something to rush home and write mom about.

Some of us who take an interest in student government have been talking about these same issues for some time, saying much the same things.

But if the discussion was boring to the writers who were present at the dinner, let's put the blame where it rightfully belongs. And it isn't in Kennedy's lap.

The dinner was a Baggett and Johnson idea, suggested by them to Kennedy. Because of this, Kennedy asked the two what they had planned for discussion. Baggett rattled off a list of topics, adding that anyone could bring up a subject they wanted to.

Budgeting help to aid students

The summer Dennis Johnson's office has started many new programs for the students of Cal Poly. Let us be known that we are about to slow down with our services to provide services to students during our term in the fall.

Are you ready for a new term? Student Financial Counseling. We feel that the most important problem that a Senate faces during college is lack of finances. And not to stop college money is probably one of the biggest issues in life.

We are planning to set up an advisory council on all Senate matters that could ever happen. Students. Advice from the council will be given in the areas of loans, grants, scholarships, investments, ways to become financially sound, habits of budgeting, etc. As we all see, it will cover all areas.

The council will work and assist students in a completely confidential manner. Income, and ability to pay aspects of all will be kept confidential to any those involved in the matters when possible.

At the present time during the interim stage of the "Student Financial Counseling" Dennis Johnson will be heading the project, and we are looking for qualified students who would be interested in this area of student services. This method of bringing in more students at our long-range plan for expanding the Program.

The soon-to-be off-shoot of the Financial Counseling, and yet another service to students, is Student Job Coordination. Please hear our cry for help. We do need more student support. These super programs are for you.

What is Roundhouse

Editor:

For the benefit of those students who still are not sure exactly what Student Roundhouse Services is, or does, let me explain briefly.

Roundhouse is not a Christian commune in Poly Canyon, a club for future railroad engineers, or a new coffee house in the College Union. Roundhouse is a telephone and a desk located in A.B.I. Vice-President Dennis Johnson's office and most importantly student volunteers who want to help out other students who have questions about Cal Poly and the L.O. community.

What kind of questions do we help students answer? Where is Lost & Found? Who sells unopened books? Where can I get draft counseling? Where is the nearest post office? What is Roundhouse and does someone go around and find out for you, which will save you time and frustration?

Roundhouse volunteers who want to help out other students have questions about Cal Poly and the L.O. community. Who sells unopened books? Where is the nearest post office? What is Roundhouse and does someone go around and find out for you, which will save you time and frustration?

Now that you know a little more about Roundhouse, give us a call at 546-3011, pick up one of our cards with the trail tracks on the front, a calendar on the back, and handy phone numbers inside, and tell us that you have a question. We don't know all the answers, but then, we'll call around and find out for you, which will save you time and give us the information for our files in case someone else has the same question or problem.

paper, I was quite happy to have the discussion center around annexation and faculty evaluation, topics that the general population of San Luis Obispo are interested in. But a Mustang Daily reporter should have been there, prying into student-oriented topics, reaching for the sensitive areas that Kennedy cannot be so glib about. It was a good dinner with ex- cellent cuisine. And if the conversation was dull, it certainly wasn’t because Kennedy refused to talk about taboo subjects...noody bothered to ask about them.

Former Mustang football season ticket holders were reminded today that they have until 4:30 p.m. Tuesday to exercise their option on the same seats for the 1972 campaign. It is not necessary for the season ticket holders to do this in person," Dave Oldfield, Associated Student ticket manager announced. "People can call the ASI office at 546-2411 and advise us that they want the same tickets this fall. Then all they have to do is follow up the call with a check."

Oldfield advised that "there still are plenty of excellent seat locations remaining. Coach Joe Harper's Mustangs will be campaigning for a fourth straight conference championship and a possible bid to the Camellia Bowl this fall. Home opponents will be Cal State Hayward on September 18, Montana State September 23, Cal State Humboldt September 5, Boise State October 7 and the homeowner game with Cal State Northridge on October 21. All will be interesting games and elections engagements.

Season tickets are priced at $17.50 for the general public and $7.50 for students. Checks should be made payable to the Associated Students, Cal Poly ASI offices are in the College Union.
