GEORGE MCGOVERN
Hold Nixon accountable

by KATHLEEN REASLEY

Calling on Americans to hold President Richard Nixon accountable for his actions, Senator George McGovern kept up his attack on the Vietnam war and corruption in government in weekend California campaign stops.

Speaking before 300 supporters in the San Francisco Cow Palace Friday night, McGovern quoted Nixon as saying, "in my campaign for the presidency, I pledged to end this war. If I do not do so, I expect the American people to hold me accountable.

"If we don’t hold him accountable,” McGovern said, "what hope is there of ever having a president who honors his commitments to the people of America?

The presidential candidate arrived at the jam-packed arena half an hour late and was introduced by San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto amid a steady chant of “We want George.”

He began his speech saying that it is time to put decency to the leadership of the country.

"Tonight we want to say to special interests, wiretappers and others who have invaded the present administration, give us back our country," he said.

McGovern said that though he would like to believe that rumors about the Paris peace talks, Americans have too often been told that peace is within reach.

"The American people are no longer satisfied with the rhetoric of peace. They want the reality of peace," he said.

The crowd booed and hissed as McGovern attacked Nixon for "hiding in the White House." He said that Nixon’s surrogates have been "hiding behind reports to the Vietnam plan revealed in a televised speech last week.

not carefully what they are not saying," he said. "Not one has said my plan will work. Not one has said it will fail to achieve what I believe should be our goal—to bring the peace home and to end the killing in 90 days.

"While he [Nixon] says there will be no peace without honor, I say there will be no honor for America until we can restore ourselves to peace.”

McGovern ended with a plea for his supporters to get the people out to vote.

"I’ve been reading in the press that young people are apathetic about the election. I think we answered that tonight," he said. (Continued on page 3)

San Luis Obispo residents got another chance Thursday night to listen to and question the people who will be running their government.

Every candidate spoke for himself, except for Don MacGillivray and Gary Hart, from the 35th Congressional District, who were represented at the speakers’ forum by Rich Bevell and Curtis Heymore.

Julian Camacho, the only speaker from the 12th Congressional District, said the prime concern of the people of San Luis Obispo was tax reform.

"We’re supposed to have a progressive tax in this country. The more you make, the more you pay. Don’t kid yourself. There are 100 people in California making between $40,000 and $50,000 a year who don’t pay any state taxes.

"People who make $6,000 to $10,000 a year pay 36 percent of the state tax. It’s your dollar and you’re the one who pays it. If we wanted to see your tax dollar put to work for the economic development of this country, if you want to see an end to the Vietnam war, then you’re going to support me and George McGovern.

The tickets for the Bill Cosby show are now on sale in the College Union at the Information Desk.

Cosby will be appearing in the Men’s Gym Friday. Also included in the show will be Ian Chandler, an accomplished guitarist from Los Angeles.

Two shows are scheduled: one at 7:30 p.m., and another at 10:30 p.m., each lasting approximately two hours. There are less than 50 reserve seats left which are on sale for $4.00 for students and $6.00 for the general public. General admission is $3.00 for students and $4.50 for non-students. Tickets will be on sale from 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. (Continued on page 3)

The proposition 22, corresponding roughly to the practices in California's Proposition 22 at the coming election, concerns the opposition to farm workers for the selection of a union to represent them. Outnumbering the permanent employees, these temporary employees on a farm do not constitute a bargaining unit, the employers argue.

3. Authorize the superior court, in the event of a called strike, to restrain strike action for 60 days; if this measure were passed, the proposition sets out to prevent a labor dispute causing a total loss in a crop just coming on to harvest.

These measures, it seems to me, would reasonably protect the right of farm workers to organize and fight for their economic interests and at the same time protect the right of consumers to buy farm produce without suffering interference from picketers and boycotter around the supermarkets where the goods are sold.

Proposition 22 is being frankly and suitably characterized as a destructive, antidemocratic measure, but I think that this exaggeration of charges, disproved with no great difficulty by comparing this law to our national labor—legislation. On balance it is a stabilizing charter for the relations of farm operators and farm workers.

When the siren whistle goes for ‘ride with a cop’

Sometimes it’s hard to distinguish myth from reality—and that’s precisely why there exists a program which gives the citizens of San Luis Obispo a chance to get to know and understand the events in a day of the life of an average policeman. All Pres. Robin Baggett calls the program “Ride with a Cop” and it is highly in favor of it as an important step toward better community relations.

Anybody who is over 18 can ride for four to six hours with any member of the San Luis Obispo Police Department. However the 4 to 12 p.m. watch is the most difficult one to get on because it’s the busiest.

Applications are now available at the Allone. Completed ones will be sent to the police department and they will call the applicant when there is an opening. Baggett encourages students to take an active interest in the program.

“In the four years I’ve been here, I’ve never heard anyone who’s been hassled by a cop,” he says. “They’ve been very understanding with the youth and we should treat them with the same respect.”

Help aims to ease doctor-shy

Questions ranging from common medical ailments to personal and symptoms are being answered in the Help Center, an All sponsored service, from 15:30 to 1:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays in College Union 118.

A nurse is stationed at the Help Center during this time to answer health questions.

Students who associate the doctor’s office with fear and mistrust can go to the Help Center to have questions on health answered.

“Where records or names are kept so the student who fears a doctor’s office can feel more at ease at the Help Center,” said All Pres. Robin Baggett.

The Help Center has been operating for a week without many students dropping in.

Law officers receive money for housing

Grants to reimburse law enforcement personnel are being provided by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) in the form of fees and books for the quarter.

According to John Reynolds of the Financial Aid Office, law enforcement personnel who are now students can complete an application so that their money can be refunded.

The objective of the program is to encourage in-service officers and staff of the local, state, and federal agencies to sign-up their training and experience.

Any course of instruction at this university is applicable to the LEAA program. Students who are on leave from these agencies as full time students, as well as those interested in taking only an occasional course may be encouraged to apply to the University Financial Aid Office, Administration 107, or call 546-2872.

City mayor is director again

San Luis Obispo Mayor Kenneth E. Schwartz has been re-appointed to the state-wide committees which make recommendations to California’s high schools, community colleges, colleges and universities on credit transfer for architectural programs.

Glenn S. Dambro’s chancellor of the California State University and Colleges made the announcement of Schwartz’s re-appointment for the 1971-73 school year.

Schwartz is a director of the School of Architecture and Environmental Design on this campus. He came here in 1963.

Prop 22 for both sides

Editor:

We have heard much concerning the opposition to Proposition 22, and in one I would like to present the facts as I see it. Proposition 22 at the coming election proposes to regulate and define fair and unfair labor practices in California’s agricultural industry in a manner corresponding roughly to the National Labor Relations Act’s long-existing control over industrial relations throughout the country. This is a basic creation of new state law, complex and detailed, that will be heard to have evolved in the Legislature, but as it was twice enacted there, its dispute-bound proponents are now going to the people.

The proposition would:

1. Permit secondary boycotts of farm products, which are of course illegal in all other industries, and prohibit picketing at the point of sale.

2. Require a secret ballot of farm workers for the selection of a union to represent them; barring that the election is held at a time when the temporary employees on a farm do not constitute a bargaining unit, the employers argue.

3. Authorize the superior court, in the event of a called strike, to restrain strike action for 60 days; by this measure the proposition sets out to prevent a labor dispute causing a total loss in a crop just coming on to harvest.

These measures, it seems to me, would reasonably protect the right of farm workers to organize and fight for their economic interests and at the same time protect the right of consumers to buy farm produce without suffering interference from picketers and boycotters around the supermarkets where the goods are sold.

Robert Nimmo (1), candidate for the 29th Hart, was two political platform presenters Assembly District, and Curtiss Haymore, at the Speakers’ Forum discussion Thursday, spokesman for 36th District Candidate Gary Candidates’ platforms . . .

He said his party is opposed to the death penalty, because it is a deterrent to crime, and “You can’t right a wrong by killing a person.”

Peace and Freedom party, Woods says, favors the Marijuana Initiative, “I don’t like it, but I do respect it,” he said. “Coffee, cigarettes, and alcohol. These can have far more dangerous effects than marijuana.” Woods added that his party favors the Coalition Initiative, and opposes the Agricultural Labor Proposal.

Rod Williams, also a candidate for the 58th Assembly, wants to “overhaul and revamp the entire California tax structure, I find it hard to believe that the 101 wealthiest people in California pay no taxes.”

Williams says he endorses the Coalition Initiative (“It will not remove local control of our coastline”) and opposes the farm labor bill. “We must have decent profit and wages for the farmer.”

Proposition 83 is not the answer.”

Rich Sewell, speaking for Mac Gillivray, and the 30th Assembly candidate “has had experience in community affairs. This experience has helped him achieve a proud record of responsiveness. The working men support Mac Gillivray because he has been responsive to them.”

The spokesperson said Mac Gillivray has served to “protect Santa Barbara from an oil disaster. He authored two bills which were designed to save Santa Barbara by restricting offshore oil drilling.”

Gillivray, the incumbent in the 57th District, began by encouraging participation in student lobbying. Among Gillivray’s varied objectives are the following: 1) Equal educational opportunity for every child; 2) Restrictions on drug abuse, pornography, and violent crimes; 3) Improvement of the quality of law enforcement officers.

Gillivray said he has authored hundreds of bills, including one to protect the coastline by stopping offshore oil drilling. He also touched on capital punishment by saying: “If hope that one day we can abolish the death penalty.”

Bringing up the rear was Susanne Palass, the challenger for the 15th Senate spot. The first female state senatorial candidate seemed to be concerned about almost everything, “She laid out a broad, sweeping platform which included educational aid, county development, medical care for the elderly and disabled, and assistance for the farm worker. What the world needs now, she said, is “people with different priorities, sensitivity to the world’s problems, and knowledge of how to work with others.”

Speech instructor Robert Andrews, moderator for the evening, thanked the candidates for appearing and talking, but then reconsidered, saying, “Why should I thank you for doing your duty?”

Scholarships available from state for students

Are the purse strings getting tight? Need more money to make it through school this year? Approximately 1,700 scholarships will be available for currently enrolled college students who are not already in the State Scholarship Program.

The number of scholarships has been increased as a result of Assembly Bill 1002. The scholarships cover the amount of fees charged to students at the California State Universities, approximately $300.

Those who will be under age 30 prior to October, 1973, are eligible to apply. No age limit applies to those applicants who have had at least 185 days of continuous military service.

Applications are available in the Financial Aid office or write to the State Scholarship and Loan Commission, 714 P Street, Sacramento, California 95814.

Applications must be filled with the State Scholarship Commission by midnight, Nov. 30. Scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test must also be submitted as part of the application.

First Mustang tie since 1951

by ERIC NOLAND

The game went down to the wire, then stayed there, and the Mustangs football team left Fresno Saturday night with a 24-24 tie in their first-even finish game in 11 years.

A tie football game is said to be a little like a kiss from your sister, but the cliché would not do justice to the hard-fought contest between two teams so evenly matched. The 14,300 people jammed into Fresno's McClatchy Badlands got more than their share of excitement.

The score in the game literally bounced back and forth as the Mustangs moved primarily on the ground while Fresno State relied on its passing game. It was that Bulldog aerial attack that beat Boise State failed as did a double-reverse-end around.

The game ended on the one yard line after 24-24 and nobody appeared to be complaining too loudly. John Pettas had perhaps his finest day right of the season, picking up 103 yards rushing and completing six of 11 passes for 86 yards and one touchdown.

The Bulldogs seemed content to come away with a tie as they kicked the extra point rather than trying to get the extra two.

The Mustangs came back down field on short runs and pass plays. Pettas and Co. came through on three crucial third down plays, but were unable to penetrate the Bulldog 28. So everyone thought.

Mike Thomas is hit by Fresno State defensive end Dwayne Westphal after a short gain. Thomas carried 23 times in the game and picked up 99 yards.
