SLO Transit Authority

The SLO Transit Authority is in the business of selling fine bicycles.

We sell the bikes we know you’ll be happy with. That makes us proud—proud that we made you happy, and proud of ourselves for bringing and passing on to you a quality product.

We have some of the finest bicycle riders and racers at our store. They are the guys who have three sets of wheels for their professional cycles. That’s getting pretty sticky about wheels, but they have them for racing. The differences in weight and spoke-lacing make a big difference to these people.

Our point is—our staff knows about bicycles. They will lace your wheel with the same care that they would go into a racing wheel. Or they will adjust your derailleur with the same finesse that they would at a criterium race. That is the reason they work at our bicycle shop— they love bicycles—who else would they be doing this thing for?

Please stop by. Our store is across the street from the mission.

642 Monterey Street. We would like to get to know you.

One way to overcome bad habits is to discipline yourself. This may mean not stopping for a six-pack on the way to the library.

“I am a senior and after four long years I still haven’t learned to discipline myself in achieving my goals,” Valerie complained.

Mulder counters, “We go through life faced with doing things that are not always pleasurable to us, but we learn to force ourselves to do them anyway.” Korea Is a handicap but for some of us that Is exactly what it takes to meet those deadlines.

The student who doesn’t like the assignment falls behind frequently. “Procrastination Is the art of keeping up with yesterday,” wrote Don Marquis. So if you feel yourself slipping behind, employ the basic formula or an individual method to re-establish a balanced position.

The state of your mental health can also determine your ability to produce quality work. The death of someone close or the loss of a boyfriend will bring depression or anxiety. Extra sleep, taking vitamins and relaxing often will aid you when such negative changes occur.

Jim, 20, a senior here, says, “I’m carrying 22 units, I’m relaxed even though I’m carrying a heavy load this quarter. I get things done because I have this burning desire to accomplish a goal I set for myself when I entered college.” His goal is to finish college in three years.

Desire is Jim’s key to motivation—he sets a time limit for himself and is following an organized schedule to allow for success. He knows what kind of plan works best for him and is using that plan to accomplish his goals.

Take some time and figure out exactly what it is you want to achieve. Now, what are the steps you can’t avoid if you’re going to reach that goal? Why do you want to reach that goal? Think about all the benefits achieving your goal will bring you. If you don’t have a plan to get started try the four-point plan mentioned earlier!

That’s all there is to being a self-starter! Gee, I can’t wait to get going.

Now, where did I put that four-point formula? It was here a minute ago... Ah well, if I turn up, let’s not worry about it. In fact, let’s have a beer while we sit here and try to figure out where it went.

Apartment hunting affects everyone in a different way. It becomes a challenge for the ambitious student, a crisis for the novice and a catastrophe for the unprepared. For a majority of students, it introduces the year's biggest headache.

Outpost is volunteering some quick pain relief without relying on the healing power of a few aspirins. Instead we offer Apartment II, a student reference guide to apartments.

Outpost thought it would be nice if the student could have a handy listing of many of the larger apartment complexes in town. Rents, deposits, laundry facilities, pets, garbage bills, cable TV and other particulars are outlined for him.

Of course, this kind of chart won't do away with apartment shopping entirely. It's still a good idea to inspect the rooms personally and perhaps talk with students who already live there. It would be impossible for us to accurately predict the number of vacancies each complex will have for summer or fall quarter, but the chart may help narrow down the list of possibilities.

We realize that transportation is a problem for many students, so maps have been included to show the locations of apartments and their proximity to the campus. In reference to the data we have listed, be careful; rents and deposits are subject to change at any time without notice.

RENTS AND DEPOSITS ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE AT ANY TIME, WITHOUT NOTICE

Drawing to be held Saturday,
May 19th (our Grand opening)
(Corner Johnson Ave.) 1264 Monterey St.
IT WAS TWO IN THE MORNING. My eyes were a shade of red from a long day's driving. We'd been watching for a place to sleep for almost an hour. I was looking forward to a hot shower and washing my itchy beard that the southerners didn't seem to appreciate too much. Finally we found it—a motel with a vacancy sign still lit, though the proprietor had gone to bed.

A middle-aged sleepy lady answered my knock. She turned the light on, looked at my face, felt a light that said 'no-vacancy,' turned the light off, and went back to bed. She wouldn't even let me talk to her! I was amazed. Then I remembered my beard. I didn't want to stay in that icky motel anyway. The frustrating question is: where's a person going to sleep while on the road?

Cheap Sleep

by KEN KORNELIS

Some motels are out for students, since they don't have a lot of money to spend. So where's a poor student going to find an inexpensive (or free) place to rest his bed? One possibility are the youth hostels. They usually have tables and grills, real flush toilets, and the luxury of all luxuries, a hot shower. If you like to be around a lot of people, you can accommodate yourself in this respect also. State parks in California charge from $1.00 to $3.00 a night per car. However, if you arrive late in the evening, after the check-in booth has closed, and leave early in the morning before it is open, you may not get the chance to play.

Another alternative is to travel in the national parks. They also have grills and tables, but usually no showers. These campgrounds are similar to the state parks in that they are usually crowded, and charge about the same price.

Campgrounds of America (KOAA), have been showing up in many places lately. They have about the same facilities as a State Park (tables, grills, and showers) and charge about the same ($3.00-$10.00). They are, however, often lacking seasonally.

One of the best places you can crash on the way is in the national forest campgrounds. These places are often very scenic, besides usually not having the crowds found in state and national parks. They have grills and tables, but no showers. Most national forest campgrounds have a small fee, but you seldom see anyone around collecting them. A fee deposit system is used and prosecution is possible if you don't pay. You have to keep your eyes open for signs marking the campgrounds while traveling through a national forest, as not all the campgrounds are on the roadways, as with the state and national Parks.

One possibility that you hear little about is in the United States is American Youth Hostels. Hostels usually provide cooking facilities where you can cook your own food. There is no age limit for staying at a youth hostel. You must have an American Youth Hostel card which costs $3 for those under 18, $8 for 18-30 year olds, and $10 for those 21 and over. Beyond this, the charge at each place you stay is usually $1.50 to $5.20. You may be expected to do a little work though. In California there are youth hostels in Calistoga, Hemet, Los Alamos, Sacramento, San Francisco (YMCA), and St. Helena.

There are a few rules and customs of the American Youth Hostels you may want to consider. The reason for hostels is basically to encourage traveling under your own power—such as bicycling, hiking, canoeing, skating, and horseback riding. Therefore, it says in the AYH booklet that motor transportation should be used only to the first hostel of a chain, or to a single hostel if biking, bicycling, canoeing, etc, in the area is intended, or if the distance makes it unsafe to travel under your own power. You are not supposed to hitchhike to hostels. Reservations in advance are appreciated, and arrival time is supposed to be between 7 p.m., lights out around 10 p.m., rise at 7 a.m. and check out at 9 a.m. Hostels in Canada are a better place for poor students to stay than AYH. Since they are government supported there, the cost is only 30 cents (or free if you have no money) and a breakfast is included. A little work may be required.

Hostels are more than just a place to stay. AYH arranges many low cost tours of interesting sections of the United States and the world. More Information of AYH cards can be obtained by looking under American Youth Hostels in the library, or by writing AYH, Golden Gate Council, 625 Polk, San Francisco Cal, 94102.

A couple of other places you can consider staying, if you think you can handle them, are the YMCA and Salvation Army mission places.

Finally, there's one more place you should consider—just an open place off the road or on a side road. When out of the city, if you're careful enough in choosing the place, you usually won't be hassled by the police or landowners. And the cost is cheap. I've done this many times, and only had one exciting experience (bodies getting rained out a couple of times). There were about four of us. We took a side road to a small lake, with some flat round around it. We had just gotten into bags, when we heard some dogs barking. Our eyes soon focused on a man, a gun, and the beady eyes of a doberman pinscher. The landowner questioned our right to be there. And we didn't argue with him. He said he had almost let loose his dobermans on us, and that we wouldn't have appreciated it, so he was pleased.

To travel cheaply, always carry a ground cloth and a sleeping bag. A tent comes handy if rain is forecast. Enjoy yourself. Traveling can be fun, especially when you're not staying in motels.
Most people make investments—saving bonds, stocks, industrial funds. A few students here are finding it profitable to collect antique items as an investment. We are not talking about the usual stamps and coins, but weird items such as Nazi flags, shaving implements, old records, newspapers, presidential signatures and radio tubes.

Chet Zinn, a physical education major, diggs old issues of Playboy magazine. This in itself is not unique, probably many people do. But Chet claims to be in it for the money. He's just five issues short of owning a complete collection. His most valuable is Hugh Hefner's first issue, printed in December of 1953, its market value is in the $300 range. The Playboy collection catches your eye and you are tempted to overlook the old issues of Life and Saturday Evening Post which he also collects.

Chet collects old shaving tools, too. He got into collecting razors when his grandfather opened a drawer in his bathroom which contained 10 or 13 old shaving kits. "I never threw a razor away, so I took them and started my collection. Now I buy up old razors and blades whenever I run across them in antique shops up and down the coast. I also grab up old shaving mugs used to whip up lather from bars of soap. warm water and a brush before cans of pressurized shaving cream were introduced in the early 1930's."

Chet's shaving collection consists of several irreplaceable blades and stropping devices. He owns a few of King C. Gillette's first replaceable blades, introduced in 1901, and Jacob Schick's first electric dry shaver built in 1930. Chet says that collecting razors and shaving mugs is becoming very popular lately, and that they are getting harder to find.

One of the most interesting collections around is the one owned by Jeff Monson, a Cuesta student. Old records are his groove. "Oh, I have the usual classics—Al Jolson, Frank Sinatra, and others—but I collect old records, and when I say old, I mean way old. I don't mean Elvis Presley old. I mean way back—George M. Cohan old. Edison records are my preference. I own records manufactured in the late 1890's on cylinders. I also own several one-sided recordings and some of these were recorded with no known medium—in other words, the technical process in which they were recorded is not known and they are not playable on conventional machines."

Some of his other albums include several old radio soundtracks, early stereo recordings, and a nearly complete classical collection which has been appraised at over $5500.

Jeff considers himself a Beattle expert, he has a copy of every album they have sold in America, and this is enough to keep you entertained for days! \"You name it, I have it.\" says Jeff. \"From Johnnie Ray to Johnny Cash; from Harry Belafonte to Stevie Wonder.\"

Dan Cropper, an industrial engineering major, collects old war flags. His collection includes a Japanese commander's flag, an old Italian flag, and several American flags, some of which go back to the Civil War. His most popular flag is a huge Nazi banner which is signed by all the American GI's who captured it during the war. Dan wrote to most of the men and got a reply from the Los Angeles area. The man wrote: "We captured that flag over Nazi headquarters in Ruins, Germany in 1945. We were a P-38 squadron. You would like to sell it to me?" Dan wouldn't sell. He figures it is worth hundreds of dollars and that's pretty good pay-off, considering he paid 73 cents for it at the Fresno Salvation Army Store in 1964!
