In a blue suede mood

by Dennis McClellan

Ever since “Bonnie and Clyde,” the story of two depression gangsters, has been told, the image of the notorious couple has been a powerful one. Today it is often used to describe the Jacksons’ perceived behavior. But is the image accurate? Or is it just a myth created by the media?

A nostalgic feeling for the past is no longer the private domain of the Geriatric set. It has also affected the younger generation and has created a common ground between the young and the old.

Life in the rapidly changing world of the 60’s and 70’s has resulted in a feeling of confusion and unease next year. Home, the generation gap.

The instability of the present has created in many, a fear of the future. It is little wonder that the past, as seen through the mist of time, appears to be highly appealing in comparison to the present. The past is certain. The future is not.

Of course, the movies are acted as time machines in producing this intimate relationship with the past, a reversal of roles, to create an illusion.

For the Jacksons, it is a matter of turn of your television dial or a visit to your neighborhood theater can, for a couple of hours, recreate the seemingly good old days.

“The Waltons,” now in its second year on television, is a hit. It is about a poor Virginia family facing the hardships of the Depression—just one of the many revivalist periods in American history.

The basic humanity of the Waltons is what appeals to viewers. Faced with hard times, this close-knit family nevertheless meets each day with the simple philosophy that the past is one of honesty, hard work and love. To many of them, in age of Watergate and Vietnam, this is a reminder of virtues which seem to be going away.

The 40-year-old films of Humphrey Bogart, seen on late night shows and at film festivals around the country are more in demand than most contemporary films starring Dustin Hoffman and Donald Sutherland.

Pics for display Poly nostalgia

It seems impossible that 100 could cover the costs of books, materials, and registration fees for a year at Cal Poly, you can see good positive at the El Corral bookstore new until a week from Friday.

The low cost of going to school in 1903 is only part of the aesthetic display entitled “A Brief Down Memory Lane,” which opened Tuesday. Cal Poly history is documented and pictured throughout the store, and many little-known facts about the school are being brought out for the first time.

For example, during the academic year of 1900-01, funds derived from horse racing in California paid for 94 percent of the school’s budget. The state government earmarked betting funds during that year for colleges and universities.

Another display features the permit which the college had to obtain in order to operate a still (for distilled water) during Prohibition. Alongside the permit are copies of the first school newspaper, The Polygram.

Girls were absent from the campus from 1887 to 1888, a sobering fact for the male students attending during that time. A sign in the bookstore emphasizes why. Football fans will be interested to note that John Madden, coach of the Oakland Raiders, is a Cal Poly graduate (Class of 66) according to a poster located at the end of the paper table.

Probably the most interesting item on display are the photographs depicting the school’s evolution from a one-building “Polytechnic School” to the sprawling State University of California.

Raffle donations for Rose float

The Rose Float Committee is now working for donations to finance the university’s entry in the Jan. 1 Rose Parade. The committee’s goal is $700.

Club members are selling 50-cent buttons on campus through Nov. 8. A raffle ticket will be given for each button purchased and will give the donor a chance to win various prizes. The drawing will be held Nov. 9 at the Randomama in Chumash Auditorium.

Grand prizes include a set of Mura quadraphonic headphones from Wynnhouse Sound and a Kodak X-20 Color outfit from Ida’s Camera Camsers. An AM-FM table radio from Ida’s Service and Appliances and a generator made from donated parts and hardware will also be given away.

Parking will again top SAC’s discussion topics

Two members of the administration are scheduled to speak at the Student Affairs Council tonight regarding the progress on one of the parking problems.

Chief Security Officer George Cantrell and James Lehry, Director of Business Affairs, will discuss the possible conversion of parking spaces by the music department to short term, metered parking.

At the last SAC meeting President John Holley proposed a frame of reference for the benefit of students taking care of their homes. There will be no school parking for students living in the University Union and surrounding areas.

The meeting will begin at 7:15 in Room 280 in the UU and will also include a preliminary report from the Tax Initiative Study Committee and a report by Mike Harrington of the Finance Committee.

Queen's contest 'sexist' claims offended lady

Editor:
I would like to say something for the growing number of individuals (myself included) who find beauty contests offensive. I'm referring to the homecoming queen contest being held this week for which we Cal Poly students are expected to cast our vote for what seems to be one club or another's idea of what constitutes a noteworthy young woman. I realize that each of the young ladies in this contest is considered pretty and they probably have also gone for them. But this is just what I find objectionable! Why should we give such distinction to something as selective and fickle as physical beauty? Let's find something more noteworthy than physical appearance to commend women for and stop this week "window-dressing."

Sincerely
Angie Williams

Westerners set Saturday bash

"Gary Hanley and the Cedar Town Junction" will be the featured band at this year's Homecoming Dance to be held in the campus Farm Shop Saturday, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Alpha Zeta, the sponsoring fraternity of the event, has announced that tickets are on sale at the U.U. Information Desk at $1.75 per person and 60 per couple.

Upset floaters drown

Editor:
As of Wed., Oct. 10th, the Homecoming Parade was canceled, due to lack of participation, by the Homecoming Committee. This decision seems to have been made without consulting the parties already involved and therefore seems to be a very one sided decision.

Upon hearing the decision, the Agricultural Engineering Society and the American Home Economics Association proceeded to take necessary steps to rebuild the parade with the already interested parties, but ran into tremendous opposition from the Homecoming and the Activities Office. They would not release the names of the other entries so they could be contacted.

The question of Why Homecoming on a three-day weekend is apparent at this point. The reasons given by the Homecoming Committee were as follows: Any earlier and it would have been too soon after school started and would not have allowed enough time. (Good point and thank you for some consideration) Also, there is too much incoming traffic into San Luis Obispo, for homecoming to be scheduled for the French game. (Bad point) It seems that a happy medium was chosen without much consideration: a three day weekend.

It becomes ever so evident that the decision to cancel this year's Homecoming Parade was a totally unsupported, individual decision.

Life planning group

The realization of who you really are and where you’re going will be investigated in the upcoming Life Planning Workshops.

The workshop, a concept introduced by Dr. Carol Geer, is designed to assist the individual in preparing for the future by assisting himself into the future. The individual is encouraged to reach the realization that he is the one responsible for his own life, and consequently is capable of creating the future he wishes for himself.

The workshops will hopefully achieve an understanding in those participating. The knowledge that others have learned is often a much needed link in understanding, according to Dr. Geer.

The Life Planning Workshop involves a number of structured activities which can be considered nostalgia...

movie on college campuses is "Cleopatra," made in 1963. The young generation of today often looks back on the world-war's Realty and horror cinema that caught the public eye a middle of a world wide.

The 1960s have also become a prime source of nostalgia in such movies as "The Sound of Music," "There's No Business Like Show Business," and "Mame," among others. Although its influence has been waning, the public is still a few years away from the 1960s which will produce similar feelings of nostalgia of the 1930s or 1890s, with sex symbols like Shirley Temple, Greer Garson, "Sadie Thompson," and Spree Agewall all rush back in a flood of emotions.

Think about tomorrow and get it together

What’s happening Brothers? How is school and life treating you? I’ve noticed a lot of com nonsense around this fall, and I’m overjoyed. It’s comforting to know that in the future a greater number of brothers and sisters will be in the positions and professions that help shape a large part of our lives.

There is a possibility that many of us will be called on to help with the economic and governmental problems of this country and the world. Perhaps these problems can’t be solved, and perhaps they can. But problems of this magnitude aren’t solved simply by going to a college education or a full life experience. But maybe with a combination of the two, going with a general problem-solving method, we can get something done. Check it out and let’s do it. And if it fails, won’t go down, we’ll just stay the same.

An obvious take-off point for any problem along these lines is in our school. Be less look at it. We have problems that are unique to Poly, but we may want to help shape a college. But if we are going to develop methods to deal with problems, we should remember that the type of problems

WASHINGTON UP—Outlining against commitment of U.S. forces, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Tuesday called for a six-power summit meeting to end the Middle East war.

Mansfield's Senate speech was the same as government officials reported that some of the U.S. military were stirred about the loss of arms to Israel on Sunday and Monday, the first two days of the American re-supply effort.

Officials said this amounted to roughly one-twelfth of the scope of a 10,000 Soviet arm supplies to Egypt and Syria. They said since last Wednesday more than 60 Russian flights had resupplied the Arabs with almost 3,000 tons of tanks, missiles and ammunition.

"One Vietnam is one Vietnam too many," said Mansfield in declaring that U.S. forces must not be committed to the conflict unless "our national interests and security are at stake."

A White House spokesman said President Nixon will meet Wednesday with foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Algeria and Morocco to discuss the Middle East crisis.

Assistant Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would sit on the meeting which was requested by the four Arab regions.

In calling for a summit meeting of the United States, the Soviet Union, United Kingdom, France, West Germany and Japan, Mansfield said that Washington and Moscow had been unable to prevent the war or end it once it started.

Mansfield backed the decision announced Monday to begin an airlift to Egypt to prevent the war from spreading by the Israelis to other Soviet shipments of arms to the Arab nations.

Mansfield said he was "one year late" in saying that a small contingent of Marines had been dispatched as helicopter pilots to join the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean.

A war powers resolution limiting to 90 days any Americans involved in any overseas hostilities without congressional approval has been introduced in Congress and is now on the desk of President Nixon, who has said he will veto it.

Artists add exposure

A funny thing happened on the way to the voting booth.

On the library lawn, in front of the library booth for the Homecoming Queen's pageant, a group of students was gathering and laughing about something.

Some of them were rolling on the grass, holding their sides, while others merely chuckled. Some of the students used sticks as a mock weapon against a piece of art.

It turned out to be art,...a semen. Upon investigation it was determined that the crowd was watching the solar eclipse.

MRL will be heeding local interest. This conference, scheduled to take place in San Luis Obispo during November, will follow the filing of the first group of petitions due Dec. 9, and more educated forecasters of the initiative's success or failure will be forthcoming then.

Spear's scoring boosts soccer to win

by FRED VULVIN

The Mustang soccer team evened its league record at 1-1 as Carmen Sacco's crew defeated Northrop Institute 5-4 last Saturday.

The Mustang boosters were led by the scoring of forward Bert Shear. Shear's first goal came just two minutes before the end of the first half. Shear went on scoring again in the second half as he scored four goals.

Northrop was the first to light the scoreboard Saturday when Wei Cheng scored in the 20th minute of the first half. Eight minutes later Mustang Grant Shimada took a pass from midfield Mark Morgan, and then slide his way up the left-wing to make a successful attempt at the net.

Shimada was under pressure from the Northrop halfbacks, but the Mustangs owned his speed to out-distance the opposition. With the score tied 1-1, the Mustang offense took control of the ball. Despite control, the Mustangs weren't able to score until the 43rd minute. Shear's goal gave the Mustangs a 2-1 halftime lead.

The men in green wasted no time in scoring in the second half. In the third minute right winger Juan Aneytuno passed to Shear, who in turn connected on another goal. Shear's second goal increased the Mustang lead to 5-1. Eight minutes later Shear took a pass from halfback Mike Price and booted his third goal of the day. Shear's goal gave Cal Poly a 5-1 lead.

In the 106th minute Northrop's Cheng scored again. The right-winger's goal made the score 5-2, with the Mustangs on top. Shear was not to be outdone as the sophomore from El Cajon scored again to lift the Mustang lead to 6-2.

The victory leaves the Mustangs with a 1-1 mark in the Southern California Intercollegiate Soccer Association. Shear's performance, to say the least, will be heard of as he rates as one of the top strikers in the Southern California Intercollegiate Soccer Association.

The Mustangs' last score of the day came as Grant Shimada took a left corner kick which was headed by Ceci Hadley to Shear. Shear took the ball and slammed it into the net for Poly's sixth goal.

Northrop scored twice again in the final 20 minutes of the ball, but it wasn't enough as the Mustangs won 6-4.

Coach Sacco was pleased by Shear's performance, to say nothing of the Mustang's control of the ball during the match. Sacco estimated that the Mustang boosters controlled the ball at least 80 percent of the match.

The victory leaves the Mustangs with a 1-1 mark in the Southern California Intercollegiate Soccer Association. The soccer team has a week off and will resume SCSA action on Oct. 22 when they will entertain Chapman College.
