

Literary magazine may face financial crisis

Dollar Sign raises its ugly head again

A sarcastic sense of humor was responsible for the campus literary magazine being named "Hindenburg."

"The original Hindenburg ended disastrously too," said Tommy DeMello, editor of the 1974 issue of the magazine.

Even though the "Hindenburg" has not disappeared, a rocky financial situation may yet lead in its demise. In the two months the current issue has been available only a fifth of the printed copies have sold.

The magazine was published two weeks before Poly Royal and sold for a dollar. David Kann, faculty advisor to the magazine, said he had considered lowering the price to increase sales but had decided that, "a dollar was not too much to support the arts here at Poly.

"Hindenburg" is facing a financial crisis because the cost of materials and printing has risen to $8,90. Only 800 copies were printed, and at a dollar, even if all the copies were sold, the magazine would have a $100 deficit. Now sales have increased the likelihood of a debt of several hundred dollars.

In the eight years there has been a literary magazine on campus only one issue has come close to breaking even. In 1971 "Alternatives" almost managed to balance its budget. But both Kann and DeMello blame the small number of sales on a lack of student knowledge about the magazine. DeMello explained, "It's one thing what a literary magazine is, much less "Hindenburg."

The Associated Students, Incorporated budgeted the money for the literary magazine through the Publishers' Board. All money gained from the sale is given back to the AS to help replace the money originally budgeted. A similar arrangement is expected for next year.

"I guess they'll just end up in the hands of Dr. Kann's plant with all the other old issues," said Kann.

Artwork on the ninth issue will not begin until Fall but Kann is available in his office. Tommys 1974 issue was not available to answer any questions from potential contributors or staff.

"Hindenburg" is still on sale at El Corral Bookstore and at times at a table in the University Union plaza.

"If the remaining copies don't sell, said DeMello, "I guess they'll just end up in the hands of Dr. Kann's plant with all the other old issues."

This year much of the material for the magazine has been drawn from entries originally submitted to the Creative Writing Contest.

Mike Benson, student candidate for County Clerk in the June 4 elections, is convinced that the County Clerk's Office can become more responsive to the needs of the people, by adopting a program that will look ahead to the county's needs years from now.

The County Clerk's major responsibilities are the Chief Elections Clerk and Chief Clerk in the County Board of Supervisors. Chief Elections Clerk supervises all county wide and special district elections and Chief Clerk in the Board of Supervisors supervises court scheduling, ensuring evidence for Superior Court trials, keeping county records and general record keeping. The other duties within the job are issuing marriage licenses, processing passport applications and filling sectional legal documents.

Benson, a Vietnam veteran, will graduate in June, from Cal Poly with a B.S. in Social Science. He lives near Norris Bay, on a 5-acre farm with his wife, a registered nurse, and his young daughter.

Benson, a student, would push for computerization of information from the Board of Supervisors and voter registration files, for efficient storage and accessibility.

He acquired a knowledge of all the more reason to update the information department.

Data processing has been instituted in the elections department, in the Navy, while working on an aircraft computer maintenance program for 4 years.

This background would be useful in developing a computerized voter registration list, which could prove helpful in providing a more random jury selection process. He would also promote more comprehensive use of microfilming of empty record and use computers to cross-index these materials for instantaneous retrieval. Benson says, "There is no reason to spend hours looking for a document."

Most of these jobs are performed by hand, and are time-consuming, so the updated system of instantaneous retrieval would not only save man hours and decrease costs of running the office.

"Responsibility to computation on the part of county agencies, he feels, keeps the county's computer from being used to fill its fullest capacity," said Benson.

An error appeared in the May 22 Mustang Daily, an article entitled "Nutrition program includes senior citizens" stated that people over 60 years old obtain meals at no cost in the senior citizens dining hall participating in the Summer Share Nutrition Program. There is a low cost fee for participation in the program, based on a sliding scale according to monthly income.

Mike Benson, who will graduate from Cal Poly this month, is running for the office of County Clerk. If elected, he plans to implement a computer system to make the office more responsive to the needs of the people.

"The money should be there," said DeMello, "But where exactly it came from I don't know yet.

The Publishers' Board is heaving that out now.

"The large number of entries to the Creative Writing Contest," said Kann, "seems to me an indication that students are interested in the area. I just feel that too many students don't follow through on what they start and try to have their work published.

"A college with an active cultural life—which by necessity must include poetry and short stories—should have an organ to disseminate it," Kann continued, "I'm afraid this is "Hindenburg."

Beginning last fall DeMello has worked almost exclusively to prepare the selections for publication.

Much depends on the choices of the editor. In 1974 there was no issue. "The editor just didn't get it together," said DeMello.

Next year two people will share the responsibility of editorship. Dee Fischer and Sue K. Linn are planning it as a senior project.

"I guess they'll just end up in the hands of Dr. Kann's plant with all the other old issues," said Kann.

Actual work on the ninth issue will not begin until Fall but Kann is available in his office. Tommys 1974 issue was not available to answer any questions from potential contributors or staff.

EDITORIAL

Benson wins endorsement

Not all student candidates for local office are capable of representing students or anyone else.

Once in a while though, a genuinely qualified person from this university takes the time and makes the commitment to run for an office in the community. One such person is Mike Benson.

Benson has taken part in a second race for the position of County Clerk, a race that’s seen more attention focused on that than ever before.

A little more than a year ago County Clerk Ruth Wamkan died in office. Her attitudes while serving had been none too progressive to say the least. Even when three-year-old voters were nationally enfranchised she balked at allowing them to register here. It took a clerk's injunction issued to Warnk as before she would allow three-year-old voting registrars.

Her passing left the Clerk's office in a state of confusion that has yet to dig its way out. Acting County Clerk Michelle Williams has been working with the handicap of being understaffed, but the problems at the Clerk’s office are much deeper now.

Archaic methods of record keeping and registration have stagnated in bureauocracy and inability. New blood is in order - Mike Benson's.

Letter backs Camacho in June election

Editor: Eligible Cal Poly students will have an opportunity to vote for an outstanding candidate in this Tuesday’s primary election. Among many candidates on an unusually long and complicated ballot, one in particular deserves special consideration. I refer to Julian Camacho.

He will be competing with two other candidates for the chance to oppose Burt Taltott, incumbent Republican congressman in November's general election. Mr. Camacho's Democratic competitors are Phil Harry and Morgan Flag.

For a number of reasons Julian Camacho deserves our support. When he ran against Mr. Taltott two years ago, he gained 41 percent of the vote and came closer to besting Taltott than any previous Democratic challenger. That was the year of the Nixon landslide. This time, with better and stronger organization than before, Camacho stands an excellent chance to win in the Pall election. For this reason alone Mr. Camacho deserves a second try.

Just as important, I think, are the qualities Julian Camacho possesses. He literally exudes integrity, intelligence, and charm. Georgia Brand, editor of the Salinas Valley Tribune, gives Camacho unqualified support in her May 18th editorial. She said, "Camacho is a man of and for the people. He combines compassion for the commoner with a touch of dignity." Camacho is clearly the stronger candidate.

Unfortunately, Mr. Harry's supporters have been too quick to assume that Camacho lacks the strength and savvy to best Taltott. In fact, here is an analogy which I do not care to sound. Before it is safe, the season is utterly undefined. After months of painstakingly hard work, Harry is ensconced with Mr. Barnet. Julian Camacho is the strongest candidate, he has a clear understanding of local and national issues, and he will serve all the people of his district with honor. I hope that all eligible Cal Poly voters will give him their support.

PRIMARY ELECTION, JUNE 4, 1974

Students urged to vote for Harry

Well, it's almost election time again. For the last couple of weeks we've been subjected to the usual rhetoric from various candidates who are running for elected office. If you're like the same old buttoned-up, no-nonsense type, you might find this tiresome. However, if you believe in democracy, it's important to vote. For the last couple of years, every election has been critical.

While it may be difficult to choose between candidates, it's essential to do so. This isn't like the old broken record, where all the candidates have the same positions. While it's true that many candidates have similar platforms, there are still important differences.

The voters in this district usually have a very good idea of the incumbent Congressman Burt Talcott, Mr. Talcott has run for the last six years. The voters in this district want to support him again. For the last couple of years, Mr. Talcott has run for re-election.

Computer will make office efficient...

this county it costs anywhere from $1.00 to $2.00, this is one of the highest rates in the state according to Benson, making it of the main reason to update the current department.

This project has been initiated in the elections department in Ventura County, at a cost of about $7.00 per ballot set, with good results, Benson said.

Since the County Clerk's Office does not facilitate ease accessibility to public documents, Benson said, "The county residents are not getting a fair shake." In addition, Benson notes that many workers on the outer edges of the county work from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., the same hours as the clerk's office, and can't possibly get to the office, or hear the tapes of the Board of Supervisors, which are only available on Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

In addition, Benson would introduce a Board of Supervisors meetings report to be published for sale and placed in city libraries around the county. In fact, the County Courthouse is the only place where tapes are available.

Another innovation of Benson's would be to increase the number of deputy registrars in the county, with hours that are adjusted to a working person's schedule. To facilitate voter registration, Benson, if elected, would propose the institution of mobile voter registration vans, purchased with revenue sharing funds.

In addition, Benson said in the widened schedule, San Francisco has had great success with its van registration program, because it's widely advertised result.

The other three opponents in the running are: Michael Yamauchi, acting county clerk, and 14 year county samples, James Barlow, an economist and county office of education administration for 5 years, and Ron Anderson, a retired Air Force pil, presently the sheriff's department business manager.

$1.00 per quarter unit for lecture courses, $1.10 per unit for activity courses, and $5.00 to $11.00 for lab courses.

The two 1981 summer sessions will run from June 21 through July 28, and from July 29 through August 15. Over 60 courses have been scheduled during the two sessions.

Courses will be offered in agriculture, education, engineering, English, geography, history, physical education, and more.

Tuition for summer sessions courses is $5 per quarter unit. Summer sessions students must also pay University Union and student body fees.

Several workshops for professionals or residential credit are being offered during the summer months in areas of work experience, education management, of student health services and physical education.

The workshops are designed for educational administrators or teachers.

Concurrent enrollment will make available to the public many regularly-scheduled summer quarter classes. Participants in the concurrent enrollment program pay Cal Poly Extension fees to attend regular classes meetings on campus.

ROTC ceremony to honor cadets

Twenty ROTC cadets will receive honors at Camp San Luis Obispo Saturday, June 6, when the Cal Poly Military Science Department holds its annual Cadet Awards Ceremony.

The ceremony will culminate the Leaders’ Workshop for the academic year. It is slated to begin at 13 p.m.

The cadets, representing classes from freshmen through senior, will receive awards on the basis of their academic merit, sometimes in the workshop and achievement in both areas.

University Pres. Robert E. Knowles will award the President’s Cup to the senior who has achieved the highest overall excellence.

AGRICULTURE TOURS TEACH CITY CHILDREN

Little kids from big cities are charmed at the touch of a lamb fleece, amused by a pig’s curly tail and amazed at the size of a bull... Maybe that’s why the agriculture tour program established ten years ago by the Agriculture and Natural Resources Student Council is such a success.

“The kids from the cities especially love to meet the animals,” said Delilah Butt. “Some of them have never even seen a cow!”

More than 2,000 youngsters from the San Luis Obispo County have visited the VAFB Agriculture Laboratory on 44 tours conducted this year, agriculture student volunteers.

“The tours are open to any group that desires to see the farm,” said Delilah. “We try to show them the specific items they’d like to see, but most of the tours generally take in the dairy, poultry, swine, sheep and beef units.”

Delilah said that the tours are waiting and a unique in its own way.

“The youngsters just like to look at the animals and feed them, so the golden just offer them around the different areas and give them time to explore. With the older, the guide has a chance to explain some of the different areas in animal raising. The younger kids are just fun, but with the older, there’s really a sense of contentment.”

Chris Slater, a sophomore food industry major, spent an hour in the animal units with a kindergartner last month.

“They thought it was pretty neat,” he said. “They go down with their little pigs. They were really excited about them.”

Slater, like Delilah, says that the tour program is a worthwhile one.

“I think I’d like to do it again,” he said.

New courses at air base

Two engineering courses for residence credit at Vandenberg Air Force Base are being offered in Cal Poly Summer Session, beginning June 30.

The courses are Principles of Engineering Economics, which will deal with the methods used to assess the time value of money and Applied Operations Research, a study of techniques used in decision making.

Both three-unit courses are open to those meeting the prerequisite requirements or having the instructor’s consent.

The fees are $60 per unit, plus other incidental costs.

Dr. E. W. C. Wilkins, a member of Cal Poly’s Industrial Engineering faculty, will teach both classes, which will meet Monday and Thursday in Room A of Building 11-B. The engineering economics class will meet at 9 a.m. to 10:20 a.m., and the operations research class from 10:20 a.m. to noon.
