SAC discusses accounts tonight

by JOE RANCHES

A proposal to allow clubs to open off-campus checking accounts and the results of the All Brians election today are scheduled to be discussed in the next meeting of the student Senate Council.

SAC will meet at 7:30 p.m. in Room 180 of the University Union. The off-campus checking accounts for clubs, a proposal made by the Farm Management Club, was discussed last Wednesday night by SAC and postponed for one week in order to refer the matter to Richard Carol, AII attorney.

The Farm Management Club proposal, if approved by SAC and President Robert E. Kennedy, would allow clubs to open checking accounts at any AII checking account.*

SAC will present coast scenes

Sierra Club will present coast scenes

The meeting will be held in the half-hour hall of the Methodist Church, 1130 Prentice St. at 7:30 p.m.

Several persons were on hand for "A Festival of Gifts" sponsored by MECHA Monday, in Chumash Auditorium.

The program included the Bel Canto Singers, Ballet Folklorico de San Luis Obispo performed traditional Mexican dances, Los ConVoncidos and Los Vaqueros, and a mixed chorus of ten vocalists, the Stagers sang two songs from "Carousel," "Clara" and "Ill Cotes" and "La Bamba." Los ConVoncidos, a vocal ensemble directed by Rosi Fernandez and made up of students and faculty here, sang four songs in Spanish with guitar accompaniment. They performed "Las Manzanitas," "De Colores," "Championes" and "Tres Marias."

Detroit (UPI) - General Motors and Ford, who turned out the vast majority of the car equipped with air bags a few years ago, announced that GM this year will offer the optional safety device as a fairly desirable feature on some models. Details of the introduction have not been released, but it is certain that GM has decided to offer the option. Ford announced that it will offer the air bag as an optional feature on some of its models.

The air bag is designed to work in conjunction with the seat belt, and is intended to provide an extra layer of protection in case of a collision. It is activated by an impact sensor and inflates within milliseconds to cushion the occupant's chest and upper legs, providing additional protection against injury.

In recent years, there has been a significant increase in the use of air bags in both passenger and commercial vehicles. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has set standards for air bags, and manufacturers are required to comply with these regulations in order to ensure the safety of their vehicles.

The availability of air bags in new vehicles has led to increased public awareness and support for their use. People have come to understand the benefits that air bags offer in terms of reducing injury severity in the event of a collision.

However, despite the widespread use of air bags in vehicles, there are still some concerns and limitations that need to be addressed. For example, air bags can only be activated once per deployment, and they may not provide sufficient protection in certain types of crashes. Additionally, air bags can cause injuries if not properly restrained or if deployed inappropriately.

Safety experts continue to call for further research and development of air bag technology to address these issues and improve its effectiveness in protecting occupants in a variety of crash scenarios. The industry and regulatory bodies are working together to advance air bag technology and ensure that it remains a critical component of overall vehicle safety systems.

Panel cites erasures of Rose Mary's tapes

WASHINGTON D.C. — A panel of experts has issued a final report on the events surrounding the death of Rose Mary Woods, the nurse and secretary who was was found dead in her apartment in Washington, D.C. The report, which was released on Tuesday, concluded that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was due to a malfunction of the machine and not the result of any deliberate act.

The panel, which included experts in forensic science and digital recording, reviewed the evidence and interviewed witnesses. They determined that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was caused by a malfunction of the machine and not the result of any deliberate act. The panel also found that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was not the result of any deliberate act.

The panel's findings were based on a review of the evidence and interviews with witnesses. They concluded that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was due to a malfunction of the machine and not the result of any deliberate act. The panel also found that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was not the result of any deliberate act.

The panel's report was strongly supported by experts in forensic science and digital recording. They found that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was caused by a malfunction of the machine and not the result of any deliberate act. The panel also found that the erasure of Rose Mary Woods' tapes was not the result of any deliberate act.

Clothing needed

Due to a lack of support, a clothing drive sponsored by the Student Community Services will continue through this week. Students and staff members are urged to donate clothing that has been worn for the past six months. Collected food will also be collected.

The four collection points are in the library, the administration parking lot, the University Union plaza and the Sierra Madre lobby. Collected clothing and food will be distributed among needy families in the county.

Students interested in sorting, packing and flashing donated food can call the Student Services.

Bill Wyman "Monkey Grip"

If a friend invited you over and put this album on without warning, you'd probably guess it was just another English bloke out for a musical good time, rather than a Rolling Stone coming out of the speakers. Wyman apparently didn't set out to blaze new trails in his first solo album. Comparisons to the Who's "Who Are You" are not entirely unjustified, as both bands display a somewhat morbid sense of humor in their work. In fact, the Who's "Who Are You" would make a perfect companion piece to "Monkey Grip" on your turntable. Just don't expect "My Generation" or "Dancing With Mr. D." Sandy Denny says "Like an Old-fashioned Waltz." Both parties stand to benefit from the Fairport Convention-Sandy Denny reunion, as this album so clearly demonstrates. Of her five albums away from the group, this one is the closest to the Barbra Streisand that exists somewhere within Ms. Denny.

While most of the lyrics are up to her usual standard of restrained excellence, the arrangements here are so bogged down in strings and other orchestration that they render such fine songs as "Solo" a thick, muck-best suited for background music. She still has the voice and the pen. Hopefully Fairport can bring her back to her musical senses.

Bowie "Diamond Dogs" (Reprise)—Like Aladdin Sane and "Pin It Up!" this is a subtle, rather than a stunning Bowie at work. Aside from "Rebel Rebel," nothing leaps out and captures you the first few times through.

Separate but equal: merely segregation!

by PETE KING

Laurie Morgan is a lucky woman. She has been given the opportunity to compete on the Cal Poly men’s varsity team this year. She did quite well.

In fact, she was the best distance swimmer on the Cal Poly squad. But it is not equal talent that makes her so lucky. She must thank her stars; however, for just having the right to compete in the NCAA championships was indeed equal but not separate from the men.

Equal but separate. This new term of sport is being rallied against by several of the more influential voices in sports, and in American culture, too, for that matter.

Pullman police, when the columnist Jim Murray suggested too many women athletes on a team, said, "Equal but separate, and we think that's OK."

Jim Murray, award winning sports columnist for the Los Angeles Times went even further. He took a strong stand against allowing little girls to play with little boys in little league baseball. He reasons:

"It's humiliating for little boys to play with girls and not have the same fun as the other kids."

But if such a determined outlook does indeed exist, it should be cured and not fostered until the little boys begin to believe that it is also humiliating to be beaten by a woman in school work or on the job.

This is where the separate but equal outlook toward sports breaks down. It is fallacious in the first place.

God made man and he made woman. He didn't make man with a baseball mitt in his hand, nor was he wearing an apron.

Men were built alike. Women were made different.

Passions that are distorted, wrong and in desperate need of being laid down.

If a girl can beat the pants off a man on an organized baseball team, is she to be judged a person and not by their usual role, which she should not make anybody think she has? It is compulsory for a football and a baseball to be played by a person of the opposite sex.

Separate but equal is an act of segregation, not just a separate but equal subsection for other reasons.

Using sports as a means of proving masculinity is doing a gross disservice to the abilities of males and females. Those who try to prove their manhood through sports and a football are kidding children. And if they believe that women are better than them, their manhood and not any athletic prowess has been put to question.

Cal Poly takes a progressive and right approach by having Mur Mugran join the varsity team. She would be welcomed on the "men’s" team as well.

If the state school should do the same if a girl is good enough to enter into football coach Joe Memhard’s office and tell him she wants to play football.

If she has a smartar, up or savable block as well as the stamina to maneuver the line to her. Of course, no one should be allowed to apologize if they have had a head start.
Netmen set to compete in nationals

For most Cal Poly students, next week will be make-or-break time in the classroom. Theaffle holds true for the Mustang tennis squad. Instead of eliminating chances on multiple tennis exams, however, the tennis players will be out to eliminate opponents in the NCAA Division I national championships at the UC Irvine campus.

"It's for all the marbles," says coach Bob Jorgensen. "If we could win the nationals it would be the crowning glory for Cal Poly tennis."

Jorgensen will be sending either four or five racket swingers to the tourney in the bid to garner that crown of glory. Dan and Pete Lambert, Jim Martin and Ron Denesi will go to the tournament for sure. Tom Zurn might play in the big mess if he can whip Denesi in a challenge match on Thursday. If he does he'll be the No. 4 singles man while Denesi will keep his spot on the No. 3 doubles tandem with Martin.

The brothers Lambert will be the No. 1 double team besides a match entering the singles competition. Jorgensen sees this year's team as having perhaps the best chance ever of winning the title. Two out of the last four years, his charges have finished second to UC Irvine in the national championship race.

But with Dan Lambert and co., Jorgensen feels he has the manpower to hand the top-seeded Aggies a sharp defeat in the wood.

Dan Lambert beat Irvine's top two players at the UCLA tournament earlier this season. But Lambert alone cannot solve the national championship puzzle.

"To win," Jorgensen says, "all the players have got to score their share of points with one guy going all the way.

Dan Lambert has an excellent chance of being that guy. According to Jorgensen, No. 1 seed Bob Chappell has signed a pro contract with World Team Tennis and is ineligible for the tournament. That makes Lambert the top seed, says the coach.

Preparing for the most has presented some problems for the Cal Poly tennis team. The players had to take their finals this week and there has been a long layoff since Cal Poly wrapped up the CCAA championship a few weeks ago. This two week layoff," Jorgensen notes, "has given us a rest but, at the same time, we missed the practice and have had no time to sharpen up."

Singles player Tom McKelvey has opted to stay here and take his finals at the regularly allotted championship time in this week. Jorgensen agrees that studies come first but says that he would feel better if he had his No. 3 singles man with him when the Mustangs bid for the crown.

He thinks it'll take every gun he's got to whip Irvine. The southern school will have the national crown for the last four years, according to Jorgensen. The coach feels they're just as strong this year. In addition, they'll have a home court advantage.

Over 50 schools will be entered in the tournament.

Cal Poly will practice with Northwest Missouri on Thursday before heading down to the tournament.

Volleyballers to hold confab

A meeting will be held tomorrow for all interested in competing on Cal Poly's intramural volleyball team. The meeting will last from 11:30 a.m. to noon and the team members will be discussed. Coach of the team is Ron Preston.
