Camacho predicts
'The going win'

by LIE CURRICK

A confident "I know I'm going to win the election," was stated by Democratic Congressional candidate Julian Camacho in an interview Tuesday. Camacho feels that voters in the election have a choice between a "reform oriented Democrat and a Republican incumbent (Burt Talcott) who believes in maintaining the current status quo.

Camacho was born in Lompoc and grew up in this area. He feels this is an example of change that has occurred, and he believes that although some change is welcome, the fragile environment of this area must be protected.

"I am not a no—growth man. We need planned growth," he said. He feels that the people in San Luis Obispo should decide what should be done in regards to housing and growth in the town. "We won't say 'Here's what San Luis Obispo needs.' The people can decide what they want for themselves," he said. He does feel that Poly students must work with the townspeople to come up with better student housing.

Camacho is opposed to Standard Oil's oil提议 to build a super-tanker port in Estero Bay. "It's wrong to gouge working American under the pressure of an energy crisis," he said.

In response to a charge by Talcott that he had received major contributions from outside the district, Camacho replies that his funds were collected within the district by union members. Camacho who has been endorsed by the League of Conservation Voters, the Environmental Action group and other groups, said that environmental groups place Talcott on a "Dirty Dozen" list because of his poor voting record on environmental issues. He also said that the Environmental Action is a group of American citizens dedicated to protecting the environment. Camacho and the Environmental Action group have endorsed Talcott, but if they would endorse anyone, they would endorse the American people, he said.

Student Super tanker port studied by interested speech class

Editor:
The proposed "super tanker port," which Standard Oil Company of California would like to construct at Estero Bay has become a topic of discussion in Mr. Robert Andreini's Speech 217 class.

This past week the Mustang Daily has presented three articles which pointed out all of the facts dealing with the port. In these articles the facts were presented, and presented well; however, the facts were about all that was presented. Students are still unaware of what might be done to voice their opinions or take some action which will affect the final decision for construction of the port. If students or community members act now their opinions will count.

This discussion class, Sp. 217, encourages students to research and discuss problems that they feel need action. A group from the class decided to research the proposed super tanker port and now feel that there is a need to go further than just presenting the topic in class.

Public meetings are now being held concerning the port and before long, January, public hearings are going to start. We would like to encourage students to take an active part in the activities concerning their community and surrounding communities.

After doing extensive study, which included visiting the sight of the proposed port and talking with both Standard Oil Company of Calif. and Eugene Sheldon, the leader of "Don't Ruin Our Coast" (DROC) in Morro Bay, we feel that there is a need to go further than just presenting the topic in class.

The class decided to resean the proposed super tanker port. Interested students can do any of the following:
1. Write letters to editors of Local Newspapers:

Editor:

On Veterans Day I heard it reported that our President would make it his personal goal to see that those millions of men and women who served in the Vietnam conflict would not be forgotten.

In the same report I heard the news commentator say that he (Ford) did not make any indication as to whether he would sign the bill for veterans which now gathers dust on his desk. That bill, among other things, would increase VA benefits by approximately 20 per cent.

And I know of no reason to believe that our "open and candid" President is a hypocrite. But the rest of us can see the tactic our great leader could be employing.

While extolling the virtues of veterans at the tomb of the unknown soldier complete with tears in his glassy eyes, he ignores the veterans bill languishing on his desk.

I pray that such a scenario is only fiction. But if true, I will do everything in my power to see that the man never sees the daylight of public office again. If this tale does come true, I urge everyone to do the same. Such hypocritical actions, if they happen, need not be encouraged.

Blood bank brings praise

Editor:

Like many others, I never fully realized the importance of the blood drawings which Block P sponsors each year until I needed help. My husband recently had open heart surgery and received aid through the Blood Bank. This was made possible by Dr. Billie Mounts of the Cal Poly Health Center.

We wish we could personally thank each and every one at Cal Poly who have been concerned enough to partake in the drawings. Without the operation, my husband could have lived but a year or so, and now he has a possible twenty years to live.

Respectfully,

Patrol tactics draw criticism

Dear Editor:

When I registered at this institution, I was informed that parking fees for all motor vehicles were required each quarter. Along with hundreds of other students I paid my parking fees and received my parking sticker, plus rules governing the parking of all motor vehicles.

Since then this paper has reported about a parking ticket issued to a student for so-called illegally parked vehicles.

Since the reporting of the motorcycle incident I have observed numerous vehicles parked in various lots, minus stickers, and at least one vehicle parked and never moved which has no sticker except for a loaner pass which expired last July. I do pose a simple question. If the Security Patrol has the authority to issue parking tickets, why are they not enforcing the laws governing the parking of all motor vehicles?

Halloween costume

Being invited to a Halloween party is great, and when it's a costume party that's even better. Coming up with a costume though is definitely a drag.

Having had the privilege of being invited to three costume parties this year, I thought I might have a great time just trying to figure out what personality to take on for a night. This being the first year I've ever been invited to any Halloween party, I was anxious to put all those costume ideas I had collected over the years to the test.

For some reason I have always had the desire to dress up as a floppy-eared, big-footed, and bushy-tailed rabbit. I don't know whether it was seeing Dick Van Dyke attending a Halloween party as a rabbit in one of the more humorous episodes of his weekly TV series, or my fascination with Harvey, the six-foot invisible rabbit.

Harvey was, to my high school classmates, not only the rabbit of a character's imagination in the play Harvey, but also our English teacher. This instructor of ours also took on other pseudonyms ranging from extra-lead in certainly unprintable descriptive titles.

Harvey was not only an English teacher but he also doubled as the dean of discipline at the Catholic high school I was committed to, hence his poor popularity.

Whatever the reason for my wanting to wear a rabbit suit, it is no avail. There is no place in San Luis Obispo to come by a rabbit costume short of sewing one together on my own.

And luck has it that I left my needle and thread in L.A. so much for being a rabbit and for that matter a tube, or even Napoleon, Tiggers, bumblebees, and exalting all run into nothing problems as well.

The Hanby Panby Fun Shop in Lompoc is the nearest rental shop and I'd appear as a college student before I'd drive to Lompoc.

My trips to Goodwill Industries retail store, TGAY, and Grant's City proved fruitless.

The people at Goodwill said that things start picking up this time of year enabling the store to clear out some of its more bizarre clothing items. The gentleman behind the counter suggested that I start with the hat bin and use my imagination. Either my imagination is lacking or the selection at Goodwill is.

TGAY has some cheaply produced monster masks that can be matched with monster feet. The only problems here are (continued on page 8)

Grant’s suffers not only from lack of selection and high prices, but who wants to be seen in Grant—even on Halloween? Pettry’s has a wide assortment of white sheets for anyone creative enough to cut two holes in it. I never could understand what people see in ghosts though.

The Wolfman, Frankenstein, Edgar and the rest of the gang require less makeup, and prices just don’t cut it. Elves, the superheroes, and Robin Hood and his merry­ men, all require the unlikelihood wearing of nights. I’m sure we’ll see a few of these prancing around tonight.

So far all I’ve mentioned are the traditional Halloween per­ nominalities. In view of the recent political happenings in the country, some new faces may be seen this Halloween.

This is not to suggest that I would be caught poing as H.R.

Halderman or John Mitchell. I’d expect that one of those fellows might confront you tonight with the line, “Dirty tricks or campaign trains.”

If I have to, I guess I’ll resort to the old standard, that is, going as a drunk by wearing a lampshade and passing out in the corner—which is probably what I’d end up doing anyway.

Citizens in several cities in San

Citizens in several cities in San

Those who favor Proposition 13

Disney pop by RICK GOUART

"Fantasia is timeless. It may run ten, twenty, even thirty years."—Walt Disney

With that simple statement, Walt Disney inwardly commemorated for his 1940 box-office triumph, "Fantasia," a film that everyone said came before its time. And yet, it was Disney's uncanny intuition showing itself once again for that statement was right on the money.

Today, "Fantasia" (Fremont Theater) is at the height of its resurgence continually playing audiences across the country ever since the Disney people re-released the film for the sixth time back in 1986.

That popularity rests heavily with today's college crowd for the film's surrealistic fantasy seems to be conducive to getting high. But whether you see the film high or low or in-between, "Fantasia"'s nostalgic camp will still numb your senses with awe and inspiration.

Don't you dare let the film leave town without seeing it!

Perfectly timed for a 1960s-67 film, "Fantasia" was considered Disney's greatest achievement until he topped himself with "Mary Poppins" in 1964. At least the film is remembered as his most innovative and imaginative work.

KCPR airs Stewart special

Now at 900 watts of effective power, campus radio station KCPR 90.5 FM explores "The Life and Times of Rod Stewart and the Faces" in a special three-hour production Sunday night. Beginning at 9 p.m., the show re-creates Paul McCartney, Larry LeLoff and Al Lindsay, the trio responsible for the stations much heralded special on "The Life and Times of Led Zeppelin" last June.

According to LaFollette, "Stewart special is essentially a sequel to the Zeppelin production. Stewart's run with Long John Baldry, Jeff Beck, the group "Faces" and his solo attempts will be documented with personal impressions offered by Mono and LaFollette. The show will be done live with dialogue and music mixed by engineer Lindsay.

The show preempts for one night only, half of KCPR's most popular program "Sunday By Request," a marathon six hours of nothing but requests from the station's listeners. "Sunday By Request" will follow the special, at 9 p.m., in its abbreviated form.

With this time slot, LaFollette is expecting a favorable response from KCPR's regular listeners and is already considering further sequels on the Doors and The Who.

Offensive change evens odds

Return to 'T' helps improve Poly fortunes

by PETE KING

On paper, it looks like a good bet to place your dollars in the gambling state of Nevada. After all, the University of Nevada Reno Wolf Pack is 3-3 as they enter Saturday night. The Mustangs are only 2-5-1. But in this numbers game, the Mustangs literally ran out of quarterback Rich Roberts after last week's Nevada boys bad better bet low and fold early.

Of course, the Wolf Pack has a few rows up its sleeve too. Reno is an experienced team. Fifteen of the 11 starters are seniors, quite in contrast with Cal Poly, which starts only four seniors.

The Wolf Pack offense is led by quarterback Jeff Tischel, who is hitched for 844 yards and three touchdowns passing.

But the main asset that Reno has going for itself is the tough competition it has been exposed to. The Wolf Pack has played Colorado State, Boise State and Weber State.

"The Wolf Pack," said Harper, "has an excellent free safety in Greg Greenwold, who has intercepted eight passes this season. Their kicking game is excellent in terms of punting and field goals.

But Reno has also shown some weaknesses, the main one a vulnerability to one-armed handling.

Harper said: "Nevada has shown only one glaring weakness and that was against dropback passers from Boise State (36-16) and Colorado State (41-13)."

Cal Poly might have trouble taking advantage of this weakness, not being a dropback passer kind of team.

But the way the Mustangs ran last week, it might not matter if the Wolf Pack had any defensive back at all. Cal Poly would still run, and probably do quite well, thank you.

Led by Davis and the sprint out of quarterback Rich Roberts, the Mustangs literally ran Northridge into the dirt. (Roberts did not start for the first time against Northridge and despite his performances in that game will not start this week. Cliff Johansen has gotten the starting nod.)

The Mustang defense will see only one change in its line-up Junior Mark Davis will return to the free safety spot he relinquished to freshman Mike Pelig last week while he needed a shoulder separation.

Statistically it has all the earmarks of an even game. Cal Poly is averaging 19 points a game, while giving up 16.7. Reno has scored 22.5 points and allowed 20.3. The Mustangs have gained 213.5 yards a game rushing, while Reno's picked up 233.5. Cal Poly has scored one more touchdown than the Wolf Pack, while generating 204.5 yards a game in total offense to Reno's 297.

An interesting matchup is the game Saturday night will be the battle of the tosses. Cal Poly's Bob Gordon is averaging 41 yards a punt, just a smidgen behind Reno's Charlie Lee, who has been booting for a 41.4 average.

Add both Law and Cal Poly's John Loane set their school's record for the longest field goal last year against Boise State. Loane booted a 53-yarder while the Mustangs kicked the 39 by 39 yards out.

Kick-off is at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night.
