California Polytechnic State University

Mustang Daily

Processing curds and whey not restricted to fairy tales

by LIE CURRIE

"Little Miss Muffett sat on her chair eating her curds and whey. When along came a spider, who sat down beside her and frightened Little Miss Muffett away."

How many children have been familiar with that famous nursery rhyme? And how many children don't even know what curds and whey are?

Tuesday night, Dr. George York, professor of foods and nutrition at the University of California at Davis, spoke and demonstrated here on how to make cheese. Curds and whey, the by-products of the cheesemaking process were shown.

York, who said at the beginning of the demonstration that he was showing the ideas and principles of cheesemaking, cautioned his audience to have patience with the process. "It helps to talk to the audience," he said, "about the process."

The basic method in making cheese, he said, is to grow a bacteria or enzyme culture and put it into the milk. After a period of time, the mixture is strained through cheesecloth, and the solid part (curds) that remains is used for the cheese. The remaining liquid (whey) can also be used to make a different kind of cheese.

"The entire process can take from three days to a year, depending on what cheese you are trying to make," York said. He added that to substitute European cheeses in the United States, he used a bacteria from Europe that he said was available in the United States.

York also showed how to make cheese with one gallon of milk to make one pound of cheese, and recommended that future cheesemakers start with at least two gallons of milk, but don't go beyond eight.

"Otherwise, you need friends to help you," he joked.

When someone in the audience asked how cheese got its color, York said that food coloring was added. "You can make blue, red, or green cheese if you want," he said, "but most people make a yellow-orange cheese."
Brief Diablo Canyon tour lacks specific information

Editor:
As a fellow student, as well as an employee of PG&E, I was sad to read of your disappointing experience with the PG&E Diablo Canyon Visitor Information Center. As an employee, I too, have heard the tour presentation and have had an occasion to visit the nuclear site.

I agree with your attack and discouragement of the tour. Many of your feelings are very, very valid. I, too, am sorry that the visit point cannot be closer to the site.

But you might also take into consideration the possible safety problems that could result to both viewers and construction workers. The location does eliminate any chance of potential hazard for the viewer and distraction for the workers. On the other hand, won't you agree that the visit point does give an excellent view of the overall plant facilities?

Again, I have to agree that the presentation is a very broad, brief excursion. But I feel this is because there is so much to cover in so little time. The purpose and the basic of the information center has been designed primarily to expose the public to our future sources of electrical power.

For a more in-depth study on nuclear energy, may I suggest an inquiry into the course of study through our college. Many departments (science, engineering, architecture) do regard the course as relevant to their classes and thus require the student to make a tour.

Nancy L. Cleaver

Titles for women get student ‘steamed up’

Editor:
I have been sitting back and reading all your articles on the so-called ‘women’ confusion for so long. I want to say something on my behalf, and not necessarily that of all the guys on campus.

I see nothing wrong with women getting equal pay, job roles on the local, state, and national level. Even a woman as President would be okay with me as long as she knew what she was doing. What gets me all steamed up are the ‘married’, ‘single’ or ‘take-your-pick’ titles they give themselves. In the marriage, woman who calls herself ‘Ms.’ embarrassed to let people know she is married to ‘the one she loves’? Does the single woman not want the men to know she is not married, or lead them to believe she is?

Why must the Woman’s P.E. Department put the title of Ms. in front of all the names of the woman instructors? (except for two Dra. which it must be proud of). If all the women want to be labeled as a Ms., they should take off their wedding rings as not to give any hints of their identity.

Don’t get me wrong. I’m not putting down women P.E. majors, in fact my flame is one. I am glad that she is proud to let everyone know she is engaged by wearing my ring, and soon put a ‘Mrs.’ in front of her name. When a woman calls herself ‘Ms.’, I am embarrassed to let people know she is married to ‘the one she loves’? Doesn’t the single woman not want the men to know she is not married, or lead them to believe she is?

Why must the Woman’s P.E. Department put the title of Ms. in front of all the names of the woman instructors? (except for two Dra. which it must be proud of). If all the women want to be labeled as a Ms., they should take off their wedding rings as not to give any hints of their identity.

Des Filipi

Letters

Don’t get me wrong, I’m not putting down women P.E. majors, in fact my flame is one. I am glad that she is proud to let everyone know she is engaged by wearing my ring, and soon put a ‘Mrs.’ in front of her name. When a woman calls herself ‘Ms.’, I am embarrassed to let people know she is married to ‘the one she loves’? Doesn’t the single woman not want the men to know she is not married, or lead them to believe she is?

Why must the Woman’s P.E. Department put the title of Ms. in front of all the names of the woman instructors? (except for two Dra. which it must be proud of). If all the women want to be labeled as a Ms., they should take off their wedding rings as not to give any hints of their identity.

Des Filipi

Letters

Don’t get me wrong, I’m not putting down women P.E. majors, in fact my flame is one. I am glad that she is proud to let everyone know she is engaged by wearing my ring, and soon put a ‘Mrs.’ in front of her name. When a woman calls herself ‘Ms.’, I am embarrassed to let people know she is married to ‘the one she loves’? Doesn’t the single woman not want the men to know she is not married, or lead them to believe she is?

Why must the Woman’s P.E. Department put the title of Ms. in front of all the names of the woman instructors? (except for two Dra. which it must be proud of). If all the women want to be labeled as a Ms., they should take off their wedding rings as not to give any hints of their identity.

Des Filipi

Letters

Don’t get me wrong, I’m not putting down women P.E. majors, in fact my flame is one. I am glad that she is proud to let everyone know she is engaged by wearing my ring, and soon put a ‘Mrs.’ in front of her name. When a woman calls herself ‘Ms.’, I am embarrassed to let people know she is married to ‘the one she loves’? Doesn’t the single woman not want the men to know she is not married, or lead them to believe she is?

Why must the Woman’s P.E. Department put the title of Ms. in front of all the names of the woman instructors? (except for two Dra. which it must be proud of). If all the women want to be labeled as a Ms., they should take off their wedding rings as not to give any hints of their identity.

Des Filipi
Legal aid

Tenant rights explored in first legal aid article

In the weeks to come the Student Legal Aid Office will present a series of articles dealing with recurring legal problems brought by students to Student Legal Services. The plans for this column will cover the gamut of landlord-tenant relationships and court procedures, insurance and other topics (within reason and depending on information availability) that readers may want to have covered. Suggestions for topics by students should be sent to Student Legal Services, c/o Mustang Daily, ORC 236. It is the purpose of these articles only to educate and familiarize readers with the laws and problem areas that may confront them while attending the university. The articles are not designed to replace the services of a bonafide legal counsel nor are they intended to transform the reader into an attorney. Legal advice can only be given by a qualified, licensed attorney.

This first article will explore the basic rights of the tenant and his frequent problems. One of the first things a renter will do is agree to either an oral or written lease. The lease or agreement signifies interest in the reality.

Leases for a year or more must be written agreements signed by the landlord. Oral agreements for one year or more are invalid in a court of law. The written lease is not in effect until it is in the possession of the tenant. Description of the property and all parties involved in the rental must be identified in the written agreement.

If not stated within the lease, the term of occupancy is presumed to be at least one year. Any other sort of rental (local, motel or guest room) is presumed to be made for the time specified in the rental agreement (daily, weekly or monthly.)

An oral agreement is less binding than a written agreement and the tenant is not subjected to written rules and conditions. This facilitates the termination of the tenancy. The disadvantages of the oral agreement is the uncertainty of both the length of tenancy and conditions of the agreement.

Life explored . . .

(continued from page 1)

Cal Poly professor of English and Friend of Williams for 12 years.

Williams currently is poet in residence and director of Fine Arts and Creative Writing at the University of Arkansas.

Williams has recently written his fourth book of poems, titled "Halfway to Hoxie." He has also written critical books on other poets' works and translated the works of the Chilean poet Nunoa Payac.

"I've always felt compelled to write. I get a bigger kick out of writing poetry than I do anything else. I also enjoy translating poetry. Of course, I like every type of literary work I do, or I wouldn't do it," the poet said.

Williams currently is on tour, speaking to various colleges and universities in the country.
Aqua polioists dunked by Fresno’s Bulldogs

The Mustang women’s volleyball team had another bad time last weekend when they were dumped by both UC Irvine and Cal State Long Beach. Coach Ann Windolph said the team was nervous for the Friday night match at Irvine, losing 15-13 and 10-12. The two out of three match followed an emerging pattern. The Aztecs, when they lose, are beaten badly in the first game and come back in the second, but not enough to even the match.

The match at Long Beach the following morning showed a slight, but not significant, improvement. The Mustangs went down 8-16 and 11-15.

Apparently looking past Fresno State to the CCAA Championship tournament this weekend, the Cal Poly water polo team was dumped last Saturday by the Bulldogs, 18-8.

“We weren’t ready to play Fresno,” Mustang coach Dick Anderson said. “We just didn’t prepare ourselves mentally to play and simply overlooked them.”

Anderson said his team will be ready tomorrow, however, when the annual CCAA tournament goes under way at Cal Poly Pomona. The round-robin tournament will continue through Saturday.

“Physically we’re ready for the tournament,” he noted that the players seem to be mentally prepared also.” Anderson said: “A few guys have even gotten into fights during practice, which shows they’re anxious.”

Tomorrow the Mustangs will battle Cal State Northridge at 11 a.m. and UC Riverside at 5 p.m. Saturday the team will face LA State in the morning and unbeaten Cal Poly Pomona in the afternoon.

The Mustangs enter the tournament with a 1-4 record in CCAA pay, with their losses to Northridge and LA State being by just one point. The team’s only win came against last place Riverside and their most lopsided loss was to Pomona, the conference leaders.

Announcements

FOR SALE

FOR SALE

FOR SALE

FOR SALE

FOR SALE

Announcements

Cover image: Ad for a Mustang Classifieds advertisement.