Art: blend of abstract and real

by MOLLIE STEWART

The paintings and drawings of Southern California artist Harrison Storms will continue on display in the Galerie of the University Union until Dec. 6. The free exhibit, which is being sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee of Cal Poly, is open to the public.

The artist works primarily in pencil, charcoal and styrofoam and enjoys the challenge posed by a square format. His work takes the form of a series or sequence of drawings, each successive drawing being a direct outgrowth of the previous one. His theme is an exploration of the dichotomy of that which appears to be and that which perhaps is not.

Storms describes his paintings as being "like little stories or adventures. They allow me to go wherever I want, whenever I want, independently on a sort of fantasy." The artist's current work is discussed on page 31

Zoning amended for dining halls

City allows non-residents use of cafeteria facilities

by KUEYKARMA

An amendment to the city's zoning ordinance which would allow student dining facilities to serve non-residents was unanimously approved by the San Luis Obispo City Council on Monday night.

Even though the amendment passed, the housing complexities must apply to the City Planning Commission for use permits and meet the criteria set by the council.

Confrontation ends in firing of professor

A young sociology professor, embroiled recently in a textbook selection controversy, has been fired on the recommendation of the tenured faculty and head of his department.

Final disposition of the case of Bradford Smith, assistant professor in the Social Sciences Department, lies with President Robert E. Kennedy.

Dean Carroll R. McKibben of the School of Business and Social Sciences has approved the recommendation that the present academic year be Smith's last, passed by four out of the five tenured Social Science faculty members and department head Mahmud Hariri.

According to administrative sources, Kennedy rarely overturns the combined recommendations of the tenured faculty, department head and school dean.

Smith claims the firing is political in nature and the result of his efforts to change a rule at Cal Poly requiring department head approval on textbook regulations.

Hariri has refused several times in the past to approve some of Smith's next choices. Hariri has proposed to the Academic Senate that it prepare a plan to order texts at off-campus book stores until the rule is changed.

Hariri emphasized the vote on Smith was five to one for non-reeappointment. Beyond that, he says, nothing can be said at this time, due to issues of personal confidentiality.

Robert Strong, city planning director said, "By no means will the use permit automatically be given, the places must pass the criteria." The housing complexes such as Stanner Glen and Tropicana Village which apply for the use permit will have their request evaluated by nine criteria. First, is the student housing facility located in an area where expanded dining facilities would adversely affect the surrounding neighborhood?

Would the dining facility have sufficient on-site parking to accommodate an increase in usage by non-residents? Would non-residents use of the dining facility create an excessive amount of traffic on nearby local streets?

Is the dining facility sufficient in size to accommodate the specified number of patrons?

Should administration for non-resident patrons be limited perhaps to any of the local public?

And should the use permit limit non-resident patronage to weekends in some cases?

Would advertising for non-resident patrons be limited to ticket holders only? (Other than those for special events)

And lastly, should a time limit be imposed for review subsequent to the approval of the city to reevaluate the operation?

Committee Chairman T. E. Gurley said, "This passage is still a blank check, it will not allow general patronage but will allow students and senior citizens to obtain nourishment at any time of the day/night/weekend/weektimes or on weekends in some cases."

It was also mentioned during the public hearing that sales tax would be collected from the diners to comply with state law.

As the American Indian Movement approaches its bicentennial in 1976, many Americans take pride in the deeds and accomplishments of their ancestors over the last two hundred years. However, one group of Americans does not feel these events are complete reversal of Indian problems. But, the Indian tribes

The American Indian Movement has taken a stand regarding the bicentennial. It has warned the federal government that the last 200 years and a half of Indian history will not be like the last 200 years and a half of American policy must be said. Dennis Banks, co-founder and executive director of AIM.

Banks, sponsored by the student American Indian Organisation on campus, spoke to a capacity crowd in Chaminade auditorium Monday night. His presentation was the first in a series presented by the 1976-78 Speaker's Convocation Committee.

"Violence is deplorable in any situation. We do not advocate a violent course of action to our problems. But, the Indian prisoners must be delivered from their oppression," said Banks.

Banks and other Indian leaders attempted to deliver the opposed members of their race in the South Dakota case in February of 1974. The group occupied the reservation for 71 days until they were arrested and charged with 10 federal crimes.

"I was charged with illegal federal crimes. I can tell you more easily what crimes were not charged against me than what were. The three crimes I was not charged with were rape, treason and murder," said Banks.

The crimes included five counts of conspiracy, arson, burglary and assault of federal officers. Banks and his companions were acquitted after an eight and a half month trial. According to Banks, Federal Judge Fred Frey dismissed the charges, finding the government guilty of misconduct.

"An interesting incident occurred on Jan. 6, 1974, the first day of the trial. Banks does not know whether he is 42 years old or 37 years old. He believes he was born in 1937, but through the years, his birth certificate became defaced and his date of birth appears to be 1932."

"The first witness of the trial was me," said Banks. Banks, co-founder of the American Indian Movement discusses sovereignty at press conference before his Cal Poly appearance.

Disciplinary group to get final vote...

Other members would include the chairman of the ASI Legal Aid Committee; the ASI President or his designee; the ASI Vice-President or his replacement; three to five members from the student body at large and the coordinator of Student Discipline.

The committee would restate the second part of the student discipline process by including what was deleted in an executive order by the Chancellor. The order was No. 148.

Both the committee and Coaso will make recommendations to University President Robert E. Kennedy—who will remain as the final authority in discipline matters.

ASI President Scott Plotkin will give a report on the situation of the possible effects of AB 118. The law provides for state funding of instructionally related activities for all of the 19 campuses of the California State University and Colleges.

Cal Poly's base allotment—as for the 18 other campuses—is $182,720. In addition this campus will receive at least 48 per cent, and possibly more, of $182,720.

Letters

Editor: The question I would like to pose is this: Is Cal Poly an academic institution or a social center? As far as I can see the administration would rather have the university labeled as a social center.

face and heads. Perhaps Nermans believe that people involved in creative actions are very ugly, freakish and cold.

Karen Kalil, Liberal Studies major, commented on these drawings, "I find the drawings very sensitive... I really like the medium it's (Executive Suite) done in. A lot of it I don't understand but the general impact, the intellectual impact is good," said Diana Baum, Biology major.

"The Dancers" portrays the movement reality and the illusion of the concept. These drawings are also created with charcoal and shading.

The final collection is entitled "John's Canyon". The focus is turned inward. Memories, the subconscious and the self are examined. This group of paintings were done with acrylic. Only one of these had a soothing, appealing quality but the others were very noisy and confusing.

The overall impression left me with a confused feeling. The drawings were supposedly in sequence but there were no distinctions between the individual drawings in each group.

Wounded Knee occurred because of discrimination of the American Indians and the misunderstandings by the Department of Interior. Many Indian leaders and tribal chiefs held a conference to discuss the wrong doings against their people.

"I remember clearly that day when the chiefs of the Sioux, Shawnee and many other tribes came together to meet and hear each other's solutions," said Banks. "I also remember two of the Sioux tribe addressed the group.

"The chief had already said he would not smoke his peace pipe until there was peace on the reservations. He called for unity within the group and said, 'We cannot go another day. These women have already suffered too much.'

"One by one, the peace pipes were laid down and all the chiefs decided they must go to Wounded Knee," Banks said.

Many other races gave their support at Wounded Knee. Banks said Chicanos, whites and Asian-Americans offered a helping hand. The blacks also went to Wounded Knee, including Angela Davis, Dick Gregory and Rev. Ralph Abernathy.

"They all heard the cry of these two Indian women," Banks said. The American Indian Movement, which was formed in 1968 in St. Paul, Minn., has launched a campaign to support Indian self-determination and its Three Point Program. The federal government has been presented with the program and AIM is awaiting a decision on the matter.

The three points of the program are:

—The removal of the Bureau of Indian Affairs from the Department of Interior.
—The American Indian Movement, which was formed in 1963 in Bt. Paul, Minn., has launched a campaign to support Indian self-determination and its Three Point Program. The federal government has been presented with the program and AIM is awaiting a decision on the matter.

Banks said: "The government has to recognise that each tribe has entered into agreement and signed the treaties in good faith. They cannot ignore the treaties, they have been in the past.

They must realize there is a quest for sovereignty among the Indian people.

"Many Americans do not know how it feels to be deprived of constitutional rights, to be lied to and oppressed. When the country called for the impeachment of President Nixon, I could see one thing, I said to myself, "Now they know how it feels to be denied the truth," he said. The articulate spokesman for the American Indians had completely captured his audience with his running words. He concluded his presentation with an emotional appeal, which prompted a standing ovation.

Poloists are honored

Four members of the Cal Poly polo team have been named to the all-CCAA team, selected by the conference coaches. Senior Craig Lippitt was the only Mustang to be named to the first team, while juniors John Reid and Kenny Wolfe and sophomore Ed Bull were picked for second team honors.

Conference champions Cal Poly Pomona placed three players on the second seven-man team, with LA State landing four, Cal State Nor-bridge two and LC Riverside one.

Lippitt was the outstanding player on the Mustangs this fall after being named CCAA's top player in the previous year. He led the team's leader and led the team in scoring throughout the season.

Cowboys get first place at Arizona

The Cal Poly men's rodeo team won their fourth straight victory this season in an intercollegiate rodeo at Tucson, Arizona last weekend. The team rode in top honors in overall team competition with Central Arizona College placing second and Marred College coming in third.

Bruce "Pinky" Hunt brought home a new saddle for being the top point earner in the men's all-around division. Hunt gained most of his points by winning the bull dancing event and placing third in the calf roping.

Saddle bronc riding was dominated by the Cal Poly men with top honors going to the event followed by teammates John McDonald and Jim Prater; McDonald was also third in the all-around division and tied for second on the bull riding.

Third place in the bareback bronc riding went to Lou Buelanari and Dann Spear, competing as an individual, was second in calf roping.

The women's rodeo team placed third in overall team competition. Coeds from Arizona State University won the team competition with the University of Arizona placing second and Cal Poly coming in third.

The rodeo, hosted by the University of Arizona, was held at Old Tucson, a movie set 10 miles from the city of Tucson. Arizona State appeared as a team advisor, this was the last rodeo for the Cal Poly quarter. The next rodeo will be Feb. 15-16 at Tampa, Arizona.

Equestrians third at Cal Poly show

The horse show team came in third last Sunday in the first intercollegiate horse show of the season held at the horse show arena here.

Fresno State's equestrians came in first with the College of the Sequoias team of Visalia taking second and LC Riverside one.

The Poly squad came from behind in the first game against Fullerton on the serving effort of Laurie Leake, who scored 13 straight service points. Coach Ann Windolph described the winning serves as twisting and short. Fullerton netters, accustomed to hard, fast serves, had trouble coping up the ball and passing it to the setters.

Leake's efforts were to no avail, however, as the Mustangs got the next two games split away, 11-15 and 9-15.

Volleyballers lose last two road contests

The Cal Poly women's volleyball team lost its last two road games of the season last weekend. It was dumped by both Whitter College and Cal State Fullerton.

In a close match with Whitter, the Mustang netters won the first game in the best of three, 15-9, but Whitter recovered to steal the match, 15-16 and 15-11.

In the series with Fullerton the next morning, the Mustangs followed the same pattern, winning the first game and dropping the next two.
