Talented classical guitarist featured in concert Friday

Classical guitarist Laurindo Almeida and his wife, lyric soprano Deitra Eamon will perform in concert with the Cal Poly Chamber Orchestra on Friday, Nov. 11, at 8:15 in the Cal Poly Theatre.

Born in Brazil, a classical music native, received his earliest musical training from his mother, a concert pianist. He came to Hollywood having established himself as one of Brazil’s foremost musicians. The artist turns his talent to film scoring and performing as a soloist with Elizabeth Washin.

Jazz received Almeida’s attention and he launched a new career with Stan Kenton’s innovative orchestra. Since leaving Kenton, Almeida has written and composed. Almeida has received over 200 compositions to his credit. He introduced bossa nova to United States, and Europe, in 1961 was called that and in 1963 he was awarded the sixth and seventh Grammies for his solo and orchaeaiajs jazz version of “Viva Bossa Nova.” He comes to Cal Poly after completing a world tour as soloist with the Modern Jazz Quartet.

Deitra Eamon, Almeida’s wife of four years, will also be featured at the concert. A native of California, she has appeared as soloist with the Royal Command Opera. Under the direction of Clifton Story, the orchestra executes Haydn’s Symphony No. 17, Rachmaninoff’s No. 3 sonata and eight ball by Villa Lobos and Handel’s Water Music.

The concert is sponsored by, the Music Dept and School of Communicative Arts and Humanities. Almeida was brought both in the University Union. Student tickets are $1.50 and general admission $2.50.

Child minister turned actor speaks tonight

Marjoe Gortner, noted for his role as Jesus Christ and as a member of the Bergogia, is officiating his first wedding at five while leading an end of the world concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the Cal Poly auditorium.

Gortner was an amiable minister who turned actor over the years. As a boy minister Marjoe supported his family by selling door to door the “shroud of the magusis.”

Leadership awards were presented to two Cal Poly ROTC cadets, Edward E. Reed and William Kolster, at the 1974 Fort Lewis ROTC Leadership Camp held June 6 to July 30.

Reed, chosen the outstanding cadet of the camp, received the Army and Region Commanders Award. He also received the Army ROTC Leadership Award, based on military proficiency and leadership qualities, for which he will be presented a 6000 Savings Bond by General Frederick C. Wayland, U.S. Army Chief of Staff, in Washington, D.C. on Dec. 12.

Reed is a senior, is a business major with his concentration in accounting. He served in Viet Nam during 1969-70 and joined ROTC when he transferred to Cal Poly last year. As a veteran, he is not obligated to serve active duty after graduation, but he has chosen to serve in some branch of the Army. Reed is president of the Army ROTC Corps and Blade, the honor society for advanced cadets.

Kolster, an aeronautical engineering major, received the 4th Annual Leadership Award for being the No. 1 cadet of Company E, joining ROTC during his Freshman year in 1971 because he wanted to learn how to fly.
Students ask questions on computer registration

Editor:

A strange, strange and new phenomenon occurred in our SPS 101 class tonight. Andreini. The class did a study on a problem relevant to students. The problem we undertook was to study the computer registration system. That all seems quite typical of a classroom situation, that is, when the students will study an assignment. This strange phenomenon we spoke of occurred after the study was complete. The students in the class began asking: is it possible to apply the knowledge one learns in class to the real world or real problems? The purpose of writing this letter is twofold. First, to make the student aware that there is an efficient and expedient way to solve the current registration problem on this campus. Secondly, to answer this class's question—can the voice of one person or even the voice of student body have any effect on changing or redefining our educational environment here at Cal Poly? It wasn't necessary in our class study to take an opinion poll to express the frustration felt on this campus concerning the present registration process. It can be seen on the faces of students as they walk out of the gym, not really believing they ended up with two basket weaving classes and a total of four units.

Instead, we concentrated on finding a more efficient system that would be fair and please the greatest number of students. Coincidentally, we found the administration had gone through the same toil. Our proposed solution was almost identical to theirs; we urge a complete computer-run system.

Over-crowding and over-enrollment are prevented by pre-registration, which would be a necessity with this system. It also is a more accurate way of dictating student desires concerning what classes they would like to have offered in advance. This point here is not to sell this wonderful package deal, for it is a fact, it has already been pur chased, so to speak, by the administration. However, this system will not be implemented until 1979.

Thank you.

Reader says

Vulin outlook seems shallow

Editor:

After reading Fred Vulin's latest attack, (this time on Edmund Brown), I was finally moved to protest his shoddy work. I am also disappointed in the News Express Daily for alloting space on a regular basis to his narrow-minded columns. He seems to be striving for the wit and clever irony that is the trademark of our favorite highbrow, bigname, newspaper columnist. Unfortunately, he is the product of a school brand of sarcasm only survived in irritating the reader.

I would like to suggest that Vulin discontinue his columns until he can manage a more mature viewpoint, and turn his attention to the reporting for the problems that we all face.

With the unifying assistance of my Student Personnel Chairman, Steven Everett, an excellent slate of candidates has been appointed to the complex academic and student committees. They serve us all as our voice in nearly every aspect of university governance.

With the assistance and input of the Student Affairs Council, we are working on a variety of individual projects that are designed to benefit a great number of students. They include increasing student input on student discipline procedures, legislation of alcohol, living conditions, consumption and property, and resolution of the TGIF controversy. We have our own Henry Kissinger, Kevin O'Connor, working night and day to coordinate the needs and desires of the fraternity, ASI and the city in the question of TGIs.

A SAC committee chairman, Dave Stewardson, is working to put the finishing touches on an off-campus housing coordinator. The coordinator is designed to help students with all of their housing problems.

We are also putting together our input in the matter of married student housing, the dorms, the home away from home and the long term 300 units at the corner of Grand and Black avenues.

Working with us in all of these areas is ASI Vice President Mike Hurstado. He is providing constructive assistance to other minorities and the growing number of women on campus.

One of the biggest projects with which I am wrestling is one that was by and large unexpected: the implementation of AB 3116, or the state funding of instructionally related activities. There are programs that receive total support from the state for which students receive unit credit or take a class closely related to their field. The program is to "dole out the money," and I would simply, President Kennedy and I, as student body president, and the student body referendum in late February to determine the level of the activity, to put simply, President Kennedy and I, or the ASI, will need to do this, because as usual, the state will never do it.

Communal gardens benefit community

Food drive will benefit needy families

A drive to collect canned food for needy families in the county will be conducted by MECHA, the Cal Poly Chico chapter organization, and the Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority from Nov. 22 to Nov. 29.

According to MECHA spokesman, many families in the county have been hit hard by high land prices and unemployment and are in desperate need of food. For the past four years MECHA has successfully conducted food drive in the county. The students will be picking up donations (canned foods, powdered milk, dried fruits, sugar, flour, bread, rice, and other worthwhile staples) in San Luis Obispo, Morro Bay, Arroyo Grande, Pismo Beach. Churches, community centers and residences who have not been contacted but would like to contribute to the MECHA food drive should contact Dr. David Sanchez during the week at the Cal Poly Ethnic Studies Department, 146-2827.

The first garden has already started on Hatchway St. with 11 gardeners. Each plot has been divided into four plots with two assistants. The gardens are maintained by each group.

The key to the program is other community involvement. This program will bring students, Housewives, Hardworkers, businessmen and children together in a worthwhile, educational and healthy community project.

In addition to saving money in food costs, the program provides a way to make new friends and to achieve a sense of accomplishment, while realizing a concern and appreciation for the environment. If this isn't reason enough to volunteer, then the opportunity to have good-tasting and nourishing food, organic if you wish, should provide the impetus to join.

Out of 3,800 people involved in a community gardens program in Council Bluffs, Iowa, only 19 failed to keep up their plots. This is a good indication of how well this type of project is accepted and appreciated.

Besides land and seeds, Shealy hopes for a donation of a roto-tiller small tractor. He doesn't see the ASI coming up with one because of the high cost.

Looking to the future, Shealy thinks that the chances of selling to a coin op raising poultry all depend on the response of the program as it now stands.

Staff comment:
Paternalistic position faces women's rights

I was glad to see that others objected to the Opusse article "Women on The Rise." Could it be that there are actually liberated men on this campus? Far out! I see hope at last for Mankind and Womankind that we may free ourselves of delimiting stereotypes and enjoy each other as whole human beings! I rejoice in the possibility that society is changing, becoming wiser.

As for the increase in women on campus, I welcome you all as my sisters. I hope we may all achieve our full potential academically, personally, and socially. I don't see you as my enemy, women are not a threat to each other when their identities do not revolve around their ability to "Catch a man."

It makes me sad to meet other women who have been brainwashed into believing that the friendship of another woman is far less valuable than that of a man. Women have a lot to gain in self-esteem when they learn to appreciate each other instead of competing with each other.

I also feel sad when I read articles that begin, "I'm not a woman's libber... I believe in equal pay for equal work, etc." because that is clearly an attempt to drown those women who have fought long and hard to bring the benefits of first-class citizenship to all of us. The woman who aren't afraid to stand up for our rights, who have been heaped with ridicule and pessimistic put-downs by the press and power and don't give a damn about the gender and respect... Small print understanding important in lease contract

The lease or written agreement may be written or typed on any type of paper and in any words provided the intentions of the agreement are clear. All of the agreements should be completely understood before signing. It is possible for the renter to change or insert certain conditions into the lease. The prospective tenant should know his rights to bargain with the landlord over the terms of the lease. Tenants should carefully read the common "small print" provisions of the lease.

The government recently undergone a number of changes of an Alcohol Abuse and Oral Health Program and improvements.

Health Council links students to services

The Cal Poly campus has recently undergone a number of student-oriented health service improvements. But the Student Health Service Council which has backed changes of an Alcohol Abuse Program, La Femme Clinic (oriented to women's problems), and Oral Health Program and building of the new Health Center has gone virtually unnoticed.

Satisfying the health needs of the student population at Cal Poly is a primary concern of the Health Council.

The council was established in 1971 on the recommendation of the Health Center staff. They realized the need for a council that would act as a communication link between the university community and student health services. Council membership includes the Director of Health Services, Dean of Students, Foundation Executive Director, one faculty member, one Health Center staff member, one representative of the Academic Council and 19 student representatives.

Student council members are nominated by a school or group at Cal Poly early in Fall quarter.

4. Would the university resist attempts by ASI or the Cal Poly Student Council to define what being a woman means, in my own terms, instead of taking the definition handed down for serious discussion of the matter. If Pol is to remain possible in the space designated as the sole state university prohibiting liquor on campus, the administration must be forced to make some concessions.

Bring Back Memories?

by Max Boverl

Remember Richie Havens (top left) in the Fall of 1970? Or is making it a little easier, how about Lydia Price of Cold Blood fame (top right) back in 1971.

And if your memory still fails you, let us move on one more year. This time there are two chances for recollection. Both Elvin Bishop (bottom left) and Jennifer (bottom right), who was touring with John Stewart at the time, managed to draw big crowds at the men's gym in 1972.

The year 1971 brought for share of enjoyable concerts as well, with names such as the Beach Boys, John Fahey and I'll leave the rest for you to remember.

can't just lay everything in your lap. Moving on to 1974, and this is an easy one, even for you freshman, we have who? You guessed it, Arlo Guthrie, who appeared here last month in one of the best concerts to reach Cal Poly in a long time.

If you could only guess one out of five, you're either new to Cal Poly or a real dead head. And two out of five is still nothing to be pleased. Now, three or four out of five correct recollections shows that you're really cooking.

If you guessed five out of five, you are in a sad shape as I am you should have graduated last year.
Outside it looks like a bowling alley. But indoors it is a gym for every season.

But there was one provision: the cost would not exceed $8.5 million.

And the students are taking full advantage of the facilities of the only university-owned complex capable of having indoor football games.

The Dome is used 18 hours a day. Two years ago, students participated in 12,975 hours of intramural activities which included touch football, tennis, soccer, volleyball, basketball and track and field.

High schools too are regular renters of the stadium. Some 35 high school games were played this season and a crowd of 8,000 for double-headers has not been uncommon.

During the football game Saturday night, any noise the 6,600 fans made seemed to be lost in the huge facility. The scoreboard, paid for by a Pocatello bank, seemed too small to be seen without squinting.

On top of the scoreboard is a message board—sort of like one of those electric ones on a Southern California freeway.

For field goals and PATs, nets are hung behind the goal posts on either end to avoid footballs ramming into the concrete walls.

"Somebody still cares about quality."

Judging from the title, one might have expected the 10th annual Powderpuff Bowl to be all the sentiment of a housewarming contest with featherdusters.

Instead, powderpuff fans saw a hardfisting football game Tuesday night in Mustang Stadium. The veteran Muckamucks with a staunch defense methodically wore down the Rookies for a 18-0 win. It was the fitting finale to an underwhelming season for the Muckamucks, who had handed the Rookies their only other loss earlier in the season.

Led by tall rangy defensive end Trudy Knupper, the Muckamuck defense had the situation under control from the opening kick. The Rookie offense could never mount a rushing attack and its passing game began to sag as the event went on.

The Rookie shotgun offense was held to minus 12 yards rushing, 17 of them in the first half.

Quarterback Kathy Bierman, hitting her excellent 153 yards, 117 of them in the first half.

The Rookies defense stifled considerably in the second half, with a 20-yard touchdown on a reverse play. Fertitta's PAT pass.

The game tonight culminates a nine-game season for the final four. Admission to the game being totally.
