Alumni coordinator appointed Thursday

The Public Affairs Office announced Thursday the appointment of the new Cal Poly Coordinator of Alumni Services. Pres. Kennedy is expected to make the announcement in the Cal Poly Today alumni magazine for Poly Royal, according to Lachlan Mac-Royal, director of public affairs.

Steven Riddell, a 1960 Cal Poly graduate in journalism, will be responsible for coordinating the overall development and maintenance of programs and activities for all former students, including the Cal Poly Alumni Association. He will assume the position at 4 p.m. April 8.

Riddell served as assistant-in-chief of the Mustang Daily during 1967-68 besides working as a part-time reporter for the Telegram Time. He is currently working for KFPR FM in Sacramento in promotions, sales and news. He has worked there for two years. After graduation in 1966, Riddell was an assistant news director and sports director for KATY AM-FM in San Luis Obispo. He then served as director of public relations of Red Ro, a development organization in Sacramento.

During his service in the Army from June 1970 to Feb. 1972, Riddell was a liaison officer for the commanding general at Ft. Sill, Okla. and a public relations officer at Ft. Sill, Okla. and a public relations officer.

SAC motion stands

After a long-winded and often heated debate, the Student Affairs Council narrowly defeated a motion to expunge from official records a previous decision by SAC to halt political endorsements in the Mustang Daily. Mike Murdy, of the School of Communicative Arts and Humanities introduced the motion to expunge SAC's Feb. 12 decision to halt endorsements. He said the legal opinion delivered by the Chancellor's Office, which claimed Mustang Daily does have the right to endorse candidates in printed columns and letters to the editor, made it imperative that SAC reverse its decision from the records.

Murdy argued that this should be expunged from the records because, in light of the Chancellor's decision, the paper did not violate Title V. Murdy and SAC have it is Mustang Daily to expunge the motion. But Murdy's motion failed by a 27-1 vote with five members abstaining.

John Ronca, of the School of Business and Social Sciences, led the fight against expungement of the motion be authored. "I'm totally against the motion to expunge," he said, "a 27-1 vote by this body, knowing full well what they were doing, is enough to let it stand on the records."

The significance of not expunging the motion is minimal, according to SAC parliamentarian Roland Yeas.

The specific motion called for by the Ronca motion--for Mari or Ninkawa to issue a memoran-

Talcott raps tax bill

Congress is mortgaging the future of today's college students, Congressman Dan Talcott said at a Wednesday night meeting.

In a question-and-answer session in Malva de la Mora's American Government class, the Congressman from the District 16 (which includes San Luis Obispo) described the recent $88 billion tax cut measure as a "welfare bill.

Talcott, a Republican serving his seventh term in Congress, said the ultimate cost of the bill would be $90 billion. According to Talcott, the interest and inflation on the bill would be paid, not by the generation who voted on the bill, but by the children of future people.

The Republican returned to the theme and said, "It's bad now and it's extraordinarily bad for the future." The Congressman then received laughter from isolated members of the class when he said:

"Young people ought to be standing up and rebelling about what Congress is doing. The Congress is mortgaging away the future.

"If you believe everything you read in the Telegram Tribune: he once accused the newspaper of partly financing his voting record."

The other time the Congressman mentioned the newspaper was when he interrupted the woman and said:

"If you believe everything you read in the T'T—then you're in for a surprise."

He continued about further aid to South Viet Nam. Talcott said he was opposed to any more military aid to that country but added he would vote for what he called "humanitarian aid."

"Talcott, who is on an Easter recess from Washington, spent part of the evening outlining the questions a Congressman must ask himself before voting on a foreign aid bill."

He said the students asked about whether the United States should give aid to communist countries and what kind of aid should be given.

The discussion of foreign aid eventually led to the topic of the Central Intelligence Agency and recent allegations about it. Secretary in its operations and the value of the CIA operations were questioned by many students. Talcott admitted the agency was not perfect, but defended its secrecy.

Asked if secrecy should extend to the point where Americans know how much the CIA is spending each year, Talcott responded, "Do we tell them (the enemy) how much we're spending against them?"

One student wanted to know how a correction of the budget was going to take place if the people do not know how their tax dollars are spent.

One of four regional Whips for the Republican Party, Talcott added, "You can't have a $100 billion deficit and then give more back."

Talcott said the burden now would fall on the middle-class American.

He claimed the money that will be given back to Americans in the next few months would not go to the majority of people who pay most of the taxes—the middle class.

Talcott feels the money given to people on Social Security (an immediate check of $50) will be spent in a way that will not spur the economy. The congressman who voted "no" on the final package, said he supported the part of the bill, which called for an immediate halt of the oil depletions allowance for large oil companies and a gradual reduction for the smaller ones.

Presidents Ford signed the tax bill Saturday.

On two occasions he criticized the Telegram Tribune: he once accused the newspaper of partly financing his voting record.

Talcott replied certain members of Congress do know the actual budget figures and the CIA's money is distributed through the budget consumed behind miscellaneous items.

He also said his voting record has not changed since he was named as one of the members of the "Dirty Dozen"—a list by one environmental group and told the class, "I'll match my credentials anybody in this class or outside of it."

Riddell appointed as coordinator

As a student at Cal Poly, Riddell received the Outstanding Journalism Award for editorial work in 1968. He also received two Reader's Digest D.C. officials in 1968 and 1969.

Riddell was one of 80 candidates who applied for the position. Applications for the job were accepted in June 1974, but the deadline was extended from July 1 to Dec. 13. MacDonald said that most of the candidates were graduates of Cal Poly.

"It's my understanding that Kennedy has talked with Riddell and Riddell has accepted," Van Harreveld said.

As the new coordinator of alumni affairs, Riddell will start off in the salary range of $13,000 to $15,004.

"Riddell is an outstanding individual," MacDonald said. "We are very fortunate as an institution to have so many alumni in this area (communications)," he said.

Riddell is married and has a son.

Mounts to take health position

Dr. Billy Mounts, director of health services at Cal Poly, will begin a one-year term as president of the San Luis Obispo County Medical Society on Jan. 1, 1978.

The society is a democratic organization of physicians whose main goals are "to promote the art and science of medicine and to protect the public health," Dr. Mounts said.

The society also joins with the California Medical Association (CMA) and the American Medical Association (AMA) in workshops to keep members informed of changes in all areas of health care, Dr. Mounts explained.

A graduate of George Mason University, Dr. Mounts has been a member of the society since 1962. He has served two terms as secretary and is presently active as program director for the Membership and Program Committee of the society.

Dr. Mounts was recently appointed an alternate delegate to the C.M.A.

As director of health services, Dr. Mounts is coordinator of activities for the 14 nurses and the 61 doctors and volunteers at the center. He also administers health care to patients at the center.

As Dr. Mounts has been an active member of the society since 1962, he hopes his term as president will interface with his job at the Health Center in any way.

During his years in the society, Dr. Mounts has seen progress in areas of health care quality and the educated membership of the members. As president he plans to keep up with this progress in ways most profitable to the patients, he said.

"There is a changing face of medicine," Dr. Mounts said. "I plan to keep abreast of those changes and communicate them to my colleagues," he added.

Movie review

‘Alice’ lives with Burstyn at Obispo

by CONNIE PITTS

Take a recently widowed 55-year-old woman, an obvious 11-year-old, a romantic rancher, a hard core waitress; and you’ve got a realistic, touching movie called ‘Alice Doesn’t Live Here Anymore,’ now showing at the Obispo Theatre.

Ellen Burstyn (acknowledged for her performance in last year’s The Exorcist) plays Alice, the heroine whose husband dies, leaving her with a precocious young son and her dreams of becoming a singer.

Alice and her son pack up and head for Monterey, stopping over in various Arizona towns on the way. They end up in Tucson, where Alice finds a job, not singing, but slinging hash in a road cafe.

Of course, the story has a hero (Kris Kristofferson), a rancher, who meets Alice in the cafe and bridges the lonely gap in her life. They have their difficulties (not helped by the son Tommy), but true love wins out in the end and Alice discovers life is much better than the though possible.

Ms. Burstyn has a knack for being really human. You cry with her, you laugh with her, and you even get angry with her. She is excellent as a frustrated woman and mother, who eventually comes to terms with her ideals.

Another well-acted performance was by Diane Ladd, Ms. Ladd is convincing as the hard-ass-tails waitress, who has a soft heart and a sharp tongue.

The film is very human and enjoyable though, at times, the dialogue is difficult to follow and understand. Also, pants were druggy, even though the movie was average in length (90 minutes). But, the important points is the movie’s quality for being truthful and showing life in its sad, happy and funny moments.
